And we're uncommon friends.

And when I look at Mrs. J.;
Who's old, and fat, and red,
"Thank heaven she jilted me," I say;
"And married Jones instead!"
And thus a happiness serene
For sorrow past atones;
To rescue me from Ellen Green
Was truly kind of Jones!

Fashion Notes.

Shepherdess-shaped hats will be fashionable at the seaside. They require little trimming, the more rustic and "chipshaded" the look the better.

Mohair suits are quite fashionable, gray being the most popular color. They make up very handsomely, and will be found durable and substantial.

Long trains are coming in again for summer dresses intended for evening wear. They are gracefully looped at the sides and back by means of a long sash.

Parisian bonnets are all made of the crownless shape, and are literally one mass of flowers. No strings are used, but a fall of lace on either side and at the back.

The double-breasted English walking-jacket will continue in fashion until warm weather fairly sets in. It is one of the most stylish wraps introduced for many years.

All puffs, rolls and huge chignons are ruled out. The hair is now worn parted in the centre, drawn smoothly from the face, and braided neatly to the back of the head.

Taffeta silks are popular for summer wear, as they are so much lighther than gros grain. They are very glossy, and make up handsomely, with little if any elaborate trimmings.

Bless the Babies.

A house full of children composes as powerful a group of motives as ever moved a heart or hand, and the secret of many a struggle and triumph in the word's battle, may be found throned in the mother's lap at home, or done up in a little bundle of white flannel. A nation's hope, before now, has been found in a basket of bulrushes. Get ready to be afraid of the man that children are afraid of, and be sure that he who hates them is not himself worth loving.

The Arrival of Vasquez.

Vasquez in charge of Sheriff Rowland of Los Angeles, Deputy Sheriff Johnston of the same county, and Mr. Mitchell who captured Vasquez' horse last year arrived on the Senator at an early hour this morning, and was safely ensconced in the City Prison. During the forenoon he went under guard to the Elite Studio of Messrs. Bradley & Rulofson and was photographed by those splendid artists, who have his pictures on sale.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonesin, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

Opposed to Cremation.

Max Adeler says: "I hardly think, upon the whole, that I am in favor of cremation. The process seems to me to be so frightfully wasteful. At the same time, I am ready to admit that the dead might be used much more profitably than they are now. If a man must be buried, let him be planted where he will make something grow. I remember that Casselbenny, of Vineland, New Jersey, once laid his grandmother under his grape vine, and by carefully watering her twice a day, he secured a crop of fifteen bushels of Black Hamburgs. The subject came up in the agricultural society subsequently, and there was a question whether a grandmother was the only female relative that could be efficaciously used, and whether it should be a paternal or maternal grandmother. Casselbenny explained that he had known a maiden aunt or a second cousin to do equally well, and he had a step-father among the roots of his mammoth gooseberry bush, with every prospect of superb corp. And there is the skeleton. The Esquimaux make skates out of the collar-bones of their departed friends, and I remember that Hufnagle of Mauch Chunk, having lost his leg by a railroad accident, took out the bone and had it made up into a clarionet, with which he used to go around serenading a woman who refused to love him. He always played in a minor key. and they say, up at Mauch Chunk, that he whistled the most heart-rending music out of that bone. When old Mackintosh of Darby died, his widow had his framework taken out and she worked the whole of it up into knife-handles and trousers buttons, which she gave to her second husband when they were married. The hottest kind of water never hurt those knife-handles, and the suspenders that wouldn't stay buttoned or those kind of buttons were admitted to be just no suspender at all. But I admit there is something disagreeable about this form of utilization, and therefore I rather incline to favor the plan of turning inanimate remains into illuminating gas by consuming them in a retort. This, I understand, is practicable, and it would be, I should think, inexpressibly consoling to a man to sit and read the paper comfortably every evening by the light of his deceased uncle, and to have the satisfaction of knowing that the said relative had not been run through a metre at so much a thousand feet. It would be beautiful to illuminate the parlor with a departed hired girl, or to turn off your half-brother before going to bed. And think what splendid gas a Congressman would make! We might have a law appropriating dead Congressmen to the light-house board, for use on the coast. This class of persons then would have the consolation of knowing that they would be much more useful after death than they are during life.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend. "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their oysters."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a T."
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

OUR BROADWAY.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern, or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. F. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance) with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

A Charming Paper.

The Call seems determined to make itself as great a nuisance as the Chronicle. John McCullough having gone East and achieved a great triumph the Call is at infinite pains to discover one ill-natured paragraph concerning him, in the Eastern press. It succeeds in finding it and republishes it. Miss Eliza O'Connor, an admirable actress and charming woman, comes here to commence an engagement at Maguire's New Theatre, and the Call welcomes the fair artiste in this wise: It hunts up a highly-colored account of her gaining a divorce from her husband, and drags her domestic life before the public. It also accuses her of being a virago. We wish she were, for then would she proceed with a cowhide to the office of the Morning Call and teach the proprietors, editors and critics of that paper, that they have to deal with her only as an artiste, and that whether she be wife or virgin, divorced or widow, good-tempered or ill-tempered, they have no right to comment on the fact. The newspapers of San Francisco are becoming so low and degraded that if they were all wiped out of existence the moral tone of the community could not fail to be improved.

A Fair Representation.

"Somebody" writes to the Virginia City Foot-Light, as follows:

EDITOR FOOT-LIGHT: The thickness of some men's skulls is amazing. It is the solid foundation of the modern "big-head." For stupidity and willful wont'understanditiveness the article in last Wednesday evening's Chronicle, about Free Love, is unequaled. Mrs. Woodhull iterates and reiterates that by free love she does not mean FREE LUST. But men, whose brains are not in their heads, persist in misunderstanding her meaning. She is trying to make such men act like rational beings—not like male hogs—but they can't see it. She wants to elevate woman above absolute pecuniary dependence on man. She wants to make marriage mean to her something more than daily bread, corn home, but these boors (oars) won't understand her.

SOMEBODY.

The vile have everything to fear from the denunciations of Mrs. Woodhull, the virtuous nothing. She only says let love be the law of your lives, and let no law be substituted for love.

A Pleasant Woman.

An Indian paper says:

Tiger literature has a curious addition made to it in the shape of a story from Vizagaptam. A man and his wife were out in a forest when a tiger appeared and seized the man. "His wife, hearing him cry, ran up to the tiger, threw herself on his back, and yelled vociferously." Naturally the animal "was frightened," as the husband has always been when she has gone through the like performance upon him self.

A woman who is in the habit of throwing herself on her husband's back and yelling vociferously, may be a good wife to frighten tigers with, but must be unpleasant to live with.

Well, What of It?

The "independent" Call refers to the Post as "the little Post (Senator Jones' property)." Isn't Senator Jones as honorable, independent and worthy a man as Mister Pickering? We would rather see the ideas of Mr. Jones in print, than Mr. Pickering's.

JOHN McCULLOUGH'S HAMLET IN NEW YORK.

As we hinted would probably be the case, New York, enamored of the dyspeptic heart-broken Hamlet to whom they have become accustomed, does not, will not accept the live Hamlet of John McCullough. There is not enough poetry about it for sooth. John does not appeal to the sentimental readers of Shakspeare; he doesn't roll his eyes about and gasp like a dying duck in a thunderstorm; He represents Hamlet as a rather irresolute, slightly romantic, but withal healthy young Prince, and New York will not have it. Not that the papers have been severe on the Hamlet presented by John McCullough. They have been simply unappreciative. The World says: It belongs to the traditional school of Hamlet. It is a clever, forceful, melodramatic enactment. We have been taught at this very theatre to expect a great deal more, and all the world, except that part of it which finds seats in the gallery, has come to look upon Hamlet as a part that must be played not only intelligently but intellectually. Mr. McCullough is entitled in this role to the distinction of playing it intelligently, but not intellectually. It is doubtful if any actor with this one's strong objective force and heroic tendency can play Hamlet well. Such a player invariably tears the delicate organic texture of the part. Hamlet is a personage whose imagination governs his will. He is a poet at the mercy of his own vagaries, not an orator nor a champion. A reflective, irresolute, introspective prince, and not apt to act and speak in the melodramatic manner which was given to him last night.

The Times thinks, while the performance "denoted thought, study and a thorough familiarity with the stage, it did not take the poetry and grace of the character Shakspeare drew." The Sun is evidently fair and criticises as well as it knows how. It says: He gave a careful, scholarly, clear and consistent representation of the character. Mr. McCullough is apparently a man of great directness of purpose, of sturdy, manly vigor, seeing clearly his point, and going to it with straightforward simplicity and earnestness. These are not the characteristics that are most akin to those of Shakspeare's Hamlet, and the actor who relies mainly upon them in his presentation of the complex, morbid and brooding Dane may indeed give us an admirably clear and consistent idea of what he conceives Hamlet to have been, but he will certainly fail to give us the Hamlet of the imagination. And this, it seems to us, is what Mr. McCullough's representation results in. It has many and striking points of excellence, but it is too healthy and robust, and it lacks the introspection, the morbidness, and the irresolution that belong to the character. To many, doubtless, these considerations will not be an objection, or if it is one it will be overbalanced by the fact that Mr. McCullough makes clear what in other actors is often obscure. In this he has the aid of a voice of beautiful quality, capable of much tenderness and expression. His elocution is distinct, and every line "well spoken, with good accent and good discretion." He never confuses his author's meaning, but presents the thought with refinement and decision. He is sparing of action, but graceful and to the point. What the embodiment lacked was, it seemed to us, subtlety and imagination; and yet it was a representation that commanded respect and esteem for the actor, however widely the listener might differ from the point of view from which Mr. McCullough takes his conception of the part. It certainly is refreshing to find an actor who is content not to go beyond his author, or to seek to overload the text with his own glosses, ambiguities, and conceits. It is this quality of honesty, as well as his earnestness, sincerity, and clearness of thought and speech that make Mr. McCullough's representations so vital and full of interest.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

General Pacific Slope Depository for all of Mrs. Woodhull's Books and Speeches.

Mrs. Woodhull is about thirty-four years of age, but seen at a distance she looks younger. She is of medium height, and rather slight: has a good form, erect and firm; her features are regular and of the aqualine type; eyes dark blue and very expressive, and when in speaking she gets thoroughly roused, they are flashingly eloquent; her hair, which is a light brown, is worn short, and carelessly arranged, her forehead is high and broad, and her whole head and face indicate more than ordinary intellectuality and mental power. When not engaged in speaking she has a sad and thoughtful expression, and is what the Germans term ABSENTMINDED. There is nothing masculine or sensual in her looks, and if she is the sensual, depraved woman that she is charged withal, her whole physiognomy is a glaring lie. Her manners are refined and ladylike. When strangers are presented to her, she greets them with a winning cordiality which at once sets them at ease. She is a good conversationalist, and never wearies one with worn-out platitudes, but is original in her modes of expression, every now and then startling her auditors with some bold and novel proposition. She is apt to call things by their right names, and is stilted of prudery and sham modesty, but speaks out boldly what she thinks. A close observer spending an hour in her company, and witnessing her greetings to one and another, speaking briefly to a dozen different persons, and perhaps on as many different topics, will readily understand the secret of her wonderful power over both men and women. We do not wonder that so many love her, and others fear her, for no one can long be placed within the charmed circle of her presence and remain insensible to the almost irresistible power of her fascinations. But it is on the platform that her peculiar talents are most vividly exhibited.--[From the New York--The

Opera House.

The new bill at this house is one of the very best ever presented at this house. Bobby Newcomb e well knowe as a talented artiste, whose equal has rarely been seen and an indefatigable worker. He appears in first part, interlude and afterpiece, and is great in everything. The full programme for to-night is published on our first page. On Monday next, W. Horace Bent, the great Ethiopian comedian, will make his first appearance.

Maguire's New Theatre.

The entertainment given at this house last night for the benefit of the Light Guard was a success in every way. The pieces which were performed have already been noticed in FIGARO. To-night, that sterling actress, Miss Mary Wells, whom the New York press unanimously pronounce "the best character actress on the American stage," will take her benefit, and the charming Miss Alice Dunning will appear, for the first time this season in her extremely popular impersonation of Fren-Fren, in the play of that name. The full cast of the piece, which comprises Miss Mary Wells, Miss Mickey Lingard, Wm. Horace Lingard and others, appears on our first page. To-morrow night, John Howson will take his benefit. The beautiful operetta entitled "Widows Bewitched" will be performed by Miss Susan Galton, Alf. Kelleher, Miss Julia Melville and others and the beneficiary will appear in his specialty of "John Small."

California Theatre.

To-night the most popular of all Offenbach's operas—"La Grande Duchesse"—will be presented, with Aimee as La Duchesse, Mons. Emile Jusean as Prince Paul, Mons. Duchesne, in his original character of General Boum, and a generally strong cast. As every one knows this opera by heart, it will prove as acceptable in French as in English, to those who do not understand the first named language. There will of course be an immense house. Seats may be secured during the day.

Platt's Hall.

This evening a complimentary benefit will be given to Signor Carmelo Morley, at the above-named hall. The opera of "Il Trovatore" will be presented with Signor Morley as Manrico, Miss Fanny Marston as Leonora, Signor Marra, the new baritone, as Count di Luna, Signora Franzini as Azucena, Signor Contini as Ferzando, Mrs George T. Evans as Inez, and Mons. Charles as Ruiz. Some of the best voices which San Francisco musical circles can boast have been developed by Signor Morley. He has a host of friends and a large and fashionable audience may be confidently anticipated.

Palace Amphitheatre.

Manager Wilson having started for the country, a new combination has been formed, and a new season will commence this evening, at reduced prices. Dress Circle seats are set at fifty cents, and the Parquette at twenty-five cents. Miss Katie Holloway the star rider of Charini's circus, Mlle. Lewis, George Roland, Harry Clark, W. Warner and a host of others will appear.

Bella Union Theatre.

Miss Alice Ross in original character changes Ed Murray in his Budget of Fun, H. R. Archer in beautiful ballads, Miss Jennie Johnson and others in "Two Olimes," the Japanese in their thrilling feats, and others in a variety of acts, songs and dances, afford abundant entertainment to visitors to this house.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"Africa vs. Ireland," "The Wig Block," "Struck it," and "The Other Fellow," are among the acts to be performed to-night, by George O. Thompson, Frank Mortimore, and others.

Woodward's Gardens.

Donald McKay and the Warm Spring Indians are camped again at these gardens, and will give exhibitions every day, concluding them on Monday, June 1st.

CITY GARDENS—SARSFIELD GUARD.—The picnic of the Sarsfield Guard, will be held there on Sunday, May 31st. In addition to the customary games and festivities, a grand instrumental concert by Charles Aiphen's Band, will be given. All the friends of the Sarsfield Guard will be present on this occasion.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 16 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1856, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-oj

What Cheer Laundry.

The Deacon's Boy.

These are some of "John's" stories in the New York Sun:

Eccentricity, stewed down, turned over twice, and done brown on the edges, abounds in California. For instance, I saw a fellow with an awful gun, and I interrogated him what his gun had such a huge bore for, and he replied "it was to carry his dog in, so the game wouldn't see him." A temperance man out here disinherited his daugher because she married a man of the name of Todd; he was bound his money shouldn't be used for her little Todds. I met a warm friend of mine. I call him a warm friend because his name is Cook.

Says I, "Where are you going?"

Says he, "Going a fishing."

Says I, "What's that bottle for?"

Says he, "That's my reel."

I thought his remarks were apropos, for there is a good lot of reel in a bottle o whiskey.

One meets with queer people everywhere. I was in Brooklyn once. There was a stereoscopic show, given for the benefit of a little church around the corner, in Gates avenue. The Rev. Mr. D—— was explaining the pictures to the audience. "This picture," says he, "represents Sampson carrying away the gates of Gaza." Just then a little rascal near the door yelled out, "Cheese it, Sampson, here comes a cop." If that boy had been caught there would have been a drop scene.

Old Deacon D——s was a good man. In my opinion he was better than Deacon Richard Smith, of Cincinnati, and he had no wicked partners. Deacon D——s was a deacon in the Rev. Dr. C——'s church, in Court street, in New Haven, Conn. He kept a tailor's shop on State street. Deacon D——s did dislike playing cards exceedingly. He wouldn't touch a pack with a ten-foot pole. His son George would, though. George was a great boy. Once he took it into his head to play Robinson Crusoe, and he ran away with a lot of other boys. To show that George had good judgment, he thought it possible he might get caught, so he took a Bible along with him. He thought, and he thought rightly, that when his sire found that he had taken a Bible with him, it would save him a licking. George and his friends walked eighteen miles to Bridgeport, and got caught in a snow storm. They got enough of Robinson Crusoe, and were sent home. The Bible saved George from a licking. We used to go down to the shop in State street after the stores were closed, and play whist. One night we were having a quiet game, when some one knocked at the door. There was a piece of black broadcloth on the counter by my side, and I thrust my cards between the folds. A young man entered, who was not reliable on the mum question. We chatted awhile, put out the camphene lights, and went home. The next morning George came rushing into the store where I was, and he yelled out, "We are all going to the devil."

Says I, "What in thunder's the matter?"

Says he, "The old man says we are all going to the gallows."

Says I, "What's up?"

Then he told me what was up.

Says he, "Parson C—— came down to the store this morning to pick out a piece of black broadcloth for a coat, and the old man went to show him a piece that lay on the counter, when, by thunder, out flew a whole lot of cards, and it looked just as though the old man might have put 'em there when the parson came in."

We didn't play any more cards in that shop, and George is now a minister. "All's well that ends well."

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Bep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

Art vs. Law.

The Montpelier Argus says: George M. Clark, of large renown as a showman, and of goodly repute as a gentleman, was giving a deposition in Manchester, N. H., the other day, in the case of Kelsey vs. Osborne. James F. Briggs, counsel for the plaintiff, did not like the looks of the deposition from his standpoint, and undertook to weaken it by belittling the witness. Hence he began, with a sneer:

"You are in the negro minstrel business, I believe?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"You black your face and sing for a living, do you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, don't you call that rather low business to follow?"

"I don't know but it is, sir; but it is so much better than my father before me that I am rather proud of it."

"Why, what did your father do?"

"He was a lawyer."

Raising a Wife.

Thomas Day, the author of "Sandford and Merton," thought the best way of obtaining a wife to his mind was to bring one up for himself. So he selected two little orphan girls from a charity school, with the intention of marrying in due time the one he should like best. The experiment succeeded in everything except its specific object; for he found love was not a thing to be spoken on either side, and his wards, Lucretia and Sabrina, grew up to be good wives for other men.

Easily Explained.

The Norristown Herald says: "A loving wife in Bridgeport wants a divorce. She recently found pieces of ostrich plume in her husband's beard, of an entirely different shade from that on her own hat. He explained that bits of ostrich feather sprinkled on the beard is the very latest style in New York, and it is not his fault that the shade is different from her own."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a T."
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins;
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again,
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. F. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 15 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicates a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

The Paradise of Quacks.

San Francisco is, and we suppose will be for some years longer, the Paradise of quacks. An ex-bar keeper, tailor or tinker comes here, ticks M. D. to his name, spends fifty dollars in advertising, and is started in life as a physician. Then he gets about two hundred dollars of advertising on credit, runs in debt in saloons, dry goods stores and restaurants, beats everybody he can, and vanishes. The Chronicle of yesterday says:

DR. DANBERRY WILL PLEASE CALL AT this office immediately. my3-1f

We don't think he will. He has worked out this city, and is going to cultivate some other. We are sorry for the Chronicle. A woman mourns his loss and refuses to be comforted—she was his landlady. She is sorry two hundred dollars. A nice man is "Dr. Danberry," but he has Fay-ded away.

Good Gracious.

What has come to the Post? Only a few days ago it howled against Victoria Woodhull for trying to interfere with the sacred institution of marriage, and now it comes out in the following manner:

In the Bruner divorce case, Judge Wheeler has given a decision which, though going beyond the old landmarks, is, we think, a just and sensible one. He declares that there may be extreme cruelty, justifying a divorce, even where no bodily violence is done, and that words may be as cruel as blows. And it occurs to us that in cases like this it should be sufficient ground for divorce that both parties ask for it. It surely does neither the individuals, their children, nor society at large any good to compel people who hate each other to live together.

This is the rankest kind of "Woodhullism" Victoria only says it is cruel for the law to compel people to live together after love has fled. The Post says the same thing.

Taking Baby's Likeness.

Those who have never witnessed the operation can have little idea of the difficulties attending the taking of a baby's likeness. We recently saw it done at Houseworth & Co.'s, where they have a special operator for babies. The plate being prepared the operator began uttering shrill screams and dancing like a Warm Spring Indian. By this means he made the baby look in the direction required. Then he seized a bell and rang it furiously and exclaimed, Hi, hi hi, ho ho-o-o-o-o. Zig, zig, zig, zig, zig, a zig. How-row, ba———be. Then he put in the plate, pulled out the slide and baby was taken. The likeness was a success. The eyes were wide open and clear, and the face showed expression. In no other way could this result have been attained. It is not every man who can do this sort of thing. It is not an acquired art, it is genius.

Do You Feel

Grossgrained and stingy? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, then a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. Special department for ladies. Everything neat as wax. Single tickets, 25 cents. Five for one dollar.

Strawberries! Strawberries!

The Matinee Fruit Store 409 Bush, is the place to obtain your nice, fresh Strawberries. Parties patronizing us will be promptly attended to, and can rest assured that their Berries will be sent home in good condition, as we have a light spring wagon expressly for that purpose. By leaving your address our wagon will call for orders every day, thereby saving our patrons a good deal of trouble. Give us a trial. 1-r

"M. Alphonse."

The play of "M. Alphonse" will be produced in this city before long. It is at present being performed in Philadelphia. The All Day City Item says:

Our pure, liberal-minded, whole-hearted critics decline to see the lesson that "Monsieur Alphonse" teaches. They only behold a woman that has sinned, the villain who has betrayed her, and the host and who is fool enough to forgive her. This makes them hold up their hands and utter a cry of horror and disgust. One of the critics lashes himself into the following fury:

"It is a comedy of lies. The wife deceives the husband; the lover deceives them both and tells appalling falsehoods to his betrothed, who in her turn is playing a double game with her lover; and even the child who figures in the piece is taught by its own mother, in the midst of passionate expressions of affection, to dissemble and to cheat, and she does this with a calm simplicity which is horrible. A pagan might have supplied his characters with better morals. The utter falseness of these people would fill a respectable heathen with amazement."

Yet we suspect the same critic would glow with delight over "The School for Scandal," in which sin is presented in all the glitter of its wickedness, so merrily and so skillfully that, although everyone knows the play is fainted, they forgive its immorality, because it is made amusing. But when a sermon on immorality, like "Monsieur Alphonse," puts the hideous figure in the ghastly light of reality—then it becomes decidedly unpleasant, and it is the clear duty of all true Christians like our beloved brothers the critics of Philadelphia, to assume an attitude of reproachful dignity or outraged innocence, and denounce Dumas for placing such a picture on the stage. "We go to the theatre to be amused," they cry; "everything in its place, as all good cooks says—we have our churches when we want sermons."

Thus it is that "Monsieur Alphonse" has not been very kindly received by the Philadelphia newspapers. The reasons for the abuse (we shall not call it criticism) are sufficiently shallow and bigoted for all clear minded persons to see through them without difficulty. Our earnest advice is—go at once and see the play; do not expect to be amused, but prepare to be deeply impressed by the solemn lesson the piece presents—the lesson that shows Vice in its most hideous form—the terrible suffering of a repentant sinner who would gladly confess her sin but does not, knowing the stolid heartlessness of the world—the glorious nobility of a great heart that forgives. This is what is to be found in "Monsieur Alphonse." Where is the immorality of a play that causes people on leaving the theatre, to think, to pity, to forgive? Does "Monsieur Alphonse," like "The School for Scandal," paint vice in glittering colors, making it a merry masque where triumphant roues and married ladies of loose virtue revel in lamb-like innocence? Heaven forbid! To paint vice as it is—this is the mission of "Monsieur Alphonse;" to teach a lesson of mercy, of forgiveness. Can it be immoral to show the Devil with his horns and pitchfork, and then punish him? Or, must we only see Angels, twanging away on genuine golden harps, because the Devil is such an ugly creature to look at?

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Gerville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Miss Mary Wells had a capital house on the occasion of her benefit last night. "Froc-From" was admirably performed by Miss Alice Dunning, Charles Edmonde, James W. Norris, Miss Fanny Young, A. D. Bilings, John Howson, the beneficiary and others. The scene representing the rehearsal of the play for the benefit of the poor was most effectively presented, and caused much laughter. Miss Alice Dunning by her charming acting and the beauty of her toilette delighted everyone. John Howson as Baron de Cambri made a hit, as he does in every character which he assumes. To-night this excellent actor will take a benefit, and an entirely new programme will be performed. Miss Susan Galton, Alfred Kelleher, Mrs. Julia Melville and Mr. Howson will appear in the operetta entitled "Widow's Bewitched," there will be an interlude by volunteers whose names apear on our first page, and the evening's entertainment will conclude with the Howson specialty of "John Smail." No actor better deserves a crowded house than John Howson, and we doubt not that he will have one. The Lingards will give a matinee to-morrow.

California Theatre.

The first performance of "La Grande Duchesse" at this house, drew a splendid audience last night, and the entertainment was one of the most enjoyable ever given in San Francisco. How delightful Aimee is in the character of La Grande Duchesse all are aware. She sang and acted magnificently last night, and won great applause for "Le Sabre de Mon Pere," and "Dites Lui." Mons. Emile Juteau was excellent as Fritz, both his singing and acting being unexceptionably good Mons. Duchesne in his original character of General Boum, was immensely funny, Mons. Lecuyer as Baron Puck, did some of his funniest acting, Mons Deschamps was graceful and effective Prince Paul, Mlle. Roland a bewitchingly piquant Wanda, and every character in the opera was well played. "La Grande Duchesse" will be performed this evening, at the matinee to-morrow, and on Sunday evening. Mons. Lecuyer deserves much credit for the excellent manner in which this opera has been put on the stage at the California Theatre.

Opera House.

The performance given at this house by Maguire's California Minstrels, headed by Bobby Newcomb can scarcely be equalled and cannot be surpassed by any company in the United States. The song and dance of "The Beautiful Waltzer," by Newcomb, is one of the best ever performed on any stage, Billy Sweatnam is wonderfully comical in "Mask Beth," and "The Arrival of Aimee" by Bobby Newcomb, Little Mac and others, is a side-splitting farce. The excellent bill, published on our first page, will be performed to-night and also at the matinee to-morrow.

Platt's Hall.

There was a good but not overcrowded house last night when Signor Carmini Morley took his benefit, and Miss Fannie Marston who has been under his tuition for some time past made her debut in Italian opera, in the character of Leonora, in "Il Trovatore." Miss Marston has a powerful voice which shows signs of cultivation, but is lacking in that sympathetic quality which is so desirable. She has at present not much idea of acting, and her performance of the role of Leonora last night was decidedly more vigorous than graceful. Signor Morley was in excellent voice and sang and acted the role of Manrico in a manner which drew loud applause from the audience. Signor Marra, the baritone, who on this occasion made his first appearance in San Francisco in an operatic role filled that of the Count di Luna well enough but failed to excite any enthusiasm. He did not get an encore for "Il Balen." Mrs. Geo. T. Evans sang the role of Iorain her accustomed excellent style, Signor Franzoni filled the role of Ruiceno acceptably, and though there was nothing remarkable about the performance of the opera, it was, on the whole, one which need not provoke much adverse criticism.

Palace Amphitheatre.

A most attractive entertainment was given at this place of amusement last night, by Miss Katie Holloway, Laura and Harry Clark, George Holland W. Warner, Leon Bamwells and others. The gymnastic feats were startling and original, the trick horse Zebra acquitted itself capitally, and altogether a very pleasing performance was given. The prices have been fixed at fifty cents and twenty-five cents.

The New Company.

The celebrated actor, Charles Fechter, left New York, on Tuesday, for this city, and will arrive on Tuesday of next week. The new company comprises Miss Lizzie Price, Mr. Arnot, late leading juvenile man at Wallack's theatre, and Miss Kate Browning, late juvenile lady, from Daly's, New York theatre. Fechter, and these artists, will appear at Maguire's New Theatre, Monday, June 8.

Bella Union Theatre.

The famous Japanese Troupe are in the last nights of their engagement at this house. They will appear to-night. The local play of "The Streets of San Francisco" will be produced with Miss Jennie Johnson, Ed Murray, John Woodard, J. W. Summers, H. R. Archer and others in the cast. In addition to these attractions the comic sketch of "School" will be presented and a great olio of songs and dances will be performed. Cal. Mandeville and Miss Maggie Maguire are underlined to appear shortly.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"Struk Oil," Mortimore's sketches, "Africa vs. Ireland," George. C. Thompson in his specialties, ballads by Miss Irene Walters, and a great variety of other performances will be given at this house to-night.

Woodward's Gardens.

Donald McKay and the Warm Spring Indians are camped again at these gardens, and will give exhibitions every day, concluding them on Monday, June 1st.

CITY GARDENS — SARSFIELD GUARD.—The picnic of the Sarsfield Guard, will be held here on Sunday, May 31st. In addition to the customary games and festivities, a grand instrumental concert by Charles Alpher's Band, will be given. All the friends of the Sarsfield Guard will be present on this occasion.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen

Platt's Hall.

To-night, Canon Kingsley of Westminster Abboy, whose published works are as popular in this country as they are in England, will make his first appearance before a San Francisco audience, and will lecture on the subject of "Westminster Abboy." Canon Kingsley has drawn large audiences, composed of the cultivated classes, in every city in which he has lectured, and will, doubtless, be equally as successful here. The box office is now open, and seats may be secured without extra charge. Single tickets are only seventy-five cents.

WORK.

THE CRITIC—THE ARTIST—THE TEACHER.

The critic sees and tells the wrong
Or right that is in others found.
The artist doth amend or save
In his own work his own.
The teacher leads out from the ground
What growth the human germs enfold.
So that by light they seek the right.
And grow more strong to shun the wrong
If in good ground they're sown.

The crit c's work is needed yet.
We all want cheer: we all forget.

The artist's work must never cease,—
Art is the flower that, in good hour,
Will bring of human fruit increase.

The teacher's work we need so long
As social ill the seed may kill,
Or cruel thorns or stones be rife;
Or beaten track keep rootlets back,
Preventing growth to perfect life.

—Edward A. Spring.

Livingstone and Lions.

The death of Livingstone has revived this story about Livingstone's contempt for lions: "You talk about the majesty of the lion," he said, chatting to Sir Edwin Landseer at a party in London: "But you do not know the beast. There is no more majesty about him in the forest than there is about that poodle. It is all poetry—lions are arrant cowards—cowardly sneaking beasts. You can hardly tell a lion from a donkey when you come upon him in the forest, and if you come upon a lion suddenly his first impulse is to tuck his tail between his legs and bolt. He will spring upon you if he comes upon you unawares, and can have time to crouch; but if a man has the courage to look a lion in the face you need not even cock your rifle."

The Power of Love.

Love is life. Selfishness is death. Think of one who has no throb outside of himself; is he not entombed in a grave more dark than that of earth? The moment one begins to love, if only a dog, he begins to live. To love something that is different from one's self—a flower, a star, a human soul—what is in it, what stir of all the faculties! Oh, the manifold life of love! How it flows and streams away on every side, in love of father and mother, sister and brother, husband and wife, and friend and little children, of the tiniest speck and grandest orb. We rejoice in all things. Every sound is a delight. The very worm beneath our feet thrills us. We are alive all over.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

LeCocq's New Opera.

A London correspondent, Mr. Howard Paul, under date of March 25th, thus writes: "I have just returned to London from Brussels, where I heard LeCocq's new opera, 'Girofle-Girofla.' When, two years ago, the Theatre des Fantaisies Parisiennes was closed one evening for a dress rehearsal of 'La Fille de Madame Angot,' the Brussels people hardly suspected that on the next day they would be called to witness a great dramatic event, and the beginning of a lasting and European success. They little thought that a few months later M. LeCocq's music would be played on all the pianos of the old world and the new. Last week M. Humbert opened a career to 'Girofle-Girofla,' by the same author. The fortunate manager who in a single year played "La Fille de Madame Angot" almost every night, and paid to the author very nearly 40,000 f. may consider himself luckier still. For Brussels and Paris 'Girofle-Girofla' was an event. The opera is in three acts, the plot being of a very amusing description, abounding in situations of the most comic character. The music is generally considered to be greatly superior to that of 'La Fille de Madame Angot,' and the Chorus of Pirates in the first act will certainly be an immense success; indeed, it will equal, if not excel, the Chorus of Conspirators in the last-named opera, to which it bears some resemblance. The scenery and decorations are beautiful in the extreme, and the opera generally has been placed on the stage with a lavish disregard of expense, M. Humbert having spent fully £2,000 in mounting the piece.

"The author, M. LeCocq, who by the way is lame, and walks by the aid of crutches, was present at the first representation, and was loudly cheered when he first appeared; the manager, M. Humbert, likewise being very warmly greeted. Some two years ago I met a pretty little opera bouffe singer in London,—Mrs. James E. Oates, now Mrs. Tracy Titus,—in an opera all cut and dried for that charming lady, and she cannot do better than look after this one during her vacation the coming summer. It is sure to be a great success in the United States."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here:
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. F. Seamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Seamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Seamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance, with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Seamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

PACIFIC COAST DRAMATIC NEWS.

MARYSVILLE.—A Panorama of the Modoc War, and another of the Franco-Prussian War, was the attraction at Turner Hall on the 27th.

GRASS VALLEY.—Amy Stone, H. F. Stone and a dramatic company, performed the drama of "Cigarette; or, the Little Leopard of France," at Hamilton Hall last night. They will give a matinee performance to-day, and to-night they will play "Led Astray."

STOCKTON.—Miss Amy Stone, H. F. Stone, W. J. Coggswell and others, appeared at the theatre on Monday in "Fanchon, the Cricket," and on Tuesday in "The Pearl of Savoy."

OAKLAND.—The great Palace Ampitheatre troupe performed here on Thursday and Friday.

SAN JOSE.—The San Jose people will be delighted to-day by a performance of John Wilson's great circus troupe.

VIRGINIA CITY.—Charles Pope, Mlle. Bonfanti and the California Theatre Company, commenced an engagement at Piper's Opera House on Monday evening in "Belphegor." This play was repeated on the following night. On Wednesday "Much Ado About Nothing" was performed. On Thursday, "The Robbers." Mr. Pope will close his engagement to-night. On Monday, Barton Hill, will make his appearance, and will appear in "The Lancashire Lass," "Lost in London," "Camille," and other pieces in which he was so highly successful in this city,

SALT LAKE CITY.—The Salt Lake Daily Herald of Tuesday last said: "Last evening Mr. Mestayer opened here to a fine audience." Of the play it says: "The prologue is rather tedious, and the plot has hardly the amount of vim and dash in it that we expected from the title—"On the Slopes at Ecsco." The Herald praises the acting of the star, saying: "Mr. Mestayer is a character actor of rare merit, and his Bill Hardhead throughout was a masterly impersonation, full of those rowdyish peculiarities which mark such men as Mose or Kindred spirits, who love to go with the b'hoys and run with the machine." George Chapman is to commence a star engagement on Monday.

COOS CITY, O.—Vivian gave one of his entertainments here on the 23d, and is performing in the towns round Coos Bay.

DENVER, COL.—The great Austins, Charles and Carrie, from Fox's Olympic Theatre, New York, commenced an engagement at the Cricket Varieties, on Monday, May 2 ta, and are drawing big houses.

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

Vasquez's Photograph on Exhibition.

Mr. A. Provo Kluit, proprietor of the Florence Gallery, 26 Third street, has now on exhibition at Hyde & Sherman's music store, corner Kearny and Sutter streets, the photograph of the famous Vasquez. Copies in all sizes for sale at the Gallery.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS

Next to paintings rank photo-crayons as works of art—with many, indeed, photo-crayon portraits are preferred to paintings, although the latter may have emanated from the brush of a noted artist—still, it is hardly possible to obtain as lifelike portraits with the brush alone as can be obtained in photo-crayons. A. Provo Kluit, 28 Third street, has made crayon portraits a specialty, and he has secured an artist whose work will compare favorably with that of any one. Mr. Kluit has a beautiful crayon now on exhibition, at J. B. Golly's, 31 Kearny street. The portrait is the most natural and lifelike work we have ever seen. It shows the work of a careful and untiring, as well as artistic hand, and it is almost a marvel how a work of such excellence can be furnished for the low figure that Mr. K. asks. Other specimens of crayons, as well as every kind and size of photographs, can be seen at the Florence Art Gallery, 28 Third street. 5 A

Do You Feel

Crossgrained and stingy? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, then a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. Special department for ladies. Everything neat as wax. Single tickets, 25 cents. Five for one dollar.

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter-House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant. 5-M

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—That most popular of French operas, "La Grande Duchesse" has again created a perfect furore in this city. Everyone is going to see it. It has never been quite so well performed as it is by the Aimee troupe at the California Theatre. Aimee appears to immense advantage in the title role, and Mons. Emile Jotean, Mons. Duchesne, Mons. Lecuyer, Mlle. Rose and other perform their respective parts with much ease and grace, and introduce any number of funny bits of business which are encored now to the audience. "La Grande Duchesse" will be performed at the matinee to-day, to-night and to-morrow night.

OPERA HOUSE.—At the matinee to-day, this evening, and to-morrow evening, the great bill which has proved so popular during the week, will be repeated. It comprises Bobby Newcomb in "The Active Boy," "The Arrival of Aimee," and in song and dance, Billy Sweatnam in "Mack-Beth," George S. Knight in new Dutch sing, Welch and Rice in original song and dance performances, and a variety of other attractive features. All who visit the Opera House in search of fun get their money's worth.

MAGUIRE'S NEW THEATRE.—There was a good sized and a very fashionable audience at this house last night when that excellent comedian, John Howson, took his benefit. The only reason the house was not crowded to overflowing, was that the San Francisco public were enjoying the first warm night of the season by strolling about in the moonlight. The performance was an excellent one. The beneficiary convulsed the audience with laughter by his wonderfully comical acting in the screaming farce of "John Small." Miss Marian Slocger sang, "When the Roses Bloom Again," and was encored. The performance terminated with the delightful operetta of "Widows Bewitched," in which Miss Susan Galton, Alfred Kelcher and Mrs. John Melville acted and sang as charmingly as ever. At the matinee to-day, to-night and to-morrow night, Miss Alice Dunning will appear in her pleasing impersonation of Gilberte in "Fron-Fron."

THE NEW PALACE AMPHITHEATRE.—At the matinee to-day, and again this evening Young Leo Carlo, will appear in his thrilling equestrian act, Miss Katie Holloway the graceful rider, in her scarf equestrian act, the Man with the Iron Jaw, in his wonderful feats, George Holloway and W. Warner in a comic act, and others in a rich selection of gymnastic and equestrian acts. The prices of admission have been set at a very low figure and an excellent entertainment is given.

PLATT'S HALL.—Canon Kingsley delivered his lecture on "Westminster Abbey" before a large and very fashionable audience last night. He is no orator, no elocutionist, yet the audience sat in rapt attention listening to his beautiful prose poem and scarcely missed the graces of delivery which would have made it still more effective. It was a charming lecture, full of poetry, loving kindness and appreciation of the beautiful in everything. Canon Kingsley is accused of flattering his American audiences. He cannot do less than say pleasant things to those who like him so well, but we believe that he means what he says. He did not, last night praise the beauty of Yo-semite, and enlarge on the grandeur of the Sierra Nevada to please his California audience. He could not help doing so. The subject of the lecture to-night will be "The First Discoverers of America." All who attend will enjoy a great treat.

BELLA UNION THEATRE.—The local play of "The Streets of San Francisco," the wonderful performances of the Japanese troupe, Miss Alice Rose in character songs, Miss Susie Robinson in song and dance, H. R. Archer in ballads, and a great variety of other performances will be given at this house to-night.

BUCKLEY'S NEW VARIETY THEATRE.—Immense attractions will be offered at this house to-night. The two old California favorites, Ned Buckley and Johnny Tuers, will make their appearance, and will perform the burnt cork burlesque of "Otameel."

WOODWARD'S GARDENS—THE INDIANS.—Donald McKay and the Warm Spring Indians are camped again at these gardens, and will give exhibitions every day, concluding them on Monday, June 1st.

CITY GARDENS — SARSFIELD GUARD.—The picnic of the Sarsfield Guard, will be held here on Sunday, May 31st. In addition to the customary games and festivities, a grand instrumental concert by Charles Alpher's Band, will be given. All the friends of the Sarsfield Guard will be present on this occasion.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of no different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain Railroad.

GOLDEN GATE PARK.—Those who drive out to the new park should visit The Villa which has just been opened. Here they will find four public parlors and ten private dining rooms. Guido Mangenberg, the proprietor, gets up epicurean breakfasts, dinners and suppers at short notice.

GRAND SUNDAY EXCURSION.—The steamer Antelope leaves San Francisco every Saturday at 9:30, P. M. and on Sunday at 8 A. M. from Front Street Wharf, connecting with the cars of the S. F. & N. P. Railroad at Donahue for Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg and Cloverdale. Excursion tickets are issued at reduced rates, and are good from Saturday to Monday. Those who wish to enjoy a little country air at the end of the week could not choose a finer trip than this excursion offers.

NOTES.—The opera of "Le Petit Faust" will be produced by the Aimee Troupe on Monday. "La Grande Duchesse" has proved such a success that it is to be hoped that it will be revived at an early date.

Madame Inez Fabbri, Miss Anna Bishop and Prof. Fabbri have gone to [illegible] where they will give concerts consisting of operatic selections.

On Monday evening, Victoria Woodhull, who is generally considered to be the Most Famous Orator living, and who, by those who differ with her principles, is confessed to be be an honest enthusiast, will deliver her great Cooper Institute oration, "Reformation or Revolution, Which?" at Platt's Hall. So much interest has been manifested in Mrs. Woodhull, the most extraordinary woman of the nineteenth century, that the hall will scarcely be large enough to accommodate all who would like to be present. Seats may be secured to-day without extra charge.

The first evening performance for the benefit of the sufferers by the Louisiana overflow, will be given at Maguire's New Theatre on Monday. On this occasion Miss Sallie Hinckley, whom the public will be glad to see once more on the San Francisco stage, will appear in the character of Zelie, in the lively comedy of "A Tempest in a Teapot." After this, John Howson will appear in his wonderfully amusing specialty entitled "John Small," and the evening's entertainment will terminate with the screaming farce of "My Uncle's Wife," in which J. W. Norris, A. D. Billings and Miss Josie Batcheldor will appear.

Platt's Hall has been secured from July 6th to August 8th, for a season of dramatic performances by the French marionettes. These distinguished artistes will shortly arrive from New York—in a box.

Lotta arrived from New York last evening. After a short season of rest among her California friends she will commence an engagement at the California Theatre.

W. H. Smith, the great Ethiopian comedian will make his appearance at the Opera House on Monday.

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

Mr. Gotham commences his Chicago engagement June 1st.

Lyd a Thompson sailed for England on the 23d.

Mlle. Aimee is engaged to Grau for next season.

It is said that Toole will make his debut in this country as "Paul Pry."

The New York Courier says: Olive Logan intends to return to the stage. She has been studying anew in Paris, and has been offered an opportunity to appear on the French stage in French plays. She will, however, return to America to effect her re-appearance. What a pity it is she cannot be induced to remain where she is.

Mr. Cheney will begin work on his New Globe Theatre, at Boston, in a few days, and expects to have it done at the opening of the next winter season. It will cost $200,000 and Mr. Cheney proposes to make it as good a place of amusement as there is in the country. A novel plan for raising money to pay the expenses of building is to sell tickets for one seat for eighteen years (the time for which part of the land is leased) for $1,000 each. This makes the cost of a seat $1 40 a week and the tickets are transferable.

The New York Courier says: As an earnest of the intention of Messrs. Jarrett & Palmer to uphold the reputation of Booth's Theatre as the leading legitimate establishment of the United States it is a pleasure to announce that Miss Charlotte Cushman has finally been induced by them to reconsider her determination to withdraw from the stage. She will appear at Booth's next fall. During the farewell engagement, "Macbeth" will be produced in unequalled style, the chants and choruses to be made features, for which purpose arrangements have been perfected with two prominent singing societies. The general cast of the tragedy will be phenomenal.

Harry Colton, well known in San Francisco as an industrious and painstaking actor has been making rapid progress in his profession. He has lately joined the company at Wood's Museum, New York.

Baker and Farron open at Wood's Museum on June 1st.

Mlle. Zaa commenced an engagement at Fox's American Varieties, Philadelphia, on the 18th.

"Monsieur Alphonse" was produced at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on the 15th.

Mr. Lawrence Barrett commences an engagement at the Boston Theatre, on the 25th.

Dr. R. Shelton Mackenzie, of Philadelphia, is writing a play for Barney Williams.

Charles Thorne and Stuart Robson have left for London.

Miss Ella Weathersby opens at the Boston Museum on July 6th.

The season at Union Square Theatre will terminate on June 13.

George Chaplin arrived in New York recently. He is to commence a star engagement at Salt Lake City, Utah, on June 1, thence to California. He will travel with Mme. Janauschek next season.

Miss Nelson and H. Wertheimer sailed by the Adriatic, Messrs. Jarrett and Palmer by the Periere, Gerald Massey and Miss Edith Wynne by the Java, on May 16.

Miss Adelaide Neilson has been engaged by Max Strakosch for one hundred performances during the season of 1874-5. She will commence an engagement at the Lyceum Theatre Oct 19.

When Charlotte Cushman shall play an engagement at Booth's Theatre during the next season, Mr. George Vandenhoff will return to the stage after an absence of fourteen years, and act in "Macbeth" and "Henry VIII."

"Friscolo," in the New York Arcadian, after calling John McCullough's impersonation of Hamlet commonplace says:

But I am bound to say Mr. McCullough won a great deal of applause. Indeed, the audience at one time seemed determined to cheer every other word.

It had him out, too, at the end of every act, and, so far as it was able, made him believe that his performance was the best in the world.

So it seems that the public of New York, more intelligent than the Press, accepted McCullough's Hamlet.

The New York Clipper presents the following melancholy review of the Winter dramatic season: The theatrical season is nearing its close. As we look back and survey the battle-field, the killed and wounded loom up largely, deserters and renegades make a fearful exhibit, and the legitimate campaign of 1873-4 may be set down as a comparative failure. Disaster after disaster has fallen upon the managerial head—panic upon panic has seized the private—and discomfiture and slaughter have attested the demoralized condition of the legitimate army of occupation. But two or three managers will be able to show a clean bill of health when the curtain falls upon the closing scene of the campaign. Four of our most beautiful theatres have been compelled either to terminate the season in advance of the season, or to close out the remainder of the time in fruitless efforts to retrieve the losses of the past. These four may be enumerated as Niblo's, the Lyceum, the Grand Opera House, and Booth's—all first-class, and two of them, at least, unsurpassed in their general make-up. Not one of them has made money during the season just closing; and so mired have been matters at the Lyceum that suits are now pending against the Messrs. George and O. Curtis Hoffman, Thomas Thacher and Wm. L. Mansell, to ascertain who were the "responsible managers," and to whom the unpaid actor is to look for his back salary.

Minstrelsy was revived at Hooley's Brooklyn, Opera House, on the 21st, with the popular veteran manager, Cool White, at the helm. A new dy on the end, and the old favorite interlocutor, Cool, in the middle.

A Paris paper states that Mlle. Tostee, well-known in this country in connection with opera-bouffe, died recently, at Paris, in France, on this account of the loss of her daughter.

Frank Roche, will support Mrs. F. B. Conway, on her starring tour next season.

J. L. Toole, the London actor, will appear at Wallack's, August 17.

Wellington De Boots Clark will return to the United States in August.

The Park Theatre Brooklyn, will open its regular fall and winter season September 1.

Kate Weiner intends returning to the dramatic stage next season, and will probably travel with a troupe under Fred G. Maeder.

Mrs. Rousby, the celebrated English actress will visit this country next season.

Rose Rand is reported as having bought a $4,000 house at 131 North Carey street, Baltimore.

Mrs. Conntran will open the coming starring season at the California Theatre, in September, and play four weeks, after which she will successively visit the lake cities.

Joe Murphy and troupe, Boston 25th.

Mrs J. B. Booth has created a furore among the intellectual fashionables at Washington, by her admirable impersonation of Juliet, at Ford's. The press are unusually enthusiastic as will be seen by the following extract: "Mrs. Booth personates Juliet with a grace, a gentleness, a sincerity, as occasion requires, which captivates her audiences and sends them home fully satisfied with her power to play one of the most difficult characters the mind of a dramatist ever conceived.

The Kentucky giant is dead. He was seven feet high, two and a-half across the shoulders, and his foot measured fifteen inches.

Simmons & Slocum's Minstrels commenced a week's engagement at the Brooklyn, N. Y., Park Theatre on May 18.

The last New York Clipper says: A party styled the "California Minstrels," was organized at Cincinnati, O., last week, and started into Indiana, their objective point being Canada. Harry Cadora, Jas Howard, Dick Durand, Ned Reed, Charley Armstrong and J. H. Casper went with them.

The New Orleans and New York Circus exhibited at Washington 20, Muscatine 21, Rock Island, Ill., 22, Davenport, Iowa, Iowa City 25, Marengo 26, Newton 27, Indianola 28, Winterset 29. A train which transported the show on May 6, took fire, and the car containing the trunks, and two other cars were burned. The sideshow property was destroyed, and two camels were killed by fire.

Painter and Durand, gymnasts, desire an engagement. They advertise in the New York Clipper.

Order a small package of "Stay Ale or Porter" sent to your house for family use, it will keep on draught all summer, and is at once the best, the cheapest and most healthful drink to be had, Main office, 521 Market street.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. F. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

AN OPEN LETTER
From a Known Business House
of this City.

THE PEOPLE OF SAN FRANCISCO AND State of California—As reform is now the cry all over the State, and every man and woman is trying to become economical, I wish to call your attention to a particular subject, and that is, when you wish to invest a dollar to do so, and go where you will get your money's worth; when you make purchases, go to the house that manufactures or imports the article direct, and you are sure to save money. To find such a house go to S. POPPER'S new shirt manufactory and gents' furnishing goods establishment, Nos. 825 Kearny street, near Sutter and Bush, and 827 Kearny street, near Bush and Pine, the oldest and leading shirt manufacturing establishment in the city. Don't refer to well known houses, or to small stores—that's too thin; but he can sell a better and more perfect-fitting shirt, superior in quality, at a more reasonable price than any house in the city. The same in underwear, and furnishing goods, also. Shirts made to order and satisfaction warranted. Gentlemen coming to the city please remember this, and call before purchasing elsewhere.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Sweit, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Bep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Sweit first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Nellson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their, stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

LOOKING BACK.

BY LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON.

I may live long, but some old days
Of dear, deep joy akin to pain—
Some runs that set on woodland ways
Will never rise for me again:
By shining sea, and glad, green shore
That frolic waves ran home to kiss,
Some words I hear that nevermore
Will thrill me with their mystic bliss.

O love! at ll throbs your living heart—
You have not crossed death's sullen tide,
A deeper deep holds us apart:
We were more near if you had died—
If you had died in those old days
When light was on the shining sea,
And all the fragrant woodland ways
Were paths of hope for you and me.

Dead leaves are in those woodland ways—
Cold are the lips that used to kiss;
'Twere idle to recall those days,
Or sigh for all that vanished bliss!
Do you still wear your old-time grace,
And charm new loves with ancient wiles?
Could I but watch your faithless face,
I'd know the meaning of your smiles.

A Priest Tries a Practical Joke.

It is not often that a prisoner is brought to trial upon the charge laid against Father Baronius, when he appeared before the tribunal at Treviglio, in Lombardy, recently. This worthy ecclesiastic was accused of putting a strong emetic into the wine which some of his brother priests were about to use in the celebration of mass, and his only defense was that he wanted to play a practical joke upon two of them who had recently came to Treviglio. They belonged to an opposite school of theology, and Father Baronius, who seemed surprised that his application of emetics to religion should have caused so great a scandal, thought that if he could not convert them he might at least punish them. It would have been useless for him to have denied the main facts of the accusation, as the dose was so strong that one of the victims was ill for a week, while the doctors at Treviglio, possessing but a very elementary knowledge of the healing art, thought that he had been poisoned and submitted him to so severe a diet that he was reduced to a skeleton. The offending priest was charged upon the double count of misdemeanor and sacrilege, and was sentenced to seven months' imprisonment.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Gorville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Night to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

It Didn't Work.

Mr. Howard Paul relates the following anecdote of the comedian Toole, who is to pay a visit to this country soon: A well-known Bohemian and man-about town of impecunious pattern, one night at the Albion, was foraging for the loan of five pounds. He tried several journalists, but they simply scowled by the way of reply. A manager was asked, but he refused point-blank. A famous tragedian was appealed to, but he smiled loftily, and declined in his deepest and most impressive tones. One or two vocalists were wheedlingly approached but kept their money in their pockets. Toole at the moment happened to drop in on his way from the theatre, and was in the highest spirits. A radiance fell on the face of the Bohemian, and the comedian's fate was sealed. A moment's interview, a few hurried whispers, a suspicion of shadow on the genial countenance of the merry "droll" of the Gaiety—and five glittering sovereigns had changed owners. The Bohemian went on his way rejoicing. A few days after this gentle transaction Toole was immensely surprised at receiving a thankful letter from the borrower, returning the amount. He mentioned the circumstances to various friends of the man in question, and all expressed amazement, as their experiences did not at all tally with the good fortunes of the comedian. But a week after the secret was out. Our Bohemian turned up again, and smilingly desired the loan of twenty pounds this time, and at the same moment took occasion to remark how punctual had been his repayment of the previous loan. But Toole was not to be caught this time. For once his generosity did not obscure his prudence. "No," said he, with a twinkle of his comical eye, "you deceived me once, and I feel it acutely; I'll not give you another chance. We are quits now, and must remain so forever. Here's an order for the Globe; good night," and they parted.

An Unhappy Child.

A correspondent of the Virginia City Enterprise, has the following account of a dissatisfied child: She is the most discontented, unhappy little monkey that ever lived. She finds something to cry about twenty times a day. Yesterday I saw her sitting on a box in the back yard, a small monument of despair. The tears were running slowly down her cheeks, and old Carlo, the Newfoundland dog, decked in rags, and strings, stood wagging his tail and watching her sympathetically. I took her up in my arms and asked her what she was crying about. "Oh, many sings," she said. "what things, darling?" "Oh, everysing is wrong—everysing in dis world. I wish I wasn't borned." "Tell mamma what is wrong now." "Well, den, old Tarlo's tail drowed out behind, when I wanted it to drow our tweet ash-hunders, 'cos why for a pummel so's I tould ride on his back and have somesings to hold on to."

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the second adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

Beauty and the Beast Again.

Bradley & Rulofson, the world-renowned photographers, send us photographs of Tiburcio Vasquez and Victoria Woodhull. The former is about as a forbidding and utterly evil countenance as we ever saw, the latter is a lovely, womanly woman whose picture would attract attention in any book of beauty. With Beauty and the Beast comes Tennie C. Claflin, a jolly honest countenance and one whom everyone would pronounce "a good fellow" if she were a he instead of a she. For our part we don't see why a woman should not be considered a good fellow if she has all the manliness of a good fellow joined to the sweetness of a nice girl.

Driven to It.

The Fresno Expositor says:

Posts will please bear in mind that we charge regular advertising rates for inserting original poetry. Our compositors are men of strong nerve, and do not generally hesitate on even an obituary, but the bravest of them will quail and threaten to throw up his "sit" rather than tackle an original "pome." This state of affairs may have a depressing effect upon some of the poetical geniuses of this county, but it can't be helped. We will not lend our aid to afflict the sensibilities of anybody by publishing any more original poetry only on the terms mentioned.

If the Morning Call would adopt this rule its readers would be happier. Those lines "To a Kettle" in a recent issue, should have been charged double advertising rates.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here;
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins;
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

The Amazon.

A voyage on the Amazon, writes an American traveler, is excessively monotonous. A vast volume of smooth, yellow water, floating trees and grass, linear-shaped islets, a dark forest, the shore of a boundless sea of verdure, and a coudless sky, with occasional flocks of screaming parrots—these are the general features.

No busy towns are seen along the banks; only here and there a palm hut or Indian village, half buried in the wilderness. No mountains break the horizon—only half-a-dozen table-topped hills—and while many bluffs of red and yellow clays are visible, they are exceptional, the usual border being low alluvial deposits, magnificently wooded, but half the year covered with water. The rich grandeur, however, of a great river like this is derived from reflecting upon its prospective commercial importance and immense drainage. A lover of nature, moreover, can never get tired of gazing at the picturesque grouping and variety of trees, with their mantles of creeping plants; the wild, unconquered race of vegetable giants; the "reckless energy of vegetation," compared with which the richest woods on the Hudson are a desert; the dense canopy of green supported by crowded columns branchless for fifty or eighty feet; the parasites and undergrowth struggling for life, the broad-leaved bananas and gigantic grasses; the colossal nut and pod-bearing trees; and, above all, the hundreds of species of palms, each vieing with the other in beauty and grace.

Not to be Relied Upon.

The Fat Contributor says drunkards are useful as terrible examples: We don't mean one of those periodic fellows who can't be relied on for any length of time, but one of the steady, everyday sort.

We were dreadfully sold on a periodical drunkard not long ago. We saw him staggering on the streets one day, his clothes soiled and hat smashed down. We thought what a horrid example he was of the evils of intemperance. What child, we mused, could look upon that wreck of humanity and not inwardly resolve never to taste intoxicating drink. The more we meditated on the subject the clearer our duty appeared to be in the matter, so the next day we hunted up a boy and took him around to point out to him that awful example. But the awful example had "braced up," shaved, put on a clean shirt and dressed himself in a new suit throughout. He didn't look as though he ever drank a drop in his life. We looked very shabby by the side of him and he appeared a little ashamed to speak to us himself. And the boy wanted to know who that nice looking man was and innocently inquired why we didn't fix up and look like he did!

Shakespeare's "Seven Ages of Man"—Mega-age, lugg-age, saus-age, ramp-age, marriage, parent-age and dot-age.

'Pray, madam, why do you name your old hen Macduff?'

'Because, sir, I want her to lay on!'

The wicked drop orange peel for the good to kick at.

The death change cannot transform moral character.

Weakening.

A sharp, shrill voice, searching for "George," disturbed the quiet of Nelson street, for some fifteen minutes on Friday. At the end of that time, a set of very soiled features suddenly appeared through an opening in the fence, and sadly observed, "Your voice ain't what it used to be, mother; you're losing ground."—Danbury News.

A Heartless Woman.

Mr. E. S. Stokes thinks it very strange that his wife should want a divorce from him. He has never done anything to give her cause for complaint. He has only lived on terms of Platonic intimacy with that eminently virtuous female, Josephine Mansfield, and murdered Jim Fisk. The woman who could desert so worthy a man as Stokes is unfit to enjoy the pleasure of being married.

Among the passengers for the East, this morning, on the Overland train was Mr. T. M. Antisell. Mr. Antisell is one of those enterprising, energetic men, that our business community can ill afford to loose. Mr. Antisell's absence, however, will be short; for he expects to return within a month.

TUESDAY.....JUNE 2, 1874

Line Upon Line.

We chronicle the appearance of the Sun yesterday.

Black cherries are in market—black sheep are everywhere.

Oakland is now known as Drytown.

Boston gave most to the Louisiana sufferers.

To please a woman, let her do as she pleases.

Cremation is economy, and economy is wealth.

Ann Eliza vs. Chicago Times; damages, $20,000.

Pay down and you will never be dunned to pay up.

Next to her head a woman values her hair most.

Dumb pianos, for beginners, are advertised in London.

Epitaph for a cannibal—"One who loved his fellow-men."

The annual wine crop of this land is about $14,000,000.

Salt Lake, with all its wickedness, encourages a floral society.

The dull thud of counterfeit quarters is heard in San Francisco.

Brighton, England, is Americanized to the extent of having a rink.

"Little Mac" would be "some peaches" as Governor of New Jersey.

Soda water, with pure-fruit syrups, ice-cold, at Oakland.

Germans are numerous enough in Boston to give tone to her music.

They give all the tones [music has here. Our musicians are all German ones.

A Cedar Rapids, Iowa, cripple had a cork leg cut off by the locomotive.

A Missouria judge has decided a woman not an old maid until she is thirty-five.

Victor Hugo's "Tour on the Rhine" will return the author considerable rhino.

It was optional once in Oakland to drink or let it alone, but "Local Option" put a stop to that.

Is this True?

An Eastern paper says: In Nevada, lawyers are very polite with witnesses, and don't ask them any impertinent questions. The witness usually takes the stand with a couple of revolvers and a bowie knife in his belt. The Nevada men are very good shots, and a man doesn't get insulted there with impunity. Horse stealing is the only crime known to the laws.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen:
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here:
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.
CHARLES HAAKE, Proprietor.

Dr. Doherty

Has devoted his study more particularly to chronic and specific practice, and as such is now the most successful of any Physician in San Francisco. Office 512 Sacramento street, corner of Leidesdorff, a few doors below What Cheer House. 2

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions, Club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. R. H. Cowan's Institute, 310 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P.M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. References given if required. 8

Vasquez's Photograph on Exhibition.

Mr. A. Provo Kluit, proprietor of the Florence Gallery, 29 Third street, has now on exhibition at Hyde & Sherman's music store, corner Kearny and Sutter streets, the photograph of the famous Vasquez. Copies in all sizes for sale at the Gallery.

One of the neatest and pleasantest Billiard Parlors in this city is at the northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, entrance on Bush. The best of Wines, Liquors and Cigars are to be found at the bar. Chapman & Terrill, proprietors. 5-o

A Pleasant Location.

Persons desiring comfortable lodgings in a central location, should visit the Alhambra, and inspect the fine suites of rooms to let there The building is a very fine one and is well lighted and ventilated.

Special to Ladies.

For dressmaking in all its branches and the latest styles, call on Mrs. J. J. Walker, at 810 Post street. Terms reasonable. 3-o

Dead Journalists.

The New York Arcadian says: The trustees of Cypress Hill Cemetery have devoted a plot of ground 96 feet by 100, containing 24 lots, with 360 graves of three feet by eight each, for the reception of the remains of such journalists for whom no provision for burial elsewhere may have been made. This is kind in the trustees, and, in common with every other well-regulated journalist, we thank those gentlemen for their excellent intentions. But is not this deadheadism with a vengeance? One of the newspapers says that "the offer was accepted in the spirit in which it was made," and another that "no more attractive spot could have been chosen for a last resting-place for weary brains." The fire and police reporter of the Sun shall sleep peacefully beside the fancy writer in the Tribune, and the intellectual department of the Herald shall turn up its toes to the daisies cheek by jowl with the squib writer in the Times. It will be a beautiful and hallowed sight when all these 360 graves shall be filled—one for nearly every day in the year. We have no doubt George Francis Train will go there regularly, contemplate them with pleasure, and only mourn that there are so few. The actual value of the ground is said to be $9,600, but, of course, the value will indefinitely increase with the intellectual treasure buried there. A touching sight, truly—the brains of New York interviewing death and finding out all he has to say to them. Some actor who has been triturated with critical sarcasm during a long and laborious career, will wander with ecstacy among the enclosures, and lighting upon some well-known name, will shriek: "Hullo! here's the man that massacred me when I played 'Hamlet,' and said I was no better than Buffalo Bill with the dyspepsia. I am glad he's gone at any rate." Some downy poet, who has been ruthlessly excoriated, threading the cemetery in quest of epitaphs, will spy the name of the reviwer who stabbed him, and folding his arms, gaze with pensive mejesty at the mound of earth, and exclaim in measured accents, "And has it come to this!" Our private opinion is that that plot of ground will pretty soon be full. Journalists, to be sure, don't die off as quickly as the general welfare would seem to demand, but they have more relatives than most people. What we are principally surprised at is that some Cremation Society don't form for the express purpose of burning them gratis.

Agonizing.

Who can describe the agony with which a fond husband beholds the partner of his joys in his carriage behind a pair of runaway horses, and the horses worth three thousand dollars. Women ain't worth a cent at stopping runaway horses. And it's generally the horses that get killed.

A Saving Clause.

"Oh Lord, sink the whole of Standish Neck?" prayed a wrathy deacon, getting out of patience with his irreligious neighbors. "No, good Lord, stop! I'm too fast! All but lot No. 50, and a road to mill." Lot No. 50 was this Christian's farm.

"Boy, is that a licensed dog?" demanded a Detroit policeman of a lad who was leading his animal along the avenue. "No, sir, he's a rat terrier dog," replied the boy, "and I am taking him down to have his teeth filed."

AN OPEN LETTER

From a Known Business House of this City.

TO THE PEOPLE OF SAN FRANCISCO AND State of California—As reform is now the word all over the State, and every man and woman is trying to become economical, I wish to call your attention to a particular subject, and that is, when you wish to invest a dollar to do so, and go where you will get your money's worth; when you make your purchase, go to the house that manufactures and imports the article direct, and you are sure to save money. To find such a house go to S. POPPER'S new shirt manufactory and gents' furnishing goods establishment, No. 635 Kearny street, between Sutter and Bush, and 637 Kearny street, between Bush and Pine, the oldest and leading shirt manufacturing establishment in the city. He don't offer to sell below cost, or retail at manufactory prices—that's too thin; but he can sell a better made and more perfect-fitting shirt, superior in quality, at a more reasonable price than any other house in the city, the same in underwear, gents' furnishing goods, etc. Shirts made to order, and satisfaction warranted. Gentlemen coming to the city please remember this, and all before purchasing elsewhere.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

A splendid entertainment was given last night for the benefit of the sufferers by the Louisiana flood. It commenced with the very pretty comedy of "A Tempest in a Teapot," in which that capital actress, Miss Sallie Hinckley, appeared as Anita, and Charles Edmonds as Arthur Rattletop. John Howson caused immense laughter in his specialty of "John Small," and the two act comedy of "Naval Engagements," terminated the evening's amusement. The same plays will be performed this evening. To-morrow evening the comedy of "The Merry Widow," will be produced for the first time in America.

California Theatre.

Herve's opera bouffe entitled "Le Petit Faust" was performed by the Aimee Troupe last night, and proved an immense success. The troupe generally have never appeared to such good advantage as comic actors as they did last evening. Mlle. Aimee as that sweet innocent, Marguerite, acted and sang brilliantly. Mons. Emile Jutean as Faust was particularly clever, Mlle Atani dressed, acted and sang the role of Mephisto splendidly. Mons. Lecuyer was wonderfully funny as Valentin, Mlle. Roland made a great hit in the character of la Dinsense. Mons. Deschamps did some capital comic acting as Anglo Saxon, and Mons. Duplan as a drunken coachman was immense. "Le Petit Faust" will be performed again this evening.

Opera House.

A very lively programme will be presented this evening. Welch and Rice in "The Mulcahy Twins," Little Mac and Charles Reed in "Quiet Lodgings," Bobby Newcomb in his world-renowned original song and dance, "The Big Sunflower," George S. Knight in German specialties, and others in performances set forth on our first page.

Palace Amphitheatre.

Katie Holloway's Consolidated Circus at the Palace Amphitheatre, is giving a splendid entertainment at remarkably low prices of admission. Among the stars, are the Princess Mollie, Laura and Harry Clark, Dorr and Son, and Worland and Decrow. The full programme appears on our first page.

Platt's Hall.

Victoria Woodhull lectured at this hall last night to a capital house. She will deliver another lecture this evening, which will be her last appearance. The subject will be "Through Fire; or the True and the False Socially."

Bella Union Theatre.

The local play of the "Streets of San Francisco," with all the company in the cast; the Japanese Troupe in their wonderful performances; "Untold Wealth," "Help," "The Blockade, "Family Jars" and "School," make a very strong bill at this house this week.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Toers and Ned Buckley on the end in the first part, and in "Chameel," with musical interludes and a variety of acts and sketches by the company, present a good bill at this house.

Woodward's Gardens.

There are thousands of objects of interest at these beautiful Gardens. Throngs of people visit them daily, and all enjoy themselves.

City Gardens.

The Annual Festival and Picnic of the Miner's Protective Association will be held at the City Gardens on Sunday and Monday next, on which occasion the Gardens will be transformed into a mining camp of the olden time, representing mining with a long tom; washing out gold with rockers; sinking a shaft; old times genuine miner's lunch; mining in all its branches; discovery of new diggings; staking out and jumping claims; cooking beans and slapjacks, etc. Grand concert and ball in the evening. Admission, fifty cents; children, half-price; under six years, free. Twelve thousand people visited the last Miner's Festival held at the City Gardens.

Schuetzen Park.

The Garibaldi Guard will hold their annual picnic at this Park on Sunday next. It is sure to be an enjoyable affair.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS DEATH.

"There's no such thing as death,"
To those who think aright;
'Tis but the racer casting off
What most impedes his flight;
'Tis but one little act,
Life's drama must contain;
One struggle keener than the rest,
And then an end of pain.

"There's no such thing as death;"
That which is thus miscalled,
Is life escaping from the chains
That have so long enthralled;
'Tis a once hidden star,
Piercing through the nigh',
To shine in gentle radiance forth
Amid its kindred light

"There's no such thing as death;"
In nature, nothing dies!
From each sad remnant of decay
Some forms of life arise,
The faded leaf that falls,
All sere and brown to earth,
Ere long will mingle with the shapes
That gave the flowres birth.

"There's no such thing as death;"
'Tis but the blossom spray,
Sinking before the coming fruit,
That seeks the coming ray;
'Tis but the bud displaced,
As comes the perfect flower;
'Tis faith exchanged for sight,
And weariness for power.

A Work of Art.

There is a man in the vicinity of Union Square who feels rich. He has been presented with a picture. One day last week he was invited by an artist to accompany him to Hoboken. He consented. They reached Hoboken, and, to prepare himself for his work, the artist entered a lager beer saloon, and took a drink. He didn't like to leave that drink in loneliness in his stomach, so he gave it numerous companions. As the sun was declining in the west, and the plaintive bullfrog was singing his melancholy songs, the two reached the spot where the artist was to paint his "Study of a Peculiar Tree." He fixed up his canvas, brought forth his tools, and went to work. When he had finished, which was in about two minutes, he carefully wrapped up the picture, and handing it to his companion, said, with great feeling: "Here, my good friend, I give it to you. When the sod shall cover the form of him who now clasps your hand, that picture will be invaluable. Sir, no greater work of art has been created in this century." The two then returned to New York. The recipient of the picture, anxious to exhibit his treasure to his friends, entered a place in Broadway, where a great many artists congregate, and calling all them together said: "Gentlemen, my friend Skylight has painted a picture which he has presented to me, and which he regards as one of the finest artistic creations of the century. Get ready to be astonished." He removed the cover. They were astonished. "What in thunder is it a picture of, anyhow?" asked one. "A study of a Peculiar Tree," was the answer. "A very peculiar one, I should say," said the one who had asked the question. "It looks more like a pyrotechnic serpent than a tree." "A tree!" said another. "It looks as much a tree as a spear of grass looks like the Hudson River.' And now a Broadway saloon has a picture hung up in it, on which there is a paper which bears this legend: "This is a conundrum: "What is it?"

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corvine keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Crossgrained and stingy? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, then a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. Special department for ladies. Everything neat as wax. Single tickets, 25 cents. Five for one dollar.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE ON JOHN McCULLOUGH'S HAMLET.

William Winter of the New York Tribune is generally acknowledged to be a fair critic. From him, therefore, (in spite of the fact that he, like the rest of the New Yorkers, has been for years accustomed to consider Edwin Booth's the only Hamlet,) we expected a just and intelligent criticism, and taking all the circumstances into consideration, we are very well satisfied with the following which appeared in the Tribune of the 19th:

Last night, and to a full house, Mr. McCullough represented Hamlet, this piece like its predecessor, being set in that elaborate and gorgeous scenery provided by Edwin Booth for former revivals. The effect that was wrought by Mr. McCullough upon the popular fancy may be inferred from the fact that he received three genuine recalls before the curtain, and that twice in the course of the great third act he so affected the feelings of his auditors that they broke forth into enthusiastic plaudits. The critical verdict, we think, should be equally whole-hearted, but not equally reckless. In Mr. McCullough's Hamlet the thoughtful observer sees the Kembel tradition, somewhat modified by the influence of Edwin Forrest, Its spirit is lovely; its form is symmetrical; its execution is at times robustious. There is nothing new about it, except its total lack of filagree ornamentation; it is severely, studiously, and intentionally simple. Such defects as occur in its execution result from the fact that Mr. McCullough has not yet fully acquired the power to make the passion that thrills his mind thrill also his action. In the climax of the play scene and in the killing of Polonius, which are great moments with him, his spiritual nature seemed to struggle for freedom that it could not entirely reach; and not only once—which was in the closet scene, after the second appearance of the Ghost—did the actor rise entirely above himself and become greatly the Hamlet of Shakespeare. It should also be said—in further comment on Mr. McCullough's method of execution—that he conveys this part over some physical obstacles. His face can express perplexity and trouble of mind more readily than misery and conflict of the soul, and his voice is attuned to the heroic rather than the philosophic and mournful emotions. Upon his ideal of Hamlet there is no need of protracted remark. It is the ideal generally presented, and it is perfectly definite. The actor knows exactly what he means and what he proposes to do, and he fulfills his design with explicit precision. The lack in his ideal may be indicated as that of ineffably mournful tenderness, commingled, not with material insanity, but with a spiritual craze. His Hamlet is too much the controller of circumstances and of himself. This is the old trouble of the stage, from whose necessity it springs; for should Hamlet be acted as he exists in Shakespeare he would be far too gentle for the footlights, and far too tame for the multitude. Mr. McCullough, in making him a man of action, makes no sacrifice of his refinement. His Hamlet is Prince and Scholar, and his interpretation of it is a beautiful piece of art.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or under wear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicates a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance, with a certain class of businessmen in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

The Dives to Fight the Law.

The proprietors of the beer cellars have met in council, formed a protective association, and raised funds to employ able legal talent to fight the law prohibiting women from selling liquor. The programme is to open to-night, or to-morrow night; and it is reported that it has been "fixed up" so that but one arrest will be made. They then test that case and carry it up to the higher courts. In the meanwhile the dance cellars will try and run on, pending the decision of their trial case. This is a very nice little programme, but it may not work so smoothly as contemplated.

The Ladies' Parson.

It is well known that the famous and eloquent preacher of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, is susceptible to the influence of the "sisters," especially if they be young and fair of form and feature. Ever busy he nevertheless finds time—once in a while, to break a lance in favor of the ladies—consequently being importuned by a committee of fair ones from the Packer Institute, he has consented to deliver the Baccalaureate address to the young ladies of graduating class of '74 on the fifteenth of June.

A Useful Patent.

A Milwaukee man has applied for a patent on a fountain pen, which, by the pressure of the thumb on a small rubber ball, projects a stream of ink through the holder and into the face of the fellow who is looking over your shoulder while you are writing. It lacks one essential however; it makes no provision for the afterclap.

A Hard Case.

The average Burlington, Iowa, saloon keeper must be bad, indeed. A learned divine in that city recently addressed one of them as follows: "Wretched man! If the bed of that river was bank high with the suds of salvation, and a June rise of piety coming down from the mountains, there wouldn't be enough to wash your feet."

A Hit.

The French press never loses an opportunity to "get back" at the Prussians, as will be seen by the following: "We learn with satisfaction that a celebrated locomotive factory in Prussia, not being able to work at a profit in consequence of the demand of Prussian workmen, is about to remove to Russia, where labor costs only one-fifth of the wages required by the Prussians."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

A Pleasant Location.

Persons desiring comfortable lodgings in a Central location, should visit the Alhambra, and inspect the fine suites of rooms to let there The building is a very fine one and is well lighted and ventilated.

Bailey in England.

The Danbury News man has arrived at Liverpool, and this is one of his experiences:

Coming back from the parks I spied from the cab window the unmistakable indication of what my soul had panted for years—what the soul of every student of the old world pants for from the cradle to its realization—the broken walls of a ruin. There they lay before me with the sunlight touching up their mosses, and bringing into strong relief their broken and worn edges. I bade the cabman to stop, and feasted my eyes on the sight. It was not a very large ruin, but it was a pretty good sized ruin for a Sunday. I pictured to myself the day when it stood as a whole, with its long line of masters alternating in the possession, and making the walls reverberate with the flow of mirth and banqueting. How many a merry step had passed along its corridors, and many a sad face had peered from its lattices. A flood of strange, weird reveries set in upon my soul and carried me by its power away down the ages that are gone. I said to the cabman: "How old a ruin is that?" pointing to the walls with a trembling finger. "That? That's a new 'ouse going up for Peter Stevenson, the linen draper on George street."

A Domestic Incident.

Scene.—Oh, most anywhere. Time.—Morning.

Sister—(home from boarding-school, to brother who never gets up till delay becomes dangerous). "Willy, the orient flames with golden splendor—arise! our morning refection awaits your presence!"

(William doesn't hear).

Mother—(shouts afterwards, and making a great clattering on the balusters with the broomstick). "Wi-i-i-i-i-i-illiam! get up this instant, you lazy dogskin you, and come down to breakfast!"

(William doesn't hear.)

Father—(a few minutes later). "BILL?"

William (springing out of bed). "I'm coming, sir!"

Not Smart.

People who are over wise must expect to pay for their whims as the Iowa man did. He went back on his own true love because she eat onions, and the jury gave her $3,200 damages. How much better for him if he had offset her by eating Limburger cheese.

Quite a Mistake.

"My son," said a benevolent stranger to a lovely golden-haired child, the other day "you look like a boy who had been brought up by affectionate parent's." "Was I? was I?" exclaimed the excited lad; "just look at my back!"

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

California Theatre.

This evening "Le Petit Faust," which has made a decided hit, and in which Mlle. Aimee, Mlle. Stani, Mlle Roland and MM. Jutau, Lecuyer, Deschamps, Duplan and Benedick appear to excellent advantage, will be presented again this evening. To-morrow night, Mlle. Aimee will take her benefit, and Offenbach's favorite opera of "La Perichole" will be performed.

Opera House.

Bobby Newcomb in song and dance eclipses all rivals, Welch and Rice are immense in "The Mulcahy Twins," Charley Reed is good in everything, Geo. S. Knight continues a great favorite in his Dutch specialties, and altogether a most attractive entertainment is given. "Love in All Corners" with Little Mac as Mike, concludes the evening's fun.

Maguire's New Theatre.

John Howson has made a hit in His specialty of "John Small." "A Tempest in a Teapot" will be performed again this evening together with the charming comedy of "The Merry Widow," which will be presented for the first time in America. The full cast is published on our first page.

Palace Amphitheatre.

Katie Holloway's Circus at this favorite place of amusement attracts crowds of visitors. There will be a matinee performance to-day. The Princess Mollie, Laura and Harry Clark, George Holland, Young Leo Carlo, and a host of others appear.

Bella Union Theatre.

The Japanese in their great feats, Miss Alice Ross in character changes, Miss Jennie Johnson and others in "The Streets of San Francisco," E. H. Archer in vocal selections, Ed. Murray in his "Budget of Fun" and many other attractions are offered at this house.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Toers, Ned Buckley, Miss Ida May, Johnny Price and a lot of other favorites appear here nightly and present a capital entertainment. The full programme is published on our first page.

Woodward's Gardens.

Among the new attractive features at these beautiful gardens may be mentioned the baby camel and the wonderful ghost window, which will be on exhibition every day this week. The pants and moccasins worn by Capt. Jack when executed may also be seen here.

City Gardens.

The Annual Festival and Picnic of the Miner's Protective Associaton will be held at the City Gardens on Sunday and Monday next, on which occasion the Gardens will be transformed into a mining camp of the olden time, representing mining with a long tom; washing out gold with rockers; sinking a shaft; old times genuine miner's lunch; mining in all its branches; discovery of new diggings; staking out and jumping lains; cooking beans and slapjacks, etc. Grand concert and ball in the evening. Admission, fifty cents; children, half-price; under six years, free. Twelve thousand people visited the last Miner's Festival held at the City Gardens.

Schuetzen Park.

The Garibaldi Guard will hold their annual picnic at this Park on Sunday next. It is sure to be an enjoyable affair.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here

John McCullough in New York.

The following despatch was received from New York last night:

NEW YORK, 1st.—John McCullough's successful season at Booth's Theatre closed on Saturday with a most attractive representation of "King John." Mr. McCullough has made so good an impression on the New York public that desires are expressed that he will be often heard on the metropolitan stage. He plays "Richelieu" in Washington on Tuesday and will return here at once thereafter and will leave for San Francisco in a few days, to return again in August, to open Booth's Theatre under the new management in a new historical play by Dion Boucicault, in which Mr. McCullough will of course be the star.

Charles Fechter.

This eminent actor will arrive by the Overland train to-night; though the train will not get in until after midnight, a portion of the track having been washed away beyond the mountains. The box sheet for the Fechter season at Maguire's New Theatre is now open, and reserved seats for "Ruy Blas," in which Mr. Fechter will open on Monday night, can now be obtained at the box office. Those wishing to obtain good seats had better apply early as there will evidently be a rush for seats during the latter part of the week.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Nellson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

PRO AND CON.

BY J. BRANDER MATTHEWS.

I forget him? Not at all!
Once I met him at a ball;
I was seated when he greeted,
Gently asking leave to call:
I said, "Yes," when he entreated—
He pro-found was—I con-cented.

Many another time we met,
For my brother was his pet;
But it ended, and, offended,
In a quarrel soon we get!
Shine and shade are often blended—
He pro-yoked and I con-tented.

Here's the moral for the day,—
Never quarrel! It don't pay!
Quite contented, I relented,
Gazing at him, smiling, gay,
When he told me he lamented:—
He pro-posed and I con-sented.

Anecdote of Sydney Smith.

The following is related of Sydney Smith, and that it is founded on fact there can be but little doubt, exemplifying, as it does, that peculiar and matchless humor for which Sydney was so remarkable. The thing occurred in Edinburgh, when Jeffrey, Brougham, Sydney and the rest of that brilliant constellation of men of genius were shedding so great a lustre upon "Auld Reekie" and the world. There was, at the time, a literary pretender and bore in Edinburgh, whose everlasting subject of discourse was "The North Pole," and whose delight it was to inflict his theme upon every patient listener. He met Jeffrey in the street one day, and after the usual salutation, at once introduced his favorite subject. "D—n the North Pole," vociferated Jeffrey, and extricating himself from the bore's grasp, pursued the even t nor of his way. The former, wincing under Jeffrey's abrupt treatment, also went on his way, when, encountering the good natured Sydney, he related to the latter (with much chagrin and disgust) what Jeffrey had said. "Ah!" (says Sydney), "I wouldn't mind it. We all know Jeffrey. You'll hardly believe it, but in a conversation I had with Jeffrey, the other day, he actually 'spoke disrespectfully of the Equator!'"

A Short Temperance Lecture.

This laconic but sensible German ought to be sent out to lecture to the people on temperance: "I sall tell you how it vas. I drank mine lager; den I put mine hand on mine head, and there vosh von pain. Den I put mine hand in mine pocket, and dere vas noting. So I jine the demberance. Now dere is no pain in mine head, and de pain in mine body vas all gone away. I put mine hand in mine pocket, and dere vas twenty dollars. So I stay mid de demberance."

A Valuable and Portable Wife.

A French chemist is said to have condensed the body of his wife into the space of an ordinary seal, and had her highly polished and set in a ring. He made a handsome income by betting with lapidaries and others that they could not tell the material of the set in three guesses, and, after pocketing the money, would burst into tears, and say, "It is my dear, dear wife. I wear her on my finger to keep alive pleasant remembrances of her."

A Few Deficiencies.

A land agent in Colorado remarked to an inquiring emigrant that all that is needed to make the place a paradise was a comfortable climate, water and good society. "That is all that is lacking in hell!" was the reply.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Do You Feel

Crossgrained and stiuny? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, than a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. Special department for ladies. Everything neat as wax. Single tickets, 25 cents. Five for one dollar.

Spring Style Hats.

Light, beautifully finished and graceful in shape, the new Spring style of Hats manufactured at "The" Hat Store, 647 Washington street (second hat store below Kearny street), is just the thing to make a man look a hundred per cent. better. Don't wear a shabby old hat. Go to "The Hat Store" for a new one. Prices reduced. 3-v

A Love Feast.

It is pleasant to behold the editors of the East and West, and South and North, meeting in convention, and burying the scorching pen, and saying kind words to each, and instead of calling harsh names and saying sarcastic things, being as pleasant as man and wife after a make-up. Yet it is not pleasant to think that these gentlemen will return to their homes with a better acquaintance with the failings of one another and when the war once more breaks out among them they will forget having hailed each other as "Worthy Brother Smith," and "My Excellent Friend Jones." When the editor of the Swamptown Bugle is told by the editor of the Blushing Eagle that "his statements are something worse than mere ignorance," that honorable gentleman will reply by saying that "the editor of the Eagle's writings are the emanation of a whisky keg. We know what he can perform as a free drinker." Then the Bugle man will inform his readers that "the editor of the Eagle can eat more stale oysters, gobble down more pie, and envelope more food of every sort than any other hog in the State." Then the war will wax hot, and each will inform the other that he is a liar and a slave, a drunkard, a gambler, a cheat, a fraud, and a wretch unfit to live. They will entirely forget what good friends they were during the convention. We never take any stock in editorial conventions. We don't want our editorial brethren to know the eloquence we are capable of at a dinner table, nor the excellence of our judgment in free liquors. But then, it isn't all editors who are as modest as we.

Taking Advantage.

A San Antonio man, a gen'lm'n of course, took home a revolving dice-box wherewith to cheer his wife's drooping spirits. After a game or two for fun, he proposed a throw for who should cut the wood next morning; he won. Then he offered to try for who should bring up the coal and light the fires for the ensuing week; he won again. He then tendered her a chance for satisfaction on a throw for who should go to market for the next month. Result—three sixes for the husband, and the next minute he and a flat-iron went rapidly out of the front door together.

Where we Were.

Young lawyers have sometimes an absurd way of identifying themselves with their clients. The other day one of these gentlemen ran that style of speech to its utmost limit by saying—"Gentlemen of the jury, we shall prove, that, at the moment the policeman says he saw us pick the complainant's pocket, we were actually locked up in the station-house, in a state of intoxication."

An Absurd Restriction.

By a recent royal decree in Sweden every Swedish University is open to women students, who may pass examinations and obtain diplomas like the men in every branch except two—theology and the law are the studies from which alone they are to be excluded.

Managers

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 33 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or under wear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance, with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend. "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

Clara Morris in "Camille."

We make the following extract from a very lengthy criticism in the New York Spirit of the Times: Camille is the type of the refined lorette of good family, generally the orphan of some military or naval officer, over whom the state exercised care, and to whom it gave the excellent education of St. Denis. Refined in mind by study, in manners by discipline, these women left such institutions with the cravings of refinement, an honored man, and a frameless pocket. The looseness of Parisian morals forced many of these uncorrupted but dowerless women to become mistresses. Their hearts were untainted by habitual prostitution, their liasons generally constant, and within them dwelt strongly the moral teachings of the orphan's school. The anomaly of the position into which sin forced these women was that Dumas desired to show. His play would have been lessonless with a Nancy Sykes for a heroine. On the contrary, the greater the refinement of soul and sense, the clearer the grandeur of the girl's sacrifice. That sacrifice is respect. Society had cast her out; and in Armand's heart alone did she find that respect for her womanhood dwelt. This is why she loved Armand as her than De Varville. Armand would wed her. De Varville, when his novel passion had spent its force, would hold her "something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse." All through the first act the fact that Camille's love is won by Armand's respect for her, is exquisitely shown by the skill of Dumas. To such a creature the life of a wanton has no charms. Her nature blooms only in a purer atmosphere. That such a girl must be ingenious at the commencement of her vicious career; and unworldly during its early progress, is certain. It is at such a state that Miss Morris presents her. She gives us none of the wanton's tricks, none of her airs, and perhaps none of her graces. Such a conception necessarily curtails the opportunity for a display of all of an actress' arts. But it is not saying too much to add that Miss Morris did not need such occasions to exhibit her talents, and the execution of her conception was far more gratifying than if she had fascinated us with a wanton's wiles. Doche, the original and popular creator of Camille in Paris, had Dumas at her elbow when she played the part, and her conception was not unlike Miss Morris.' It was precisely this that made the charm of Doche's performance, and this constitutes in a still greater degree the beauty of Miss Morris' conception. Doche had the advantage of knowing the women she was typifying, of knowing them personally, so in picturing the effect of sin on a refined and educated girl like Camille, she was perfectly at home. But what Doche had not was the infinite lightning-like variety of expression which Miss Morris displays in the part. Doche's eyes and face could not talk—Miss Morris' do nothing else. Doche reasoned out the picture with Dumas to explain it. Miss Morris feels and play the part as Dumas tells us he felt it, as the tears blotted the pages on which he wrote it. The explanations of emotion, its analyses, are the work of talent; their sympathetic reproduction is indicative of genius. The expectations of those who anticipated that Miss Morris would be absolutely great as Camille were not realized. But few left the theatre, however, dissatisfied with her performance.

Severe.

In moving for the sentence of a man who had been convicted of taking a bribe for his vote at Louisville, Ky., Baird, the prosecuting attorney, said that no punishment could be too great, no infamy too damning. The convict deserved to be hanged by the neck to the nearest tree like Judas Iscariot.

Wellerism.

Woman—God Bless Her.

Women have at last taken their destiny into their own hands, and propose to fight it out if it takes all summer. They are no longer satisfied to rock the cradle and administer household affairs, but have entered the arena of literature, physic, law, business and politics.

They have been oppressed with the galling chains of drudgery long enough, and have mounted the rostrum to proclaim their policy for the future, and even knocked at the door of our legislative halls, hoping to obtain a seat, a salary, a vote, and possibly, the opportunity to receive a bribe.

As all will confess that the average woman is not naturally so vicious as the average man, we may look for an improvement in the management of public affairs when woman is fully recognized as the equal of man.

A Bit of Eloquence.

Tom Marshall, of Kentucky, was the most eloquent man of the old Whig party, not excepting Henry Clay. In a phillipic against Andrew Jackson he closed by saying: "He crushed the United States Bank with the heel of his military boot, and retiring to the Hermitage, he cheated the very devil himself by turning Presbyterian."

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Opera House.

A splendid first part is given at this house. It is followed by an interlude comprising Bobby Newcomb in his great song and dance "The Big Sunflower," Welch and Rice in "The Mulcahy Twins." Billy Sweatnam, Con. T. Murphy in the very amusing act of "Bring on Your Ghost," and Little Mac, Charles Reed, George S. Knight and others in "Love in All Corners."

Maguire's New Theatre.

A capital entertainment was given here last night. In the comedy of "The Merry Widow," Miss Sallie Hinckley as Mrs. Charles Mildmay, the fascinating and merry-hearted widow, was admirable, Miss Mary Wells did some very clever acting as old Mrs. Mildmay, her simulation of blindness being particularly natural and effective, and A. D. Billings was excellent as Docket. In the play of "A Tempest in a Teapot," with which the performance commenced, Charles Edmonds as Arthur Rattleton, Miss Sallie Hinckley as Anita, and D. J. Sherwood in the small part of a waiter, all acquitted themselves well. The same bill will be played to-night. On Saturday afternoon and evening, Miss Sallie Hinckley will appear as Mercy Merrick in "The New Magdalen."

California Theatre.

To-night that most charming of opera bouffe artistes, Mlle. Aimee will take her benefit and will, we are sure, have a bumper. The ever-popular opera of "La Perichole" will be performed with Mlle. Aimee as Perichole, Juteau as Pequillo, and the cast published on our first page. In the second act Aimee will sing "The Aimee Waltz," composed for her by Mons. Van Ghele.

Palace Amphitheatre.

Miss Katie Holloway in her great scarf equestrian act, Laura and Harry Clark on the double trapeze, Dorr and Son in "La Perche," L'Roy in a hurdle act and a great number of other attractions will be presented here to-night.

Platt's Hall.

On Tuesday evening, June 9th, a grand entertainment will be given in aid of Mrs. Julia Melville's pupils. The Messrs. Kelleher, Barnett, Henry Edwards, John Howson, Miss Susan Galton, Jennie Lee and others will make up a programme that cannot fail to be good. The wardrobe made for this occasion by a celebrated French modiste, for the different ladies will be, to say the least, elegant.

Bella Union Theatre.

"Untold Wealth," "Help," "Blockade," "Family Jars," and "School," are among the acts to be played at this house to-night. The Japanese will appear again this evening, and Miss Alice Ross, Ed. Murray, H. E. Archer and others will present their specialtie.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

George C. Thompson in "Uncle Jeff," Johnny Thurston "One Night in a Country Hotel," Ned Buckley in first part, and Miss Ida May in ballads, present a very attractive entertainment here.

Woodward's Gardens.

Among the new attractive features at these beautiful gardens may be mentioned the baby camel and the wonderful ghost window, which will be on exhibition every day this week. The pants and moccasins worn by Capt. Jack when executed may also be seen here.

City Gardens.

The Annual Festival and Picnic of the Miner's Protective Association will be held at the City Gardens on Sunday and Monday next, on which occasion the Gardens will be transformed into a mining camp of the olden time, representing mining with a long tom; washing out gold with rockers; sinking a shaft; old times genuine miner's lunch; mining in all its branches; discovery of new diggings; staking out and jumping claims; cooking beans and slapjacks, etc. Grand concert and ball in the evening. Admission, fifty cents; children, half-price; under six years, free. Twelve thousand people visited the last Miner's Festival held at the City Gardens.

Schuetzen Park.

The Garibaldi Guard will hold their annual picnic at this Park on Sunday next. It is sure to be an enjoyable affair.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here

Fechter's Support.

Fechter arrived this morning from the East at 8 o'clock. His support during the coming season at Maguire's New Theatre, will consist of Edward Arnot, late leading man at Wallack's Theatre, New York, and formerly of the Haymarket Theatre London, where he played the leading roles in Gilbert's comedies, Miss Lizzie Price, well-known when here formerly, as an actress of much talent and decided genius, and who has attained a high rank in the profession in the Eastern States, and Miss Kate Browning from Daly's Theater, New York. With such artists as the above named, and Miss Sallie Hinckley, Miss Mary Wells, A. D. Billings, Charles Edmonds and others comprised in the stock company of Maguire's New Theatre, there is no fear but that Fechter's support will be all that could be desired.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

THE LUNATIC'S LAMENT.

Her beauty was the best on earth,
Her face sublimely fair,
Divine, or regal was her birth,
And angel-blonde her hair.

The fragrance of the cowslip'd mead
When cow-slipp'd down that way,
Was in her breath illustrated—
So was the new-mown hay.

Morn's glory filled the atmosphere,
And morning glory vines
Did drop redundant dewdrops where
This angel-strayed reclines.

But never did the eyes serene
Stray from the book she read,
Of this garden sprite, invielate,
Upon a violet bed.

Rights.

There are two kinds of rights—civil and natural. Each individual should be entitled to both of these rights, but it is more important if one must be lost, that natural rights be maintained. By nature persons have a right to life, and therefore are entitled to some portion of the earth on which to live, yet witness daily the strange inconsistency of people clamoring for civil rights who have even been denied their natural right without raising a voice against the wrong! They want to sit in the front row in theatres, and be seen conspicuously in public places, but are as silent as oysters over the robbery of their natural rights. And in this persons of color are not alone. Multitudes as well as they run after will-o'-the-wisps while they pass by the things of worth and substance unheeded. Let men be established in their natural rights and all other rights are within their grasp. "If I have a home and a cow," says Poor Richard, "everybody says good morrow, but if I have neither they pass me by unnoticed."

Gounod and Livingston.

The composer of "Faust" has produced a cantata in two parts, for voice and grand orchestra, in commemoration of the mournful fate of the great African explorer, the bringing back of his remains to England, and their gorgeous interment in Westminster Abbey. The voice part is set to Lord Houghton's lines on Livingston. The orchestral portion of the work is pronounced to be in Gounod's best vein, and of a highly descriptive character, and the free and best uses of the different instruments, especially the bassoons, horns, oboes and violins are made.

Very Funny.

A facetious citizen, in a particularly playful humor, the other day, having occasion to reprove his better half, knocked her down with a Bible remarking, "Overcoming evil with good."

Uncomfortable.

The last advices from "spirit land" are that Charles Sumner was greatly "surprised and confused" to find himself placed at once nearest that "once erring brother," Preston S. Brooks!

Cremation Once More.

Fadover tells us Mrs. Fadover says, now cremation is the fashion, she supposes you'll have to speak of your wedding dress and your burial suit.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast.
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish bock."

Do You Feel

Crossgrained and stingy? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, then a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. Special department for ladies. Everything neat as wax. Single tickets, 25 cents. Five for one dollar.

Spring Style Hats.

Light, beautifully finished and graceful in shape, the new Spring style of Hats manufactured at "The" Hat Store, 647 Washington street (second hat store below Kearny street), is just the thing to make a man look a hundred per cent. better. "Lady of The Lake," at Niblo's.

In referring to the re-opening of Niblo's Garden with "The Lady of the Lake," the New York Herald says:

The theatre was re-opened last evening with the re-production of the romantic spectacular drama compiled from Sir Water Scott's epic poem "The Lady of the Lake." This play has not had a place upon the stage for a number of years, and as it had great favor with the theatre-goers of the last generation it has been fitly revived to mark the return to the post of manager Mr. Charles R. Thorne, Sr., who years ago catered to the tastes of the New York theatre-loving population. It was admirably put upon the stage. In the way of scenery nothing could be desired, and in the matter of dresses of the performers there was as strict adherence as could be to the directions of the poem and to what, with a little license, may be termed the sartorial records of the period of the play.

Without these things and the equally important accessory of good music, the play that has been hacked out of Walter Scott's great poem would be of the most depressing kind. There is in it, when it is considered apart from its accessories, naught but haziness. No character is sharply defined, and the errant "Knight of Snowdon" the only one in which is retained some of the poetic beauty and chivalric bravery with which the poet endowed it. But as the play is not given with the expectation that it can stand upon its inherent merits, there is small need to criticise it. With all its accompaniments it makes an entertainment that should be welcomed. It is spectacular, but its scenery does not vitiate the taste; it will rather educate the quality in those who have been wont to applaud "Black Crook" spectacles and fairy transformation scenes. The cast of the play is very large, and embraces some very good actors.

Max Adeler in the Danbury News.

I went into the secondary school in New Castle, the other day, just as the teacher was hearing the class recite in "definitions."

"John, spell 'parson'."

The boy spelled it correctly.

"Now, what does it mean?"

"Dunno, sir."

"William, what is a 'parson'?"

"Dunno, sir."

"Now, Henry, I want you to tell me what a 'parson' is, or I'll bang you with this ruler. What is a 'parson'?"

"Why, I s'pose he's 'one who parses,' of course."

Then the recitation paused, while Henry was dressed down with the ruler, and meantime I left.

Incredible.

The San Jose Mecury says: The Chronicle's report of Victoria Woodhull's lecture, states that some of her expressions "made the reporters blush." We guess not. The reporters for the San Francisco dailies are not of the blushing kind. If Victoria can raise a blush on their cheeks she could make a redwood picket turn purple.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Nellson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the ensuing thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance; with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

Enterprise.

The Chronicle had a "fuller account" of the Derby race than any of its contemporaries. The other papers only gave the number of horses started for the race, the first, second and third in the betting just before the start, the time of the race, condition of the course and other minor particulars. The Chronicle commenced its cablegram as follows:

The great event of the Summer racing season, and, indeed, of all English racing, is the race for the Derby stakes on Epsom Downs.

This was "exclusive, to the Chronicle" no other paper had it. Still more exclusive and unusual intelligence follows:

An immense crowd was present, the roads to the course being thronged with pedestrians and carriages from an early hour this morning. The railroad trains also carried large crowds to the scene. The business of London, as usual, was almost entirely suspended.

This is extraordinary news. The same circumstances have attended every Derby race since the stakes were first inaugurated, but the Chronicle favors its readers highly in alluding to them once more. The particulars which we mention above, as given by the other papers are for the most part omitted by the Chronicle, but to that paper alone are the public of San Francisco indebted for the news that the Derby is the great event of the Summer racing season, that there was an immense crowd, that some went in carriages, some on foot, and some in railroad trains. Just fancy having this sort of thing telegraphed by cable and across the continent. Of course it was. The Chronicle doesn't care for money, and it would scorn to pad its telegraphic despatches. There's nothing like enterprise—except cheek.

Ungenerous Journalism.

We notice with pain that the Chronicle with a disregard of the amenities of journalism which is extraordinary, has neglected to notice the reappearance of the Sun. The latter paper on the contrary has been liberal in its notices of the Chronicle, and does not seem at all inclined to ignore the existence of that paper, though it may be considered in some measure its rival. We are sure that we need only call the attention of the urbane proprietors of the Chronicle to this over sight to have it rectified.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen!
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
Over which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here!
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a T."
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'd
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

REMEMBER THE ADAGE.

The old adage runs "Don't look a gift horse in the mouth." There are a great many people in San Francisco who do not appear to have much veneration for this saying. Nine men out of ten while applauding the liberality of James Lick, think that if his property had belonged to them they would have made a better disposition of it. One man would have devoted it to starting a colony of small farmers, giving each land and everything necessary to commence life, another would have started an immense Crystal Palace, free to the public. We are sure that none of these would have made such an admirable disposition of it as has its owner. The Observatory is a gift to the world and a recognition of the great work accomplished by Science. Literature is recognized in the gift to the Mercantile Library. Patriotism in the Monument to the author of "Star Spangled Banner." Friendship in the gift to the Pioneers. Pride in California, in the gift of Bronze Statuary illustrating the History of the State. Charity in the donation to the Protestant Orphan Asylum. Filial Devotion in the appropriation for the erection of Monuments over his father and grandfather. Family ties in a similar memorial to his sister. Humanity in his donation to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Cleanliness in the establishment of free baths, and Regard for the Heathen, in the establishment of a benevolent institution in San Jose. James Lick has done nobly. Few men would have done so well.

A Nice Sort of Man.

The editor of the Patriot, a paper which rumor has it is published, or was until very recently published in San Jose, is thus described by the Mercury: The Patriot has the facial area to lecture us on the "decencies of journalism." That is pretty good, coming from one who has been led around the streets by the ear, cowhided, had his nose pulled, the doors of private citizens shut in his face, and has been lampooned and reviled in every conceivable manner for his abuse of the privileges of the press; from one who can be bought to support or oppose any man or measure for a few dollars; who is known throughout the State as a gross libeler, slanderer, and infamous old wretch; whose very presence is a stench wherever he goes: a lecture on the amenities of journalism from this source is decidedly rich.

Rochefort.

The New York Times speaking of Rochefort, says:

The leaders of the Commune, who have communicated with him, and who claim to understand his plans and motives best, say that after he leaves New York he will go to England, and will make that country his home until such a change of rulers is made as will permit him again to live in Paris. His two children by the woman whom he married on her death-bed, after he had been declared a prisoner, will there join him, and he will superintend their education in England. It has been hinted that the fact that the ex-Empress and the son of Napoleon III. reside in England has influenced M. Rochefort in choosing his future home.

If Rochefort tries starting a paper in England, and telling such lies about the son as he did of the father, he will find that country a rather unpleasant place to live in.

We Can't Help It.

We cannot refrain from publishing the following paragraph, though we know that the effect of it will be to send Harry Andrews, of Woodward's Gardens off to Perry, Georgia, to-morrow or next day:

You can buy alligators five feet long, at Perry, Ga., for a dollar apiece. Now's your time.

Very Sad.

The women having been prevented from invading the premises of liquor dealers in Cincinnati and praying them into a state of distraction, the Gazette snuffles as follows:

There is no crime in the calendar that is more swiftly punished in this blessed old city than praying. This offense is of so dark and flagrant a character that the whole majesty of the law is promptly put forth for its suppression.

Perhaps if these praying women would read their bibles they would discover that there were times and seasons even for prayer. Praying on the housetops, (or on the sidewalks) is there discountenanced and a private chamber is recommended. All the praying that is necessary, can very well be done in a private room, but the other kind of praying pays better. It is a pity these women shouldn't be allowed to make prayer a nuisance to the public of Cincinnati, but it happens that even people who don't pray have rights in the United States.

AN OPEN LETTER

From a Known Business House of this City.

TO THE PEOPLE OF SAN FRANCISCO AND State of California—As reform is now the cry all over the State, and every man and woman trying to become economical, I wish to call your attention to a particular subject, and that is, when you wish to invest a dollar to do so, and go where you will get your money's worth; when you make a purchase, go to the house that manufactures and asserts the article direct, and you are sure to get money. To find such a house go to S. POPPER'S new shirt manufactory and gents' furnishing goods establishment, Nos. 625 Kearny street, cor. Sutter and Bush, and 627 Kearny street, cor. Bush and Pine, the oldest and leading shirt manufacturing establishment in the city. Mr. S. Popper will sell you not, or retail at manufacturers' prices—that's too thin; but he can sell a better made and more perfect-fitting shirt, superior quality, at a more reasonable price than any house in the city; the same in underwear, gents' furnishing goods, etc. Shirts made to order and satisfaction warranted. Gentlemen coming to the city please remember this, and call before purchasing elsewhere.

Maguire's New Theatre.

The play entitled "A Tempest in a Teapot," and the capital comedy of "A Merry Widow," in which some very clever acting is done by Miss Sallie Hinckley, A. D. Billings, Miss Mary Wells, Miss Fanny Young and Charles Edmonds afforded much entertainment to a fashionable audience last night. This evening and at the matinee to-morrow, Miss Sallie Hinckley will appear as Mercy Merlick, in "The New Magdalen," and will, we are sure, make a success. The box sheet for the Fechter season, which commences on Monday, is now open.

California Theatre.

Mlle. Aimee had a splendid benefit last night. The audience were enthusiastic in their plaudits and the popular opera of "La Perichole," was splendidly rendered. "The Aimee Waltz," in the second act was charmingly sung by Mlle. Aimee and was vociferously applauded. La Perichole by the beneficiary was a very lively performance, and the latter song was sung with delicious feeling. Mons. Emile Juteau was very successful in the role of Piquillo, Mons. Duchesne was in his glory in that of Don Andreas de Ribeira, and all engaged in the representation sang and acted their respective roles admirably. "La Perichole" will be repeated to-night, to-morrow afternoon and evening. Sunday evening "Le Petit Faust," will be produced for the last time.

Opera House.

This evening, and at the matinee to-morrow, Bobby Newcomb will perform his original song and dance 'The Big Sun flower," Billy Sweetnam, Charles Reed and Con. T. Murphy will appear in the screaming farce entitled "Bring on Your Ghost," Welch and Rice as "The Mulcahy Twins," George S. Knight in German comicalities, Little Mac and Charles Read in "Rats," and others in "Love in All Corners."

Palace Amphitheatre.

To-night and at the matinee to-morrow, Miss Katie Holloway, the graceful equestrienne, Dorr and son, Young Leo Carlo, Laura and Harry Clark, George Holland, W. Warner, the Princess Mollie, the trick horse Zebra, and all the stars will appear. This combination of excellent artistes cannot fail to please all who witness their performance.

Bella Union Theatre.

Miss Lena Proctor will appear this evening in the sensation play of "The Woman of the World," Miss Alice Ross will present her serio-comic gems, Ed. Murray his "Budget of Fun," Fred Ritchie will appear in Dutch Blunders and a great number of other artistes will perform. Col. Mandeville and Miss Maggie Maguire are underlined.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Lucre, Ned Buckley, Miss Ida May, Geo. C. Thompson, Fanny Webster, Mlle. Blanche and a host of others will appear to-night in a great bill.

Woodward's Gardens.

Among the new attractive features at these beautiful gardens may be mentioned the baby camel and the wonderful ghost window, which will be on exhibition every day this week. The pants and moccasins worn by Capt. Jack when executed may also be seen here.

City Gardens.

The Annual Festival and Picnic of the Miner's Protective Association will be held at the City Gardens on Sunday and Monday next, on which occasion the Gardens will be transformed into a mining camp of the olden time, representing mining with a long tom; washing out gold with rockers; sinking a shaft; old times genuine miner's lunch; mining in all its branches; discovery of new diggings; staking out and jumping claims; cooking beans and slapjacks, etc. Grand concert and ball in the evening. Admission, fifty cents; children, half-price; under six years, free. Twelve thousand people visited the last Miner's Festival held at the City Gardens.

Schuetzen Park.

The Garibaldi Guard will hold their annual picnic at this Park on Sunday next. It is sure to be an enjoyable affair.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Charles Fechter.

On Monday evening, this great actor, so celebrated on both continents for the grace, dash and inspiration of his stage personations, will make his first appearance in San Francisco at Maguire's New Theatre. Commencing life as a student at the easel, and a sculptor, he found his way on the Parisian stage, schooled in the graces of Art, and at once achieved success. It was here his genius gave life to such characters as Armand Duval in "Camille," the twin brothers Dei Franchi in "The Corsican Brothers," the Count in "Pauline," and other original parts, many of which were written for him and have since become famous. He then went to London and achieved a world-wide fame for his Shakespearian and other personations. His later triumphs in this country, are well-known to all our readers. That Mr. Fechter will give us many new dramatic revelations we may be sure of, and that his engagement will be a great success there can be no doubt.

Serenade to Fechter.

The great tragedian was serenaded at the Occidental Hotel last night by the musicians of San Francisco under the direction of Geo. T. Evans. The band numbered forty pieces.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since.

ODE TO WHISKY.

BY THE REV. MR. TEMPERANCE.

O, Whisky, Whisky! The evil thou hast done
Is doubtless great, but from thy very name
Which blatant Churchmen seize upon
To aggrandise themselves and bring them fame
And money, which "reforms" oft have won,
More evil flows, (and not unmixed with shame),
Than thou hast bred e'en in "the gutter-sunk"
Or from the "Patriarch of two world's drunk."

Old Captain Noah but got a little merry
And much rejoiced how very lucky he
Had been in his most bold attempt to ferry
His "broad horn" o'er a swelled and boundless sea,
A circumstance to make most mortals cheery,
Which every one will readily agree,
And for that, "drunkard" holy Church proclaims him,
When really no good honest person blames him.

Temperance a virtue is, admired by all,
Even by those who farthest from it stray—
Temperance in all things, whether great or small,
Practiced by votaries without display,
Is charming, pleasing ever to recall,
But when sleek Churchmen, both by night and day,
Harrangue on temperance as we now see,
They are intemperate to the last degree.

When God made all things and pronounced them "good,"
These Churchmen seem to think He did not know
There was a Devil in the solitude
Of darkness, who did long with stealthy blow
With evil to destroy all he made good.
He once caught napping or something so,
And they, kind-hearted souls must volunteer,
To keep the God OF ALL from mischief clear.

And when God said He "had created all,"
These temperance shriekers intimate He Was—
The Devil, who caused Eve's and Adam's fall,
Created sin and whisky, and deems
His power, hint 'twould be best for him to call
On them for aid on earth to supervise
The ways and means by which he may compel
The black Old Boy to hasten back to hell.

If they prescribe what our drink shall be
Why may they not o'erlook our eating too?
Dictate what we must think, and say, and see,
What on week days and what on Sundays do.
If from our hearts all carnal sin would free
Then banish women from our saintly view—
These "Christian Statesmen" are so deuced knowing
They own all wisdom according to their shewing.

Fanatical law making far surpasses
All ever known in foolish liquor laws,
And men have proved themselves a set of asses
In almost every section, line and clause.
Sure it is time the people rise in masses
And castigate those fellows till they pause,
For see to what their lawlessness will lead
If by the people suffered to proceed.

Were temperance men to turn to agriculture
And labor hard in tilling the rich soil,
Mankind would be thus freed of many a vulture
Who'd rather shriek for prey than live by toil.
These pirate cormorants, lacking wit and culture.
All that they seek for, all they hope is spoil,
And but for that, they agitate society
With large pretensions to the greatest piety.

But if these saints could possibly succeed
In this, their pious little game, would they
Then be content? Their labors cease? Indeed!
No, no, God in the Constitution next—
And state religion, with a bran new creed,
With forms of worship, many a pious text,
Themselves the rulers, of this holy school—
I tell them, no, the people still must rule!

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Nelson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

Do You Feel

Crossgrained and stingy? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, then a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. Special department for ladies. Everything neat as wax. Single tickets, 50 cents. Five for one dollar.

Spring Style Hats.

Light, beautifully finished and graceful in shape, the new Spring style of Hats manufactured at "The" Hat Store, 647 Washington street (second hat store below Kearny street), is just the thing to make a man look a hundred per cent. better. Don't wear a shabby old hat. Go to "The Hat Store" for a new one. Prices reduced. 3-v

Cremation.

The following lines are suggested by the great cremation excitement, which is the theme of so many pens. Instead of the usual sentiment beginning, "Beneath this sod," etc., we should have something after the manner of the following:

Kind friend, after many a trial,
And after a life of denial,
I'm resting myself
On the top of this shelf,
Pass on and peruse the next phial.

In the case of accidental cremation, induced by a careless use of the fitful kerosene, the inscription might be partly a description, as for instance:

This was a young lady of station,
Who favored the plan of cremation;
When no one was nigh her
She lighted a fire
With coal oil. Result—conflagration.

The infelicities incident to married life might be delicately hinted at in words to this effect:

Old Mr. McGinnis and wife,
Who never were mated in life,
In death are cre—mated;
And thus aggregated
They rest in one jar without strife.

Occasionally it might happen that during the process of cremation, on a very windy day, the ashes of two persons, who rejoiced in separate identities, would get blown together; in which case, they could be divided equally between two vessels placed side by side, and the reliable inscriptionist allowed to proceed substantially as follows:

Put up by his father and mother:—
Our Johnny, or else his big brother:
The ashes got mixed
Ere the bottles were fixed,
N. B.—This label will do for the other.

Above Such a Trick.

A New Hampshire farmer wanted a farmhand, and was applied to by an Irishman who wanted to work. The farmer objected to engaging Pat on the ground that two Irishmen previously in his employ had died on his hands. "Then you object to hiring me for that do ye?" said Pat. Faith and I can bring you ricommendations from many a place where I've worked that I never played such a trick!"

Forfeited her Claim.

A young wife who found her husband "half seas over" and towed him home by the ear, forfeited her claim to salvage by calling him a "worthless scamp."

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. F. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or under wear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England clothe, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

PACIFIC COAST DRAMATIC NEWS.

SACRAMENTO.—The Warm Spring Indians, under Donald McKay, are to exhibit at the Metropolitan Theatre this afternoon and evening and to-morrow at Agricultural Park, when the Indians will appear on horseback. On Monday and Tuesday next, John Wilson's Circus will give entertainments.

SAN JOSE.—Donald McKay and his Warm Spring Indians exhibited at the Opera House on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Canon Kingsley lectured at Music Hall on "Westminster Abbey" on Monday. On Tuesday evening, of next week, Victoria C. Woodhull will lecture at the Opera House on "Reformation or Revolution; which?"

YREKA.—The Journal of the 3d says: Jake Wallace's Minstrels performed at Kessler's Theatre last night, and will give two more entertainments at the same place before leaving. The troupe comprises a number of well-known popular performers, including Miss Louise Irving, the celebrated mocking-bird vocalist and pianist; James Cotton, Ethiopian comedian, banjoist, song and dance artist; G. W. Harley, the silver-voiced tenor; J. Willis, clog dancer; W. Armstrong, violinist and musical director; and Jake Wallace, the Black Diamond of Ethiopian comedy, and champion banjoist of the Pacific Coast. Jake Wallace has delighted Yreka audiences in early days, and will, no doubt please them now as of old, hence we advise all who wish to enjoy good songs, dances, solos, burlesques and plenty of fun, to be sure and attend, as it is not often a good minstrel troupe visits us.

MARYSVILLE.—The Rev. Edwin Arthur McArthur, A. B., lectured at the Presbyterian Church on Thursday, on "The White Man and the Negro."

STOCKTON.—Signor Baccei will give two operatic concerts, at the theatre on Friday and Saturday of next week. He will be assisted by Miss Emily Melville Derby, Signor Contini and Frank Gilder. Charles Chutz is business manager of the troupe.

TRINITY CENTER.—The "Wallace Minstrel Troupe," showed here May 25th. George Collin, the agent, writes us that the troupe will continue on to Oregon.

JACKSON.—Frank Wilson's Variety Troupe appeared at the theatre on Monday last, in songs, acts and dances.

BOISE.—The Rosedale Troupe, comprising Robert Fulford, Mrs. Robert Fulford and others played here on the 26th ult.

VIRGINIA CITY.—Barton Hill made his first appearance at Piper's Opera House, supported by the California Theatre Company, on Monday, in the character of Raphael Duchalet, in "The Marble Heart." Both he and Miss Ellie Wilton are great favorites. On Tuesday, "The Lancashire Lass" was played; on Wednesday, "The Corsican Brothers;" on Thursday, "Lost in London;" and "A Victim of Circumstances" and "The Willow Copse" followed. The Company will perform next week.

PORTLAND O.—Mrs. Fanny Morgan Phelps with a dramatic company is performing at Oro Fino Theatre. The bill for last Tuesday consisted of 'The Ladies Battle" (nothing to do with local option, only a translation from the French) and "Marriage at any Price."

DENVER, COL.—W. A. Mestayer has been performing here during the present week with good success. At the Cricket Varieties the Austins closed their engagement on the 31st ult. Harry Cavello, banjoist, clog dancer and Dutch comique, made his appearance on the 1st. The Lingards are to commence an engagement at the theatre on Monday.

CHEYENNE.—The Austins, Carrie and Charles, commenced an engagement at M'Daniel's Theatre, on the 2d. Frank Sparrow is managing this place of amusement.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at "Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen!
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'd
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find and made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

What Cheer Laundry.

Charles Dickens on Fechter.

In an article in the Atlantic Monthly, just before Mr. Fechter left England for this country, and just subsequent to his great London triumphs, Charles Dickens thus writes of Fechter and his acting:

"The first quality observable in Mr. Fechter's acting is, that it is in the highest degree romantic. However elaborated in minute details, there is always a peculiar dash and vigor in it, like the fresh atmosphere of the story whereof it is a part. When he is on the stage, it seems to me as though the story were transpiring before me for the first and last time. Thus there is a fervor in his love-making—a suffusion of his whole being with the rapture of his passion—that sheds a glory on its object, and raises her, before the eyes of the audience, into the light in which he sees her. It was this remarkable power that took Paris by storm when he became famous in the lover's part, in the "Dame aux Camelias." It is a short part, really comprised in two scenes, but, as he acted it (he was its original representative), he left his poetic and exalting influence on the heroine throughout the play.

In "Ruy Blas" in the "Master of Ravenswood" and in the "Lady of Lyons"—three dramas in which Mr. Fechter especially shines as a lover, but notably in the first—this remarkable power of surrounding the beloved creature, in the eyes of the audience, with the fascination that she has for him, is strikingly displayed. That observer must be cool indeed who does not feel, when Ruy Blas stands in the presence of the young unwedded Queen of Spain, that the air is enchanted; or when she bends over him, leaving her tender touch upon his bloody breast, that it is better so to die than to live apart from her, and she is worthy to be so died for.

Picturesqueness is a quality above all others pervading Mr. Fechter's assumptions, Himself a skilled painter and sculptor, learned in the history of costume, and informing those accomplishments and that knowledge with a similar infusion of romance (for romance is inseparable from the man) he is always a picture—always a picture in its right place in the group, always in true composition with the back-ground of the scene. For the picturesqueness of manner, note so trivial a thing as the turn of the hand in beckoning from a window, in "Ruy Blas," to a personage down in an outer courtyard to come up; or his assumption of the duke's livery in the same scene; or his writing a letter for dictation. In the last scene of Victor Hugo's noble drama, his bearing becomes positively inspired; and his sudden assumption of the attitude of the headsman, in his denunciation of the duke and threat to be his executioner, is, so far as I know, one of the most ferociously picturesque things conceivable on the stage.

The foregoing use of the word "ferociously" reminds me to remark that this artist is a master of passionate vehemence; in which aspect he appears to me to represent, perhaps more than any other, an interesting union of characteristics of two great nations—the French and the Anglo-Saxon. Born in London of a French mother, by a German father, but reared entirely in England and in France, there is, in his fury, a combination of French suddenness and impressibility with our more slowly demonstrative Anglo-Saxon way when we get, as we say, "our blood up," that produces an intensely fiery result. The fusion of two races is in it, and one cannot decidedly say that it belongs to either; but one can most decidedly say that it belongs to a powerful concentration of human passion and emotion, and to human nature.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Bep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstain, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

Next to paintings rank photo-crayons as works of art—with many, indeed, photo-crayon portraits are preferred to paintings, although the latter may have emanated from the brush of a noted artist—still, it is hardly possible to obtain as lifelike portraits with the brush alone as can be obtained in photo-crayons. A. Provo Kinit, 28 Third street, has made crayon portraits a specialty, and he has secured an artist whose work will compare favorably with that of any one. Mr. Kinit has a beautiful crayon now on exhibition, at J. B. Golly's, 31 Kearny street. The portrait is the most natural and lifelike work we have ever seen. It shows the work of a careful and untiring, as well as artistic hand, and it is almost a marvel how a work of such excellence can be furnished for the low figure that Mr. K. asks. Other specimens of crayons, as well as every kind and size of photographs, can be seen at the Florence Art Gallery, 28 Third street. 5 A

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—The delightful opera of "La Perichole" was performed last night. It will be repeated at the matinee to-day and this evening. M'lle. Aimee by her charming singing and piquante acting in the title role delights everybody, and she is ably supported by M. Emile Juteau and others, who appear in the cast published on our first page. On Sunday evening "La Petit Faust" will be performed for the last time. On Monday, the very amusing opera of "Les Brigands" will be produced, with Aimee in her celebrated role of Fiorella.

MAGUIRE'S NEW THEATRE.—An admirable performance of "The New Magdalen," was given at this house last night. Miss Sallie Hinckley played the character of Mercy Merrick so well that the most ardent admirers of Miss Belle Pateman were forced to confess that in many points she surpassed that actress in the subtlety of her realization of the character. She looked charmingly handsome in a magnificent blonde wig and dressed splendidly. Miss Fanny Young, one of the most reliable and competent actresses on the stage, was particularly good as Grace Rosebury, and Miss Mary Wells as Lady Janet Roy, gave one of those charming impersonations of an old lady character for which she is famous. Charles Edmonds played the role of Julian Gray in an earnest and natural manner, which quite gained the sympathies of the audience. George Hinckley made a good Horace Holmcraft, and A. D. Billings did a splendid bit of acting as the old German surgeon Wetzel. "The New Magdalen" will be played at the matinee to-day, this evening and to-morrow evening, and will, we hope, be enjoyed by large audiences, as it is well worth seeing.

OPERA HOUSE.—Bobby Newcomb has made such a hit and is so great a favorite with the San Francisco public that it is to be regretted that his engagement must end with next week. He will appear at the matinee to-day, this evening, and to-morrow evening in his famous original song and dance of "The Big Sunflower," Billy Sweatnam will sing and tell funny stories in the first part, as also will Charles Reed, Welch and Rice will present their "Mulcahy Twins" Little Mac will appear in two acts and other performances mentioned on our first page will be given.

THE NEW PALACE AMPHITHEATRE.—At the matinees to-day and again this evening the brilliant combination of artistes engaged at this house under the management of Miss Kittie Hollaway will appear in a great programme which is published on our first page. The same bill will be presented to-morrow night. These will be the last performances given at this house for the present.

BELLA UNION THEATRE.—Miss Lena Proctor has made quite a hit in the character of Lizzie Leonard in "The Woman of the World," and Miss Jennie Johnson is very effective as Polly Prim. This piece will be played to-night in conjunction with an admirable first part, sero-comic gems by Miss Alice Ross, Ed Murray's Budget of Fun, Fred Ritchie's Dutch Blunders, H. R. Archer's ballads, and a great variety of other performances specified on our first page.

BUCKLEY'S NEW VARIETY THEATRE.—Johnny Tacrs in song and dance, Mertimore in sketches, Ned Buckley in first part, Miss Ida May in ballads, George C. Thompson in "Uncle Jeff," and a great number of others in brilliant specialties, will delight all who visit this house to-night.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS—THE BABY CAMEL. Among the new attractive features at these beautiful gardens may be mentioned the baby camel and the wonderful ghost window, which will be on exhibition every day this week. The pants and moccasins worn by Capt. Jack when executed may also be seen here.

CITY GARDENS. — MINER'S PICNIC. — The Annual Festival and Picnic of the Miners' Protective Associaton will be held at the City Gardens on Sunday and Monday next, on which occasion the Gardens will be transformed into a mining camp of the olden time, representing mining with a long tom; washing out gold with rockers; sinking a shaft; old times genuine miner's lunch; mining in all its branches; discovery of new diggings; staking out and jumping claims; cooking beans and slapjacks, etc. Grand concert and ball in the evening. Admission, fifty cents; children, half-price; under six years, free. Twelve thousand people visited the last Miner's Festival held at the City Gardens.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

FINE ART SALE.—Mr. Edward Sutherland, an artist of considerable merit, will on Wednesday next offer at auction a choice collection of oil and water color pictures. The series embraces views in France, Italy, England, Scotland, Wales, Canada and the United States and will be on view on Monday and Tuesday, day and evening, and Wednesday morning to hour of sale, at H. M. Newhall & Co's rooms. The collection is one of unusual merit.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain Railroad.

GOLDEN GATE PARK.—Those who drive out to the new park should visit The Villa which has just been opened. Here they will find four public parlors and ten private dining rooms. Guido Mangenberg, the proprietor, gets up epicurean breakfasts, dinners and suppers at short notice. Omnibuses will leave on SUNDAYS, at 9 o'clock A. M., from the corner of Market and Kearny streets, and every hour afterward, until 4 o'clock, from the corner of McAllister and Fillmore streets connecting with the Market Street and Hayes Valley cars, and from the corner of Turk and Fillmore streets by the way of City Front and Lone Mountain cars.

GRAND SUNDAY EXCURSION.—The steamer Antelope leaves San Francisco every Saturday at 2:30. P M. and on Sunday at 8 A. M. from Front Street Wharf, connecting with the cars of the C. F. & N. P. Railroad at Donahue for Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg and Cloverdale. Excursion tickets are issued at reduced rates, and are good from Saturday to Monday. Those who wish to enjoy a little country air at the end of the week could not choose a finer trip than this.

SCHUETZEN PARK.—The Garibaldi Guard will hold their annual picnic at this Park to-morrow. It is sure to be an enjoyable affair.

NOTES.—E. A. Sothern, who is now playing in Chicago, will open at the California Theatre on the 29th.

Little Mac, the minstrel, who made such a noble drum major on the occasion of the parade and picnic of the Plumbers and Gasfitters Association, has been presented by them, in recognition of his services, with a magnificent gold match box nearly big enough for him to sleep in.

Next week will be positively the last of the Minstrels. This splendid combination will leave for Portland, Oregon.

An exhibition of the talent of Mrs. Julia Melville's pupils in dramatic art, will be given at Platt's Hall, on Tuesday evening, when "Frou Frou," will be performed by Miss Adele Leighton Seis, Miss Susie Parsons, Miss Celia Austin, Miss Ella Badger, and Miss Louise Vavasour assisted by Harry Edwards, John Howson, and J. P. Burnett, who have kindly volunteered to support the amateurs. In addition to the dramatic entertainment a vocal concert will be given by Miss Susan Galton, Alfred Kelleher, J. S. Ehrlich, Miss Jennie Lee and Mrs. Julia Melville. The box office will be open at the Hall, on Monday and Tuesday from 6 A. M. to 5 P. M.

A subscription season of sixteen nights by Luque's dramatic, musical and ballet company will be inaugurated at the Opera House on June 15th. The company which has been recently performing with brilliant success in Havana, comprises fifteen artists from the principal theatres of Barcelona, Spain. Their names have already been published in FIGARO. They will appear in operas and comedies selected from a very extensive repertoire which will be produced in perfect style. Senor Agrato under whose management the company will appear, assures the public of San Francisco that entertainments will be given well worthy of their patronage and we are sure such will be the case. Subscription books will be opened at Sherman and Hyde's on Tuesday next.

On Monday that great artist, Charles Fechter, who, in many parts, stands without a rival, will commence an engagement at Maguire's New Theatre, and makes his first appearance in California. Mr. Fechter has chosen for this occasion the great play of "Ruy Blas," in which he will appear in the title role, and Miss Lizzie Price, an excellent actress whose merit is well-known here, as the Queen. The box sheet for the season is now open and the demand for the seats is very large.

Mlle. Stani of the Aimee troupe is an immense favorite with the public. Her fine singing and her handsome personal appearance render her very popular.

The Boat Club organized by the members of the California Theatre, has in less than a year become quite an institution. The Club now owns 9 boats and sheils, and a neat house, shortly to be enlarged and improved. The latest addition to its naval forces is a ladies-gig constructed of fine California wood, gold and silver mounted, i. e. the rowlocks, boat-hook, etc., are at least silver plated, and there is considerable gilding on the inside. The seats are covered with blue velvet plush, and the miniature awnings at each end have the Club's colors. The boat has been named the Matilda Blair in honor of the wife of Tom Blair, one of the most energetic members of the Club, and who is well-known as the custodian of the den of lions known as the Board of Brokers, and as lessee of Pacific Hall. Among the vessels in the boat-house, is a shell built by T. Gossman, the actor and property-man of the California Theatre. In its way it is a perfect model.

Edward Arnett, late leading man at Wallack's New York Theatre, and formerly of the Haymarket Theatre, London, will arrive by the Overland train to-night. Mr. Arnott is an actor of acknowledged ability and comes here under engagement to Manager Maguire for his New Theatre. He will be a valuable acquisition to the company, and will afford most efficient support to Mr. Fechter.

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

In New York, at Niblo's, "The Lady of the Lake," elaborately mounted, was drawing moderate houses.....Mr. Wm. Winter, of the New York Tribune, in speaking of the revival of Shakspeare's "King John," which has just taken place at Booth's Theatre, says: 'The season at Booth's Theatre will close with the current week. Shakspeare's historical play of "King John" was produced last night; and this revival, which we shall discuss at another time, will brilliantly signalize Mr. J. B. Booth's retirement from this theatre. The last presentation of this piece in New York that we recall, was made under Mr. George Wood's management of Wallack's old theatre,—near the corner of Broome street and Broadway,—in 1865 with the late Charles Kean as King John. 'King John' is largely untrue to history and rather deficient in interesting action; but it contains magnificent writing, several scenes of deep emotional meaning and power, and several characters drawn with profound knowledge of human nature; and although one-half of the play may be regarded as practically a preparation for the other half, yet when we come to Hesuba she proves worth a patient waiting. The scenes that concern the grief of Constance, the temptation of Hubert, the death of Arthur, and the waning days of John are full of power and beauty. The setting of the stage was elaborate and picturesque; and the performance—which passed smoothly in three hours—was seen by a crowded assemblage. The Constance of Agnes Booth proved to be a personation of deep pathos, tenderness, dignity and rare technical merit, and Mrs. Booth was twice recalled upon the scene after her final exit. Mr. Booth received hearty applause for his acting of King John. Mr. McCullough was very brilliant as Philip Faulconbridge, expressing manly good humor and scornful merriment, touched with deep thought and colored with the richness of a royal and massively individual nature".....Work is being pushed forward upon the new hall to be occupied by the San Francisco Minstrels during next season. The outer walls are finished, two stories having been added, which harmonize with other portions of the block. The frontage on Broadway is 105ft., and on Twenty-ninth street 75ft. The entire height of the building, inclusive of the stories on which the superstructure is being raised, will be about 50ft., which will leave to the hall proper a height of some 38ft. The green and dressing-rooms will be situated in the wing on Twenty-ninth street .....The Summer season at Wallack's commenced on June 1st, with Miss Carlotta LeClercq in Bartley Campbell's "Fate".....'Camille," with Miss Clara Morris in the title role, still held the boards at Union Square Theatre. It was drawing crowded houses. "Oliver Twist" was expected to run at Fifth Avenue Theatre until the close of the season.....'Shoo Fly" was revived at Bryant's Opera House, and was drawing well.....At the Metropolitan Theatre James Larkin and Carrie Armstrong were great favorites.....At the Olympic Theatre, Miss Angie Schott, Signor Abecco the harpist, Sheridan and Mac, and others appeared .....At the Bowery Theatre, the Carroll Family were to reappear.....Tony Pastor's Opera House is to let.....At Wood's Museum, Harry Colton was quite a favorite. Baker and Farron appeared in "Chris and Leon" on June 1st.

Mr. Fred McCabe, a young English humorist, who has for years given successful entertainments in this city, has gone East, and will appear at Wood's Museum, New York, on the 15th inst.

J. J. McCloskey, dramatic author, actor, and stage manager, advertises that he has severed his connection with the Olympic, New York, and is ready to negotiate with managers for the ensuing season.

Eben Plympton goes to the Walnut-street Theatre, Philadelphia, next season. He plays a summer engagement at Wallack's, commencing June 1.

Shiel Barry wants a singing soubrette and old woman, to travel through the West Indies.

Gaylor might re-engage for the last named line of business.

It is reported that Miss Adelaide Phillips will retire from the stage after fulfilling her present engagements.

The New York Mercury of the 24th ult. says:

The California Theatre, San Francisco, is closed, and Charles Pope and the company are traveling in the interior. The theatre will reopen June 29 with Sothern.

The California Theatre is never closed. It has never been closed for one evening since it was built, except on an occasional Sunday evening when there was no German performance, and during the period when it was being reconstructed.

A Boston paper says: "The success of the New Globe Theatre is assured by the subscriptions Mr Cheney has received, and all that is now required to complete the sum necessary ($ 50,000) is $30,000. This will be gratifying news not only to the citizens of Boston but to the public generally.

Madam Ruderdorff was presented with a beautiful oil painting by Alexander Salvini, brother of the great tragedian, and a handsome locket by the artist himself. She also had the honor of dining with Salvini at Professor Longfellow's house in Cambridge.

Mr. W. E. Sheridan, an actor of sterling merit, will play leading business at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, next season.

The New York Dispatch says: Miss Rose Hersee has been offered a lucrative engagement as prima donna assoluta in California, to commence in November.

We are very glad indeed to hear this. We hope it is true.

The Summer season of the Boston Museum will open July 6th, with the burlesque of "Aladdin" as the attraction.

Mr. Wybert Reeves returns to this country and visits California next Fall.

The Chapman sisters are now starring in Canada.

Mr. Howard Paul is coming to America.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

"The What Is It."

Under the above heading an evening contemporary publishes the following letter from a musician of this city. That it is just all who know anything about music must confess: "It is doubtful if any more absurd musical criticisms were ever written and dished up to a public, than those by the fellah of the Chronicle. This erratic individual has the audacity to inform us that Wagner and Lizst are mad as march hares. This is rather startling, and probably if the above parties knew of this opinion, it would forever end their career. The first, the most profound and progressive of all musical composers receiving the support of all Europe—crowned heads, as well as that of the old music'ans—and the second, the greatest of all living pianists, whose compositions, transcriptions and performances have delighted the world for years. The above, though, is no more ridiculous than the treatment of a certain popular pianist, who in the face of the public support of his performances, and their disgust and indifference for the kind of music advocated by this musical mountebank as the finest, intimated that his advertisements would be discontinued unless this nonsense was stopped. It is singular to observe the effect of coin and patronage upon the opinions of the Chronicle. For proof of this, see notices of popular concerts in the Chronicle. The above facts, and his continual harping upon certain musical celebrities, receiving most of his general information from them, the abuse of our local talent renders the musical notices of the Chronicle the laughing stock of the city. That such a man should be allowed to persistently insult the people of this city, is only explained and accounted for by the fact of the Chronicle being allowed to be published at all.

MUSICIAN.

The Picture Papers.

The President and Mrs. Grant, with Miss Barnes, have arrived home. An energetic New York paper has given a magnificent cabinet picture of Mr. and Mrs. Sartoris, and various wood-cuts, supposed to represent the incidents of the wedding. This is very clever in that journal, but they have made a very funny mistake. In one picture, Mr. Sartoris is represented with side whiskers, a la mutton cotelette; in the next, with only moustache militaire, and in the third, with both. The pictures of the bridesmaid are hideous, and as they were not ladies on the stage, they might have been honored with "Miss" before their names. It is understood that Miss Barnes will spend some weeks at Long Branch with Mrs. Grant.

Rough Indeed.

The Grass Valley Union says:

Charles Kingsley is a poet, philosopher, preacher and novelist. He has a world wide and a grand reputation. Yet this scholarly and thoughtful man has crossed the Atlantic Ocean and the continent of North America to come to California and to be called by the Nevada Transcript a "person." Then, too, the same paper calls him Cannon Kingsley! Lightning is not flying around this country rapidly enough, and it is not striking with discrimination enough to be doing its strict duty.

Perhaps the Transcript after all only meant to call him a "parson."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at Frisco by gas-light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapin'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure,
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners,"
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.

Amusement for the Million.

This is the motto which the theatrical manager of the present day inscribes on his banners, that is, on his three sheet posters and streamers which he hangs on the outside walls of buildings in process of erection. There was a time when the million had so little money that it was not worth the while of a manager to take them into his calculations. Lord Lovelace, the Hon. Viscount Joliejambe, and a few other lords and gentlemen, would secure the success of any play. It was easier to cater to the taste of a small clique like this, than to the million. These noble lords and gentlemen were well content to have their opinions formed for them by the critics of the Press, and were altogether more managable than the million. They were also more easily satisfied as regards length in an entertainment. London managers who provide amusement for the million not unfrequently give an evening's entertainment as follows: a farce, a comedy, operatic selections, a drama, and a pantomime. My Lord Lovelace would be much disgusted at such an entertainment as this. It would be to him as if he were invited to a supper of roast beef, ice cream, carrots, pork and beans, pate de foie gras, Charlotte Russe, London brown stout, Lafitte, Sauterne and hot gin and water. He might drop in at such a meal, drink a glass of Sauterne, eat a little bit of pate, and then leave, but go through such a meal, never! We don't expect to excite much sympathy for my Lord Lovelace; if he can't appreciate amusement for the million, he can stay away, and still the theatre will remain open, or he can drop in and enjoy anything that may suit his more delicate taste. One thing is certain: it is the million on whom managers must rely to pay the rent, and they must provide them with amusement which suits them. The million for whom the San Francisco manager has to cater, is a better million that of London, and it does not so strongly insist on having everything its own way. It wearies of spectacular burlesque, and when Shakspeare is put on, crowds the theatre; it pronounces negro minstrelsy "played out," and goes to hear French opera, it fills the gallery of the theatre during a season of Italian opera, and sometimes shows its true appreciation of music by applauding a well-sung chorus, whereas the dress circle reserves its plaudits for the prima donna and tenor. The San Francisco manager, who does not underrate the intelligence of the million, finds his lines cast in pleasant places. The great thing is to understand the million, and then amusement for the million is easily provided. It is not always what will please the million, but what it will learn to like, that should be given it. It has to be educated up to an appreciation of the delicate flavors of the drama, as well as to be provided with strong meat to satisfy its animal nature. San Francisco is fortunate in its theatrical managers. These managers have given it everything it could desire, ranging from Italian opera to negro minstrelsy, from Charles Kean to Mr. Lafflingwell. Just at the present time what city in the world is more liberally provided for? Fechter the great dramatic genius of the age at one theatre, delightful French opera bouffe at another, and the best minstrel entertainment imaginable at another? Truly the million is well catered for in San Francisco.

A New Hampshire farmer wanted a farm-hand, and was applied to by an Irishman who wanted to work. The farmer objected to engaging Pat on the ground that two Irishmen previously in his employ had died on his hands. "Then you object to hiring me for that do ye?" said Pat. "aith and I can bring you ricommendations from many a place where I've worked that I never played such a trick!"

Maguire's New Theatre.

Manager Maguire, to-night, will introduce to the public of San Francisco, the greatest star that money could obtain. Fechter stands second to none. He could return to London and crowd the largest theatre there for a hundred nights, but he prefers this country and remains here. That he will be as well appreciated here as he is in other large cities of the world we are confident. He will appear to-night as Ruy Blas in Victor Hugo's great work admirably adapted to the stage. Miss Lizzie Price, always a good actress, and who has since her first visit to San Francisco, made such rapid strides in her profession as to place her in the first ranks, will play Queen, A. D. Billings, Don Cæsar, Miss Mary Wells, the Duchess of Albaburque, Miss Sallie Hinckley Casilde, and a glance at the cast published on our first page will assure al that the play will have full justice done it. No expense has been spared in putting it on the stage. Every scene will be new and the costumes will be rich and appropriate. Sam Genese the stage manager has scarcely paused to eat or sleep so anxious has he been that the accessories to the first appearance of such an artist as Mr. Fechter, should be unexceptionable in every way. The demand for seats has been very large and those who fail to secure reserved places to-day, will stand but little chance of gaining admission to the theatre this evening.

Opera House.

This week is the last during which the brilliant combination of artists known as Maguire's California Minstrels, will delight the public as the end of the week they proceed to Oregon. They have chosen for their last appearances, their very best acts as may be seen by referring to the splendid programme published on our first page. Bobby Newcomb, Billy Sweatnam, Little Mac, Welch and Rice, Gen. T. Murphy, Charles Reed, George S. Knight, and all the others will appear at their very best, and George W. Harley, W. F. Baker, J. G. Russell and B. Montague will sing their sweetest ballads.

There was a splendid audience last night largely composed of the French population and "Le Petit Faust" was performed in a manner which roused them to the most enthusiastic demonstrations of applause. To-night the ever popular opera of "Les Brigands," with its lively couplets, delightful airs, amusing dialogue, splendid costumes and pleasing music will be performed. Mlle. Aimee will appear in her famous role of Fiorella, Mons. Emile Juteau as Falscapps, Mlle. Stani as Fragoletto, Mons, Duchesne as Pietro, and altogether the cast is a plendid one, as may be seen by referring to our first page.

The old California minstrel, Ned Buckley, Johnny Tuers, the most eccentric of comedians, Miss Ida May the pleasing balladist, George O. Thompson the old nig delineator, and a great many others will appear to-night in a fine bill.

The series embraces views in France, Italy, England, Scotland, Wales, Canada and the United States and will be on view on Monday and Tuesday, day and evening, and Wednesday morning to hour of sale, at H. M. Newhall & Co's rooms. The collection is one of unusual merit.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

A Pleasant Location.

Persons desiring comfortable lodgings in a Central location, should visit the Alhambra, and inspect the fine suites of rooms to let there The building is a very fine one and is well lighted and ventilated. 5

The Poor Player.

We are always having some touching story from Paris. Now it is a romantic suicide,—youth and beauty, Hero and Leander, cold as marble, clasped in each other's arms. Again, it is the sudden death of an old artist whose pictures adorn places and whose purse was emptied long ago. This time comes Olive Logan with an account of the death in a Paris mad-house of M. Lassagne, a comedian. He was a noted actor in the days of the empire. One evening Eugenie was in the house, and Lassagne indulged in a piece of business common enough upon the stage. In a scene requiring him to remove his coat and vest, he continued, after their removal, as though about to denude himself, and was only prevented by the fore-arranged ejaculation of another performer. It is neither a very funny piece of business, nor so vulgar as to make one blush, but the empress did not at all relish it. She felt affronted, and advised the management that Lassagne must never again play when she visited the theatre. The imperial frown cost the actor his place. When he was informed of his misfortune his brain reeled, he fainted, and restored consciousness found him a maniac.

La Fille du Madame Angot.

This sparkling French opera bouffe, which Mlle Aimee has rendered so popular in this city, seems to have created a perfect furore in the capital of the new German Empire. The stolid and sturdy Berliners appear to have "cottoned" to it immensely. It has been played nearly one hundred and fifty nights at the Friederich-Wilhelm Stadtsche Theatre (a thing entirely unprecedented), and it is still in the full-tide of success.

Fooling Away his Time.

A Dubuque man has asked for the protection of the court against three widows who are determined to marry him. That man is only fooling away his money on lawyers, and might as well give in at once. Three widows! A friend of ours once traveled to escape one, and she met him in the jungles of Southern Africa with a preacher and two witnesses. These cases always end so.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonetsin, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their, stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

Next to paintings rank photo-crayons as works of art—with many, indeed, photo-crayon portraits are preferred to paintings, although the latter may have emanated from the brush of a noted artist—still, it is hardly possible to obtain as lifelike portraits with the brush alone as can be obtained in photo-crayons. A. Provo Kluit, 28 Third street, has made crayon portraits a specialty, and he has secured an artist whose work will compare favorably with that of any one. Mr. Kluit has a beautiful crayon now on exhibition, at J. B. Golly's, 31 Kearny street. The portrait is the most natural and lifelike work we have ever seen. It shows the work of a careful and untiring, as well as artistic hand, and it is almost a marvel how a work of such excellence can be furnished for the low figure that Mr. K. asks. Other specimens of crayons, as well as every kind and size of photographs, can be seen at the Florence Art Gallery, 28 Third street, 5 A

Do You Feel

Crossgrained and stingy? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, then a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. Special department for ladies. Everything neat as wax. Single tickets, 25 cents. Five for one dollar.

Couldn't Catch Him.

A young gutter-snipe, born and bred in the Five Point's region, and who had never known that he had any other name than plain Jack, was hauled by Brother Brace into the commission school, and with him slid two companions whom he had only known in like manner as "Eel" and "Fin." The latter was asked: "What is your name?" "Fin" was the reply. "Oh, my no! Phineas must be your name; remember it now." Then the other friend was put through. "What is your name, sonny?" "Eel." Mercy! what a name! That will never do. I suppose it must be "Elias?" "Yes sir." All this while gutter-snipe had been staring at the odd manner in which his friend's names had been lengthened out. At length, however, a glance of intelligence shot over his face, he took the joke; and when asked what his name was, sarcastically answered with a "you don't sell me" look, "Jackass!"

Sold Again.

A candy butcher is spoken of as having guaranteed to take back all packages of candy which did not contain a silver half dollar. Of course none contained the desired article, but when the packages were returned with an expectation of receiving their cost, he assured the greenhorns that although he had promised to take back the packages, he had not promised to refund their cost.

Half Angels.

A young man from the rural districts asked a friend at a ball last week—pointing to the ladies with low-necked dresses: "Is that the fashion now?" "Oh," replied the friend "those ladies are rising into angels and angels, you know, don't wear dresses; but it is no use for you to stand watching, for it isn't likely they will rise entirely through before the dance closes."

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or, under wear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

Hough on James Lick.

It is pretty hard. Here is James Lick who has given the result of years of hard work to benevolent institutions, and now the "poets" are going after him. Herbert O. Dorr gave tongue in yesterday's Call, and soon the whole poetic pack will be in full cry. Herbert observes:

We need no temple to remind he lived,
No shaft of stone on which to carve his fame;
His monument is built of noble deeds,
And future ages will revere his name.

He furthermore remarks:

Fools hoard their gains, and in their latter days,
With many pangs their useless gold forsake;
Or, aping charity they never knew,
Give that away the dead can never take.

This is just the kind of thing which will make rich men fear to follow Lick's example, and they will content themselves with "aping charity they never knew." Hector A. Stuart, who wrote that beautiful ode to a Kettle, recently published in the Call, will shortly be on hand with his "Verses to James Lick."

A Model Juryman.

The intelligent gentleman of the jury, according to the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, was discovered in that city recently, by being brought before the city court by venire facias. "Would you convict a man on circumstantial evidence?" queried his honor. "I dunno wat dat is, jedge," answered the statesman. "Well, what do you think it is?" interposed Gov. Watts. "Well, 'cordin' to my jedgement, sarcumstanshil is 'bout dis: Ef one man shoots anudder, an' kills him, he orter to be hung for it; if he don't kill him, he orter to go to de plenipotentiary."

Heavenly Poetry.

You wouldn't think it, but "Keewetahuhyee uh yod keche munke uungomuh wug metah swok ubbe noje yug," is the Chippewa for "When I can read my title clear to mansions in the skies." About this time this sweet hymn can be heard wherever Chippewas are to be found. Some people might think, from the way they sing it, that it was a chant of another sort—something suitable for those whose titles are very dark.

Lunching Round.

The Alta, as Sunday reading, published a column of puffs of saloons where lunch is spread. "Rambler" was detailed to go round and investigate. The result in Sunday's Alta, though in these temperance times not "popular" reading, will no doubt ensure Rambler many drinks and lunches.

Changed Hands.

The Golden Era has been purchased by a party of the name of Johnson. The Alta says: "Though a very young man, he is a natural journalist. We hope he will make the Golden Era as good a paper as it always has been under the able management of G. B. Densmore."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter beat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

A Book for the Times.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF EDWARD WORTLEY MONTAGU, with a Preface by R. Shelton Mackenzie, L.L. D., Literary Editor of "Philadelphia Press," is now in press, and will be published in a few days by T. B. Peterson and Brothers, Philadelphia, Pa. The London Evening Post, in a review of it, says: "The Autobiography of Edward Wortley Montagu is the most remarkable book that has been given to the public for many years. The author was the only son of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, whose career was, perhaps, one of the most extraordinary of any woman in the annals of England during the last two hundred years. The most celebrated men and women of England, during the reign of George the First, are introduced into this work. Mr. Montagu met them frequently, knew them well, and has described them as he found them. There is no flattery of the great in his narrative, for he tears the mask from the face of vice. The autobiography introduces Kings and Princes, Politicians and Poets, Men of Law and Men of Letters. In fact, it gives life-like portraits of dead men and women, among whom will be found George the Second—Frederick, Prince of Wales—Lady Mary Wortley Montagu—Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough—The Earl of Chesterfield—Walpole—Fielding—Colley Cibber—Pope, whose absurd love adventure with Lady Mary is described at length—Howard, Earl of Suffolk—Savage—Lord Lyttelton—Bully Rooke—Lord Scarborough—Molly Segrave—The Duchess of Manchester—Dr. Young—Lady Vane—Lord Palmore and his wife, the Duchess of Leeds—Kitty Hyde, afterward the Duchess of Queensberry—Lady Betty Molyneux—Lady Fanny Shirley—Windham—Pulteney—Lady Bolingbroke—Dodington—Lady Archibald Hamilton—Sir William Yonge—Tom Warrington—Hogarth—Congreve—Gay—Prior—Fox, afterward the celebrated Lord Holland—Lord Hervey—The Duke of Kingston—Bishop Burnett—Sir Richard Steele—Lady Bella Bentinck—The profligate Duke of Wharton, etc." It will be published in one large duodecimo volume of near six hundred pages, bound in morocco cloth, full gilt back, price $1 75, and be for sale by all booksellers, or advance copies of it will be sent to any one on their remitting the price to the Publishers in a letter.

Theorists.

The New York Dispatch says: All the foolish theorists are not dead yet. One of them actually propounds the ridiculous theory that it hurts Chinamen to stone them. That man should at once be conveyed to the insane asylum. The same paper observes: California is generous. It favors cremation. But it doesn't stop there. It will graciously offer its entire lot of Chinamen to experiment on. We are not to be outdone in generosity of this sort. We offer anybody who goes into the cremation business all the Italian organ-grinders as first-rate subjects. They're generally pretty greasy, and would burn well.

Brigham Prays.

It's pleasing to know that Brigham Young obeys scriptural injunctions. Recently he remarked to his fellow sufferers from excess of femininity: "I pray for your enemies, brethren; but I always pray that they may go to hell." Such sweetness of temper entitles the patriarch to have a few more wives and several babies with the whooping cough. Without trials he couldn't be expected to exhibit all the beauties of his angelic nature.

A Christian's Rights.

Mr. Post is a Wisconsin Christian. Last Sunday he went to church and found Mrs. Selulimgen in his pew. Not caring to have his devotions disturbed by the worldly thought, her proximity might suggest, he grasped her firmly by the ear, and thus escorted this poacher on gospel privileges into the aisle. Nothing like having some regard for the proprieties, you know.

Simple Enough.

An exchange says: "A lamb was born at Ira, Vt., the other day, and will be sent to New York for exhibition, when they find out whether to call it one or three in number. It has one body, eight legs, and three tails." The question's easily enough decided. If the one body can wag the three tails, then there is but one lamb. But if the three tails wag the one body, then there are three lambs. We didn't get this information from a country debating society.

Opera House.

The closing week of the season of minstrelsy at this house commenced brilliantly last night with a programme which, for excellence and variety, could not be surpassed. After a first part performance in which Billy Sweatnam, Charles Reed, W. F. Baker, J. G. Russell, Con. T. Murphy, and other appeared to good advantage, Bobby Newcomb presented one of his original compositions entitled "Wouldn't You Like to Know?" he was encored again and again, the audience seeming as if they could not have enough of him. Geo. S. Knight appeared in his specialties, Billy Sweatnam, Charles Reed and others in "Wanted, a Nurse," Welch and Rice in "I Really Shall Expire," and the performance concluded with the laughable sketch of "Bounce" in which Billy Sweatnam as Jake, Bobby Newcomb as the Prima Donna, Little Mac as Ike, Welch as Biddy, Charles Reed as Weston, Con. T. Murphy as Manager, and Rice as Pat, kept the audience in a continual roar of laughter. The same bill will be played to-night.

California Theatre.

Offenbach's very lively opera bouffe of "Les Brigands" was performed before a very large and fashionable audience last night. Mlle. Aimee as Fiorella, sang, acted and dressed the part to perfection, and gained immense applause. Monsieur Emile Juteau as Falsecappa, did some capital acting and sang splendidly. Mlle. Rose Stani as Fragoletto sang deliciously. Mlle. Roland was charming as the Prince of Mantua, representing the most loveable of young men. Mons. Dunbesne was perfectly at home in the character of Pietro, and Mons. Lecuyer as Chef des Carabiniers, was funnier than ever. Altogether the performance was a most delightful one. It will be repeated to-night. To-morrow evening "Barbe Bleue" will be produced. On Friday evening, the favorite tenor Mons. Emile Juteau, will take his benefit, and "La Fille de Madame Angot" will be played for the last time.

Maguire's New Theatre.

An audience composed of the very creme de la creme of San Francisco society, crowded this theatre last night when Charles Fechter, the actor of the period, made his first appearance before the San Francisco public. In the first act of "Ruy Blas" where Mr Fechter appears as a valet, close attention is required in order to appreciate the exquisite finish of his acting. This the audience present last night gave, and an outburst of applause and enthusiastic call for the great artist proved that Fechter was appreciated. The second act gave more opportunity for strong acting, and in the third act there was not one person in the house incapable of appreciating the fact that he now saw a greater actor than has ever before trod the San Francisco stage. Mr. Fechter was called before the curtain at the close of every act, and the enthusiasm exhibited by the audience, did them as much honor as it did him, for Fechter is an ARTIST. Miss Lizzie Price, who received a warm greeting, exhibited considerable power in the part of the Queen of Spain, dressed it superbly and looked very handsome. Charles Edmonds, in the exciting role of Don Sallust, showed careful study and gave us one of the best bits of acting achieved by him in some time. A. D. Billings as Don Cæsar de Bazan, gave an impersonation of that gay roysterer, which, if not quite devil-may-care enough, was certainly artistic. Mr. Billings ought to have a dash at light comedy; he can't tell what he can do in that line until he makes a bold effort. Miss Mary Wells did some admirable acting as the Duchess of Albaquerque and Miss Sallie Hinckley looked very handsome dressed splendidly and acted naturally as Casilda. Frank Rea by his make-up, dress and bright acting as the Marquis de Santa Cruz, proved himself the good actor he is, in parts that suit him. The play was put on the stage with new scenery, new costumes and every appointment necessary. It will be repeated to-night and Mr. Fechter will again delight as many people as Maguire's New Theatre will hold.

Platt's Hall.

To-night Mrs. Julia Melville, who has been for long time engaged in preparing young ladies and gentlemen for the dramatic and lyric stage, will give an exhibition of the proficiency of several of her most advanced pupils. "Frou-Frou" will be performed with Miss Adele Leighton Seis as Gilberte, Miss Susie Parsons as Louise, Miss Celia Austin as Baroness de Cambri, and Miss Louise Vavasour as Pauline. The young ladies will be supported by Henry Edwards, R. G. Marsh, J. B. Le Roy, and other artistes who have kindly volunteered. Between acts, Miss Susan Galton and Alfred Kelleher, will sing a duet from "La Traviata," James E. Ehrlich (a pupil of Mrs. Melville), "The Heart Bowed Down," Miss Jennie Lee will sing some of the most popular songs in her repertoire, Miss Ella Badger, who has been taking lessons in elocution from Mrs. Melville, will recite "Spartacus' address to the Gladiators," Mrs. Julia Melville will sing "The Banks of Guadalquiver," and also take part in a duet — "Syren and Friar" — with James E. Ehrlich. There will be a grand display of costly toilettes on this occasion, both on the stage and in the auditorium. The fashion of the city will be well represented.

TIMES GO BY TURNS.

The lopped tree in time may turn again,
Most naked plants renew both fruit and flower,
The sorriest wight may find relief from pain,
The driest soil suck in some moistening shower.
Times go by turns, and chances change by course,
From foul to fair, from better hap to worse.

The sea of fortune doth forever flow,
She draws her favors to the lowest ebb;
Her tides have equal times to come and go,
Her loom doth weave the fine and coarsest web.
No joy so great but runneth to an end,
No hap so hard but may in time amend,

Not always fall of leaf, nor ever spring,
No endless night, nor yet eternal day;
The saddest birds a season find to sing,
The roughest storm a calm may soon allay.
Thus with succeeding terms God tempereth all,
That man may hope to rise, yet fear to fall.

A chance may win that by mischance was lost;
That net that holds no great, takes little fish;
In some things all, in all things none are crossed;
Few all they need; but none have all they wish.
Unmingled joys here to no man befall;
Who least, have some; who most, hath never all.

Once More.

A humorous old man fell in with an ignorant and rather impertinent young minister, who proceeded to inform the old gentleman in positive terms that he could never reach heaven unless he was born again, and added: "I have experienced that change, and now feel no anxiety. "And have you been born again?" said his companion, musingly. "Yes, I trust I have." "Well," said the old gentleman, eyeing him attentively, "I don't think it would hurt you to be born once more."

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 631 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

Next to paintings rank photo-crayons as works of art—with many, indeed, photo-crayon portraits are preferred to paintings, although the latter may have emanated from the brush of a noted artist—still, it is hardly possible to obtain as lifelike portraits with the brush alone as can be obtained in photo-crayons. A. Provo Kluit, 28 Third street, has made crayon portraits a specialty, and he has secured an artist whose work will compare favorably with that of any one. Mr. Kluit has a beautiful crayon now on exhibition, at J. B. Gully's, 31 Kearny street. The portrait is the most natural and lifelike work we have ever seen. It shows the work of a careful and untiring, as well as artistic hand, and it is almost a marvel how a work of such excellence can be furnished for the low figure that Mr. K. asks. Other specimens of crayons, as well as every kind and size of photographs, can be seen at the Florence Art Gallery, 28 Third street. 5 A

Mrs. Smiley's Awakening.

The following is Max Adeler's: Last Sunday night, during the sermon in our Church, the gas suddenly went out, and there was complete darkness. The minister requested the congregation to remain perfectly quiet until the cause of the trouble could be ascertained and other lights procured. Old Mrs. Smiley, it appears, was sound asleep when the accident occurred, but just after the clergyman had finished speaking to the congregation, she awoke. At first she thought she had become blind, but as she sat by the window she immediately saw the light in the street, and then she knew that the congregation had gone home, and that she had accidentally been locked in by the sexton. Dreadfully frightened at the loneliness and the horror of her situation, she picked up a hymn book, and dashing it through a pane of glass in the window, she put her head out and began to scream for help. Her shriek impressed passers-by with the idea that the church was on fire, and in an instant the alarm was given. A moment later the engines arrived and just as the sexton began to light the gas again, one gang of firemen began playing through the broken window on Mrs. Smiley's Spring bonnet, while another gang poured a three-inch stream up the middle aisle with such force as to wash Rev. Dr. Hopkins, the minister, out of the pulpit and down among the high hats which were floating around by the pew doors. Eventually the matter was explained, and the fire department shut off the water and went home. But the deacons want to know how, if Mr. Smiley refuses to pay the bill for repairs to the church, he can never look a fellow-worshiper in the face again.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or under wear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance, with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

California Theatre.

The second performance of the lively opera of "Les Brigands" was enjoyed by a large and fashionable audience last night. This evening the very amusing opera of "Barbe Bleue" will be performed, with the charming Mlle. Aimee as Boulotte, Mons. Emile Juteau as Barbe Bleue, and the strong cast of characters published on our first page. This play will be repeated to-morrow evening and on Friday "La Fille de Madame Angot" will be presented for the last time, for the benefit of the popular tenor, Mons. Emile Juteau.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Another large audience enjoyed the splendid acting of Mr. Fechter in "Ruy Blas," at this theatre last night. The applause was even more liberal than on the first occasion of his appearance and there was but one opinion concerning his impersonation of the role. he plays it as no other man could. Every look, every gesture is worthy of attention, and is a manifestation of the art which conceals art. Mr. Fechter steadily works up to the climax in the last act. In each act he is a different being. In the first he is a crushed, hopeless, dependant, in the second, the proud man of power, in the last, the desperate man who plays his last stake, his life, to save the honor of the woman he loves. Nothing approaching the grandeur of his acting in the last act has ever been seen on the San Francisco stage. "Ruy Blas" will be played to-night.

Opera House.

The Minstrels, who are soon to bid a long farewell to San Francisco, are doing their best to make the public regret them. They are playing a bill comprising their very best acts. Bobby Newcomb is encored again and again after his great song and dance "Wouldn't You Like to Know?" Billy Sweatnam, Charles Reed and B. Montague are great in the act "Wanted, a Nurse." Welch and Rice are repeatedly encored in their song and dance "I Really Shall Expire," and all the acts set forth on our first page are admirably rendered. These last named performers who have done so much to amuse the public of San Francisco and are such general favorites, will take their farewell benefit on Friday evening.

Platt's Hall.

A very pleasing entertainment was given at the hall last night by the pupils of Mrs. Julia Melville. In the play of "Fron-Fron," both Miss Adele Seix, and Miss Louise Vavasour showed the result of training in dramatic art and evinced decided talent for the stage.

The School of Design.

The first exhibition of the School of Design was held at the gallery, 313 Pine street, yesterday. There was a large and fashionable attendance, and all were delighted with the evidences of California talent which adorned the walls. Virgil Williams is prospecting for talent with much success in this city, having struck it rich in many places.

Bella Union Theatre.

Miss Lena Proctor has made quite a success in the character of Lizzie Leonard, in the sensation play of "The Woman of the World," Miss Alice Ross sings serio-comic songs and appears with Ed. Murray in "Barney's Courtship," Fred Ritchie presents his Dutch Blunders, H. R. Archer sings sweet ballads, Matt Kelly, Tommy Barton and others appear in acts, and a very diversified entertainment is given.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Tuesain song and dance, Ned Buckley in first part, Mortimore in his sketches, George O. Thompson in specialties, Miss Ida May in ballads, and others in acts, songs and dances, set forth on our first page, give a capital entertainment.

Spanish Dramatic Season.

The subscription book for this season at the Opera House is now open at Sherman & Hyde' corner Kearny and Sutter streets.

Woodward's Gardens.

These lovely gardens are the daily resort of thousands of pleasure seekers who find much to amuse them.

City Gardens.

The Festival for the benefit of the Swiss Mutual Benevolent Society and Swiss Relief Fund, will be held at the City Gardens on Sunday, June 14th. The Swiss residents of San Francisco intend to make this a national festival. Delegations from San Jose, Stockton, Petaluma and Napa will be present and participate in the exercises. The procession of Swiss societies and citizens, escorted by the Swiss Sharpshooters, will start from the Germania Armory, corner of Sutter and Powell streets at 9 A. M. and proceed to the Gardens, where festivities of all kinds will be held including a grand ball in the pavilion during the day and evening. Tickets to Gardens 50 cents each.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Notes.

Col. Mandeville, end man, comedian and character actor, and Miss Maggie Maguire, comedienne and vocalist, arrived yesterday from the East under engagement to Manager Tetlow of the Bella Union Theatre. They will commence their engagement on Friday evening next.

The box sheet for Welch and Rice's benefit on Friday night is filling up rapidly. They will have a good "house."

John McCullough is still in New York and is announced to play there for a benefit on Friday.

The minstrels will give their last performance on Sunday night.

Light, beautifully finished and graceful in shape, the new Spring style of Hats manufactured at "The" Hat Store, 647 Washington street (second hat store below Kearny street), is just the thing to make a man look a hundred per cent. better. THE MUSIC OF THE SPHERES.

An oval moon floats low and pale
Beneath a sky of matchless stars;
Heaven's warriors close their ranks of mail,
And almost clash their shining bars!

The chorus of those conquering hosts —
The songs their marching legions raise—
Were heard as far as Earth's dim coasts,
'Tis said, by men of ancient days.

For us that music sounds no more.
We long and listen—all in vain!
And Life would be a silent shore,
But for one witching, mortal strain.

I hear it now! for Love's bright heaven
Reigns cloudless in my breast to-night.
Sweet thoughts of thee like starbeams, leaven
The darkness through and through with light.

Proud hopes and memories shine and roll
O'er coming and o'er bygone years,
Still quivering" to my listening soul
A very music of the spheres!

Ah! how they multiply their beams,
Till night becomes as bright as day;
Their glorious heaven, how close it seems!
How real is each reflected ray!

Yet Love's own planet is not there;
Her Venus, large and close, and clear,
Will only bless the earth and air,
Will only rise—when thou art near.

When thy dear eyes, like gentle stars,
Shine through my happy, happy tears;
When thy sweet-sounding voice unbars
Its prisoned music to mine ears;

When at thy softly-murmuring lips,
And on thy breathing, beating breast,
I drank the enchanted cup that dips
The draught which lays the heart to rest.

We hope She Liked It.

An exchange says: The Singhalese have some queer notions. In some respects the women have special rights, for it often happens that a woman marries all the brothers of the same family. There was one who had six such husbands, and she had as many children, and each child calls all the six father.

The Difference.

Anything Midas touched was turned to gold. In these days, touch a man with gold and he'll turn into anything.

If one wishes to pass an hour or two pleasantly at the game of billiards, no pleasanter place can be found in the city than Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, Northeast corner Bush and Kearny streets entrance on Bush. From the window a good view can be had of two of our busiest streets Bush and Kearny. Local Option not in force; for the best of Wines, Liquors and Cigars, are served at the bar. 6-1

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationery a specialty, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

Next to paintings rank photo-crayons as works of art—with many, indeed, photo-crayon portraits are preferred to paintings, although the latter may have emanated from the brush of a noted artist—still, it is hardly possible to obtain as lifelike portraits with the brush alone as can be obtained in photo-crayons. A. Provo Kinit, 28 Third street, has made crayon portraits a specialty, and he has secured an artist whose work will compare favorably with that of any one. Mr. Kinit has a beautiful crayon now on exhibition, at J. B. Golly's, 31 Kearny street. The portrait is the most natural and lifelike work we have ever seen. It shows the work of a careful and untiring, as well as artistic hand, and it is almost a marvel how a work of such excellence can be furnished for the low figure that Mr. K. asks. Other specimens of crayons, as well as every kind and size of photographs, can be seen at the Florence Art Gallery, 28 Third street. 5 A

Do You Feel

Crossgrained and stingy? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, then a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. "Boss Suppers."

An energetic Sunday school worker, whose exact field of labor we care not to directly indicate, though not a thousand miles away, is in the habit of inviting portions of her large infant school, one after another, to visit at her home during the week. On such occasions refreshments, material as well as social and instructive, are freely provided for the little visitors. Upon a Sabbath following one of these visits a short time since, our teacher was busily engaged in talking to her school, when noticing the rapt and eager attention of one of the little listeners—a boy of some seven or eight years—and regarding him as highly interested, she stopped her conversation to ask the nature of his meditations! The reply was accepted as quite as honest as it was prompt. "I was thinking when you were going to give us another of those 'boss suppers.'"

Serve Him Right.

An old chap whose wife is as ugly as sin, was reading an elopement case which seemed to affect him. Said he, "I should be tempted to shoot a man if he was to run off with my wife." "Well, said a hearer, "a man ought to be shot if he runs off with your wife." Verdict for hearer.

A Lively Dance.

A Boston man and a Titusville (Pa.) maid had a little quiet dance all to themselves the other day. He did the dancing while she applied the cowhide, and he doesn't dance attendance on her any more. Neither does he insult Titusville ladies as much as he did.

Ah, Yes!

The Brunswicker, of Missouri, says: "There is an undefinable something about some men which commands our respect, whether we see them heading a conquering squadron, leading a child to the sanctuary, or bending in lowly toil over an onion bed."

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

OUR BROADWAY.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance, with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

A Deep-laid Plot.

The Sedalia Mo. Democrat complains as follows: To show how low and degraded country journalism has become, we will cite this fact: Thirty years ago all these newspaper fiends went into cahoot, and started papers for the simple purpose of laying up enormous amounts of wood. For this purpose every country paper put this notice at the head of its local column:

WOOD WANTED.—We will take wood for sub-cription for this paper. Bring on your wood!

Yes, "bring on your wood." Mark that! Now, what are these rascals doing?

Why, they have been running newspapers for wood until they have got all the wood in the country in their own hands. And now wood is up—they've made a corner in it.

"But," the reader will ask, "where is their market? What good will it do them?"

Poor, ignorant soul! We'll tell you. After these country editors have got all the wood in the country in their own hands, what do they do? Why, they go to work, tooth and toe-nail, and advocate cremation! They know, perfectly well, just as soon as cremation becomes a part of American politics, every man will be trying it on his mother-in-law and wife's relations. And wood will go up to $100 a cord. Every one of these fiends will have this advertisement on one whole side of their paper:

"TO CREMATIONISTS.—Ten million cords of the best hickory, old and dry, just the thing for burning your dear ones in the quickest time possible. Old exchanges for kindling thrown in gratis. Apply at this office."

Then these country editors will be rolling in wealth, instead of glue and molasses, and they wouldn't any more think of exchanging with you than running a patent outside.

Room for the O'Connors and Funks!

Talk of immigration not being rapid enough! Look at the people to arrive to-night. We extract from the passenger list:

Thomas O'Connor, New York; Mrs. O'Connor, do.; T. D. O'Connor, do.; Mary O'Connor, do.; M. O'Connor, do.; J. O'Connor, do.; James O'Connor, do.; Mrs. A. O'Connor, do. D. M. Funk, Illinois; Mrs. Funk, do; Miss Belle Funk, do.; J. S. Funk do; Jacob Funk, do.; Mrs. Funk and three children, do.; Lafayette Funk, do.; Mrs. L. Funk and child, do., and G. W. Funk.

California will not run short of O'Connors and Funks for some time. Now for some Smiths and Browns and we can rest easy. That's the way to immigrate. These people come to stay.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend. "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapin'd
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.

Two Eminent Actors.

EDMUND KEAN.

After a long connection with strolling players, Edmund Kean, through the good offices of the Master of Narrow School, obtained an engagement at Drury-lane Theatre. He made his debut in 1814 as Shylock, and took the town by storm. His next appearance was as Richard III. This second glory was greater than the first, for the difficulties were greater, and they were all surmounted. Joyous and sarcastic in the opening soliloquy; devilish, as he passed his bright sword through the still breathing body of Lancaster; audaciously hypocritical, and almost too exulting, in the wooing of Lady Anne; cruelly kind to the young princes, his eye smiling while his foot seemed restless to crush the two spiders that so vexed his heart; in representing all this there was an originality and a nature which were entirely new to the delighted audience. They seemed to behold altogether a new man revealed to them, in the first words uttered by him from the throne. "Stand all apart!" from which period to the last struggle with Richmond there was an uninterrupted succession of beauties. Even in the by-play he found means to extort applause, and a graceful attitude, an almost silent chuckle, a significant glance—even so commonplace a phrase as "Good night, my lord," uttered before the battle of the morrow—were responded to by acclamations such as are awarded to none but the great masters of the art.

The triumph was cumulative, and it was crowned by the tent scene, the battle, and the death. Probably no actor ever even approached Kean in the last two incidents. He fenced with consumate grace and skill, and fought with an energy that seemed a fierce reality. Rae had sneered at the little man, but Rae now felt bound to be civil to the great tragedian, and referring to the passage of arms in "Richard III.," he, having to play Richmond, asked, "Where shall I hit you, sir, to-night?" "Where you can, sir," answered Kean, and he kept Richmond off in that famous struggle, till Rae's sword-arm was weary with making passes. His attempt to "collar" Richmond, when his own sword had fallen from him, was so doubtful in taste that he subsequently abandoned it, but in the faint, yet deadly-meant passes, which he made with his swordless arm, after he had received his death blows there was the conception of a great artist, and there died with him a malignity which mortal man had never before so terribly portrayed.

JUNIUS BRUTUS BOOTH.

As opponents of Mr. Kean, two gentlemen were brought forward, Mr. Macready, from Dublin, and Mr. Junius B. Booth. The former avoided comparison, and the latter invited it. It was in 1817, and Booth was but twenty-one years of age. Some thought his Richard better than Kean's. They were brought together at Drury Lane in Othello, the Moor by Kean; Iago by Booth. The performance created such intense excitement that the playgoers formed into factions, and serious rioting was the cause of Booth leaving London for America. He made his first appearance in this country, in Richmond, Virginia, July 13, 1821 as Richard. After a very successful engagement there, he appeared at the Park, New York, and afterward with brilliant success throughout the country, enlisting among his warmest friends and admirers, the distinguished statesman and scholar, John Quincy Adams. He returned to England but once to act (1824). In person he was below the middle size, his face eminently handsome, his eyes capable of assuming a melting tenderness of expression, or of darting the most vivid flashes of intense, passion, and his voice was strong, musical and of the most varied intonation.

The grandeur of his action, and the sublimity of his elocution, destroyed all thought of his diminutive size, and crowned him for years the monarch of the American stage. As a tragedian in his best moods he has never been surpassed by any who have graced our boards. Charles Kemble and Macready, with their studied attitudes and enunciation, were, in comparison, but as plodding, wire-drawn critics. Booth was the individual he represented, and the exquisite modulations of his voice, the wonderful mobility of his countenance, and the inspiration of his transcendent genius, thoroughly identified him with the most diverse characters. His education was of a high order; he had acquired a perfect mastery of the French, German and Italian languages, and a general familiarity with others. His performance of Oreste in the French Theatre, at New Orleans, was attended with complete success. He purchased his farm in Hartford County, Maryland in 1824, which the family yet hold. He died in November, 1852, aged 56 years. His remains are buried in Greenmount Cemetery.

Neat.

Fanny was pretty, and had a clear, sweet voice. Fred proposed to her, and she said "Yes." Revealing his happiness to his friend Frank, Fred told of the joyous ring there was in Fanny's voice when she accepted him. "A wedding ring, I suppose, old fellow," was Frank's neat reply.

An Independent Critic.

A very independent critic was the poet laureate of an ancient Persian Shah. The latter was himself a poet, and one day gave his subject some verses to read, and asked for his opinion of them. "May my soul be your sacrifice," said the laureate, "they are bosh." The insulted sovereign exclaimed: "He is an ass—take him to the stables." And the order was literally obeyed. After a short time His Majesty sent for him again, and read some more of his verses. The poet walked off without a word. "Where are you going?" cried the Shah. "Just back again to the stable" cried the undaunted laureate.

Peculiar Advertising.

"Fellow citizens," says an advertiser in the Auburn Advertizer, "I most respectfully take this method to inform you that I am cooked. Yes, thoroughly cooked on the credit system. Perhaps not exactly burnt but I am fearfully browned in the bottom.' All this as an introduction to the statement that the man will sell coal hereafter only for cash.

Not So.

The Indianapolis Sun says:

It will be remembered that Darwin, in contending that man was originally a monkey, "missed a link" in his chain of argument, never being able to find a specimen. The "missing link" has been found. He is "managing editor, sar," of the Sentinel.

Nonsense, he is the What Is It of the Chronicle.

Made a Mistake.

An Indiana lecturer began by saying, "Wives, obey your husbands," when thirty-eight women got up and left the room. After they had gone he resumed: "Wives, obey your husbands," is an old saying, which is only called up for the purpose," etc.

Nothing Strange.

An Iowa engineer married a young lady while waiting for a late train last week. That's no great shakes. A couple might marry and raise a large family of children while waiting for a train in some depots.

Quiet Correct.

The last edition of the London Slang Dictionary, under the head of "Bummer," says, "In California men who profess to be journalists, and so obtain free dinners and drinks, are called literary bummers."

It Doesn't Pay.

The Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer says: We are going to quit the newspaper business; it doesn't pay to run a paper in a town where business men read almanacs and pick their teeth with the tail of a herring.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins!
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners,"
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.

The Forrest Case.

Shortly after the death of Forrest, the counsel of Mrs. St. Clair, called upon the executors of the Forrest estate to ascertain whether the claim Mrs. Forrest had against the estate could be settled amicably, or whether it would have to undergo the tedious process of legal adjudication. Realizing that a prolonged litigation would involve an outlay of a large sum of money while necessarily occupying a year before a final decision could be reached, and also regarding it as certain, under the decision in New York, that Mrs. St. Clair's right to a dower interest in that State was well founded, the executors of Forrest's estate met counsel on the other side in a friendly way, and negotiations have been going on until recently. The result reached is, that the executors of the Forrest estate give to Mrs. St. Clair the sum of $95,000, in full and entire settlement and discharge of all claims against the estate, not only in the State of New York, but in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky and Michigan, in all of which Forrest owned real estate. In furtherance of this arrangement, it became necessary to have an act of Assembly passed in the State of New York. This was accordingly passed at the recent session of the Legislature, signed by the Governor, and is now a law. This whole sum of $95,000 is to be paid out of the proceeds of the unimproved land of Forrest on the Hudson river, in the neighborhood of Yonkers adjoining the Font Hill property, now owned and occupied by the Sisters of Mount St. Vincent. By this settlement, the executors and trustees of the Forrest Home, being relieved from all delays, will be enabled to go at once and sell the real estate in the different States, preparatory to the great work of providing the Home for Decayed Actors, near this city, as contemplated in the will of Forrest.—[Philadelphia Press, May 29.

Trade in Montana.

A Chinaman entered a store in Helena, Montana, the other day, and walking up to the counter, deposited a grasshopper thereon, saying as he gazed upon the clerk with a confiding look: "He too much hoppee; all hoppee—stop him. You sabbee?" The obliging clerk at once commenced measuring off mosquito bar, to the intense delight of the heathen. The grasshopper had been destroying his garden, and wanting to purchase some mosquito bar, but not knowing the name of the article, he brought the destroyer with him, and the clerk understood in a moment the article needed.

Reason Enough.

Master Tom, who is home for the holidays, found a box of sweetmeats one morning in a drawer, and his mother was relating in the evening, with very justifiable indignation, how the young scapegrace had emptied the box. "It's not true," cried Master Tom; "I left two." His godfather, naturally surprised, took him aside, and asked him in confidence why he had not eaten them. "Oh," replied the younster, with a sigh, "because I couldn't."

Men's Discussion.

Lady of the House—Well, Charles, you seem to prefer one another's society to ours. Charles—Very sorry, my dear; no notion it was so late. Got talking politics, you know, eastern question, attitude of Russia, don't you know, and er—Miss Becky—Discussing the sublime Porte, cousin Charles, I suppose you mean.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationers of the people, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

No Reform.

The Grass Valley Union learns from a reliable gentleman of Rough and Ready township that more whisky is now in that township than there was on the day of the Local Option election, and that the present whisky is much more accessible than was the bit a drink article of the days of license. It is affirmed also that some who voted and worked for "no license" now keep a five gallon package in a handy place, using as an excuse therefor that these are the days of snake bites in Rough and Ready township. The Union says its informant is a reliable temperance man.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Those who have seen Fechter more than once in "Ruy Blas" discover new beauties in each performance. Not in his strong melodramatic acting in the last act, but in the early portions of the play is the subtle delicacy of his acting discernible. Every gesture has its value. With his hand Fechter can express volumes, he is the true "man with the talking hand." These are points for the critical, but by his intense personal magnetism he captures those who are incapable of appreciating the details of the performance. In the last act he positively electrifies his audience, every eye is fixed on him, and so intense is the silence during some portions of the play that one can hear the people breathe. 'Ruy Blas" will be played again to-night.

Opera House.

Bobby Newcomb in his celebrated song and dance "Wouldn't You Like to Know," George S. Knight in his German comicalities, Welch and Rice in "I Really Shall Expire," Billy Sweatnam, Little Mac and others in amusing acts, and a great number of other attractive performances will be given to-night. To-morrow evening Welch and Rice will take their farewell benefit, and among other attractions will present their new act entitled "Off for America." There will also be a grand trial double jig for two medals and amateur championship of California by Harrington and McGlone and Murphy and Mack, a triple song and dance by Bobby Newcomb and Welch and Rice, and a song and dance ballet introducing eight song and dance men on the stage at one time. Mr. L. Hartnett, the best of our amateur vocalists, has also volunteered. There is sure to be an immense house.

California Theatre.

Offenbach's very amusing opera of "Barbe Bleue" was splendidly performed last night. M'lle Aimee made a jolly Boulotte, M'lle Roland looked charmingly pretty and acted capitally as the Princess Hermia, Mons. Juteau sang and acted delightfully in the role of Barbe Bleue, and Mons Lecuyer, funny as he has always been, was never as funny as he could be until last night, when he appeared as Popolani. He made the audience laugh until their sides were sore. Mons. Duchesne as King Bobeche, and M'lle Cantrelle as Queen Clemence, were excellent in make-up and acting, and altogether "Barbe Bleue" was a grand success. It will be repeated this evening. To-morrow evening Mons. Emile Juteau will take his benefit, and "La Fille de Madame Angot" will be performed.

Bella Union Theatre.

This very popular theatre is doing an immense business and presenting a very popular entertainment. Among the acts to be performed to-night may be mentioned "The Intelligence Office," "Barney's Courtship," "Obeying Orders," "The Robbers" and "Dodging for a Wife." The sensational play of "The Woman of the World" continues to be a great feature of the performance.

Spanish Dramatic Season.

The subscription book for this season at the Opera House is now open at Sherman & Hyde' corner Kearny and Sutter streets.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Such performers as Johnny Tuers, Ned Buckley, George C. Thompson, Johnny Price and Frank Mortimore cannot fail to please. This popular little variety theatre is crowded nightly.

Excursion.

On Sunday next the Mexican military company, Guardi di Jesres, will have a picnic and ball at Live Oak Park, San Jose. Tickets are only three dollars for the round trip and admission to the Park. A limited number will be sold by the parties mentioned in advertisement on another page.

Woodward's Gardens.

These lovely gardens are the daily resort of thousands of pleasure seekers who find much to amuse them. On Saturday and Sunday there will be a grand fencing tournament—assaut d'armes—in the French style; also, for the first time, the thrilling grand act of Zampilleorostation, together with the Frog Act and pantomime and concert. The baby camel, born June 2d, and the original ghost window are among the novelties to be found at Woodward's.

City Gardens.

The Festival for the benefit of the Swiss Mutual Benevolent Society and Swiss Relief Fund, will be held at the City Gardens on Sunday, June 14th. The Swiss residents of San Francisco intend to make this a national festival. Delegations from San Jose, Stockton, Petaluma and Napa will be present and participate in the exercises. The procession of Swiss societies and citizens, escorted by the Swiss Sharpshooters, will start from the Germania Armory, corner of Sutter and Powell streets at 9 A. M. and proceed to the Gardens, where festivities of all kinds will be held including a grand ball in the pavilion during the day and evening. Tickets to Gardens 50 cents each.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Notes.

"Ruy Blas" has made such a hit that it will keep the stage all the week.

The business next week at Maguire's New Theatre will be "Don Cæsar de Bazan," for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, and the "Lady of Lyons," for Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights and for Saturday's matinee.

Miss Kate Browning, a charming young actress, late of Daly's Theatre, New York, will arrive by the overland train to-night. Miss Browning is engaged to Manager Maguire, and will put in an appearance at his New Theatre next week, when the company will be otherwise strengthened by the addition of Miss Jeffreys Lewis, late leading lady at Wallack's, New York, Theatre; Mr. Edward Arnott, late leading man from the same theatre; and Messrs. Sidney Cowles and George Giddens from the Eastern theatres. This will form a very strong and almost a new company, capable, with the support of the present company, of playing any piece the exigencies of the business may require in an unexceptional manner. With a new and handsome theatre and an excellent company with so many new faces in it, Manager Maguire may confidently look forward to a brilliant season in the future.

W. Hamilton, an old California actor, arrived overland last night bringing with him the famous "La-La Sensation" which he will shortly produce in this city.

"Le Petit Faust" will be the bill for the matinee to-morrow.

GO AND LEARN A TRADE.

[Sung by a little blind boy—a pupil of the N. O. Deaf and Dumb and Blind Institute, before the N. O. Press Association, on Wednesday, May 14th, 1874.]

I'll sing a little song to-night,
And every word is true,
You'll find that every word is meant,
Young gentleman for you!
I've no intention to offend,
In what is sung or said,
The sum and substance of it is,
To go and learn a trade.

CHORUS:—The "coming man, is he who lives,
To see his fortune made,
Whom everybody will respect,
Because he learned a trade.

Your education may be good,
But time is flitting by,
Instead of loafing don't be fooled,
The old man may not die;
And if he should the chances are,
The will may be mislaid,
Or you put off without a cent,
So go and learn a trade.

CHORUS, ETC.

This country's full of nice young men,
Who from their duty shirk,
Who think 'twould crush their family pride
If they should go to work;
Take off your coat (your father did),
And find some honest maid,
Who'll help you make your fortune when
You've learned an honest trade.

CHORUS, ETC.

Be temperate in all that you do,
Be faithful to your "oose,"
You'll find the more you do for him
Will never prove a loss,
You'll find in fifty years from now,
When fame and fortune's made,
The best step that you ever took,
Was when you learned your trade.

CHORUS, ETC.

Next to paintings rank photo-crayons as works of art—with many, indeed, photo-crayon portraits are preferred to paintings, although the latter may have emanated from the brush of a noted artist—still, it is hardly possible to obtain as lifelike portraits with the brush alone as can be obtained in photo-crayons. A. Provo Kluit, 28 Third street, has made crayon portraits a specialty, and he has secured an artist whose work will compare favorably with that of any one. Mr. Kluit has a beautiful crayon now on exhibition, at J. B. Golly's, 31 Kearny street. The portrait is the most natural and lifelike work we have ever seen. It shows the work of a careful and untiring, as well as artistic hand, and it is almost a marvel how a work of such excellence can be furnished for the low figure that Mr. K. asks. Other specimens of crayons, as well as every kind and size of photographs, can be seen at the Florence Art Gallery, 28 Third street. 5 A

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Do You Feel

Crossgrained and stingy? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, then a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. Special department for ladies. Everything neat as wax. Single tickets, 25 cents. Five for one dollar.

If one wishes to pass an hour or two pleasantly at the game of billiards, no pleasanter place can be found in the city than Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, Northeast corner Bush and Kearny streets entrance on Bush. From the window a good view can be had of two of our busiest streets Bush and Kearny. Local Option not in force; for the best of Wines, Liquors and Cigars, are served at the bar. 6-i

The Effect of Good Acting.

"When I was a poor girl," relates Mrs. Scott Siddons, the actress, "working very hard for thirty shillings a week, I went down to Liverpool during the holidays, where I was kindly received. I was to perform in a new piece—something like those pretty little affecting dramas they get up now at the minor theatres—and in my character I represented a poor, friendless orphan girl, reduced to the most wretched poverty. A heartless tradesman prosecutes the sad heroine for a heavy debt, and insists on putting her in prison unless some one will be bail for her. The girl replies, 'Then I have no hope—I have not a friend in the world!' 'What! will no one be bail for you to save you from prison?' asks the stern creditor. 'I have told you I have not a friend on earth,' was my reply. But just as I was uttering the words I saw a sailor in the upper gallery springing over the railing, letting himself down from one tier to another, until he bounded clear over the orchestra and footlights, and placed himself beside me in a moment. 'Yes, you shall have one friend, at least, my poor young woman!' said he, with the greatest expression in his honest, sunburnt countenance. 'I will go bail for you to any amount! And as for you' turning to the frightened actor, 'if you don't bear a hand and shift your moorings, you lubber, it will be the worse for you when I come athwart your bows.' Every creature in the house rose; the uproar was perfectly indescribable—peals of laughter, screams of terror, cheers from his tawny messmates in the gallery, preparatory scraping of violins in the orchestra; and amid the universal din there stood the unconscious cause of it sheltering me, 'the poor distressed young woman,' and breathing defiance and destruction against my mimic protector. He was only persuaded to relinquish his care of me by the manager's pretending to arrive and rescue me with a profusion of theatrical bank notes.'"

A Determined Boy.

A lad twelve years old tried to commit suicide in West Grove, Chester County, Penn., recently, by hanging. He had been sent to live there from Wilmington, Del., and was homesick. When resuscitated, he said: "If he was not allowed to live with his grandmother in Wilmington, he wanted to go and live with his grandfather in Heaven."

A Pleasing Experiment.

A man who fell into a vat of boiling lard and got out alive, says that it was not an unpleasant sensation after the first moment, but he thought what a mighty queer shaped doughnut he would make.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419 opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street, by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance, with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

Boucicault in London.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia City Item, writes as follows from London: Mr. Dion Boucicault has arrived in the great metropolis, and is already hard at work preparing for the production of his drama "Led Astray" at the Gaiety Theatre. It will be produced in splendid style, with several New York actors in the cast, with costumes by Worth of Paris, and a mise en scene that is to astonish even the frequenters of the Gaiety, who have long been accustomed to richness of decoration and lavish outlay in this important department of theatrical art. Mr. Boucicault speaks with enthusiasm of the spirit and energy of American managers, the capacity of American actors, and the intelligence of American audiences. He hopes to return to New York in July to superintend the production of a new national drama that he has written for an important New York theatre.

Strong Advertising.

A Chicago manufacturer thus advertises his wares: Damnation of infants Professor Swing does not believe in; he believes in their happiness hereafter, and here, too; and so do we, and have for that reason embarked a large capital in the manufacture of the perfection baby-holder and jumper, after proving to our entire satisfaction that it is the best thing for babies ever devised. Doctors praise, parents admire, babies enjoy. It gives health and strength, saves time and labor, and is a splendid success every way, because invented by a mother, the result of fifteen years' experiment.

Trouble in the Family.

We met Mr. Grosbeck yesterday.—"How are you?" said we. "Oh pooty goot!" said he. Said we. "How's the family?" Said he: "Oh, I've got droubles. Last night mein oldest boy vas taken mit electric fits. Der doctor gifs me a description, but I got it done up du or dree dimes before it mate him better! Come oud und see me—you won't catch dem fits, dere not courageous!" A friend beckoned us across the street just then.

Bad Spelling.

The local items man of the Call, describing an arrest for cock-fighting, calls that sport "alectryomachy." He spells it in this way twice. We suppose he meant alectoromachy. A man who cannot spell the simplest words in the English language correctly, is not fit to write local items for a newspaper.

Had Him There.

A pompous clergyman once said to a chubby-faced lad, who was passing without raising his hat, "Do you know who I am, sir, that you pass me in this unmannerly way? You are better fed than taught, I think." "Well, maybe it be so, mistur," said the boy; "for you teaches me, an' I feeds myself."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again,
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.
CHARLES HAAKE, Proprietor.

Salvini in "Samson."

Salvini has been performing in Philadelphia and the All Day City Item says of him:

Like a truly great actor, Salvini adapts himself with wonderful ability to every character he represents. The contrast between his "Sullivan" and "Samson" (creations as far apart as the earth and the heavens), must have astonished everyone last evening. His "Samson" was an overwhelming performance.

Morally, of course, "Samson" is immeasurably above "Othello" in grandeur, and more reasonable in its appeals to our sympathies. The character of "Othello" is essentially selfish in all its aims and emotions, while "Samson" has ever in views however bound in "Delilah's" chains, the high mission which devolves upon him as the deliverer of his people, and, amidst all his passions, the pangs of conscience for his neglect of that lofty duty are ever manifested. Even in his misfortune his thoughts are less of lost love and glory, than of the failure of the great purposes of his existence

Yet, great as "Samson" is, Salvini's "Othello" is greater—far greater.

"Othello" we admire—"Samson" we pity. Of the two pity is stronger than admiration. But Shakespeare has immortalized "Othello," and Ippolite d'Este has made only a melodramatic creation of "Samson." The language sometimes give rise to a fine climax, but, as a general thing, it is but little above the common-place.

With an eye for dramatic effect, the dramatist has given "Samson" forcible entrances, such as his first appearance, in Act I., or his sudden appearance in Act II. But it is melo-drama rather than tragedy, and Samson is merely a series of tableaux rather than a complete creation.

"Samson's" first appearance produces an effect, and is well contrived. "Manoah"—Signor A. Salvini—has been offering up sacrifice at a burning altar, near which he stands surrounded by Israelite elders. The oppression of the people by the Philistines is being eloquently discussed. The question is put: "Who will be our defender?" In reply, "Samson" suddenly appears on the slope of a hill, and standing there "in native worth," offers himself as the desired chief.

Descending to the stage the hero gives an account of his adventures during an interval of absence, describing, among the rest, the incident of his rending the lion. As given by Signor Salvini, and aided by his superb physique and scientific make-up, in which the long raven locks, the mighty arms, and the description, addressed to the elders of Israel, it was a magnificent piece of oratory, and although delivered in a foreign tongue, pictured vividly the desperate struggle for life and death between the lion and the lion-like man, who had slain him by sheer strength of limb.

Throughout "Samson," Salvini steadily rose to the grand climax, and the finale that closes the tragedy was most impassioned, being admirably arranged in regard to scenic effect, and produced the same effect as the finale to Meyberbeer's opera. "Le Prophete."

Chow-Chow.

When are the hands of a clock and the hands of a cotton mill most alike? When they meet together at noon!

"Lazy folks take the most pains"—and usually the most pleasure.

"Make your hay while the sun shines"—and get it in directly you have made it.

People who have seen their best days—the people of Algiers, Tunis and Tripoli.

It appears to be a fixed belief with many foreigners that the sun is never seen to rise in England, and no wonder, for Mr. Bull has repeatedly affirmed that it never sets on Britain's vast domain.

It Depends.

An enthusiast describing the appearance of Mount Washington last month, remarks that it was "white as a table cloth." Either that man has no children or he does not permit them to have molasses at their meals.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stations. a pecialty, they had no idea of the extent business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

Opera House.

The minstrels are giving a brilliant entertainment for the last week of their engagement at this house. Bobby Newcomb appears in all his glory, and the rest of the performers do their very best to please. The performance to-night will be for the benefit of three admirable comic artists, Welch and Rice, and extraordinary attractions will be presented. Among them we may mention the great trial dance between Harrington and McGlone, and Murphy and Mack for two beautiful medals, a triple song and dance by Bobby Newcomb and Welch and Rice and a new sensation for the first time in San Francisco, consisting of a song and dance ballet arranged by Welch and Rice introducing eight song and dance men on the stage at one time. Billy Sweatnam, Bobby Newcomb, Little Mac, Charles Reed and all the others will appear in varied specialities and the beneficiaries will present for the first time in America, their new act entitled "Off for America." The usual matinee performance will be given to-morrow.

California Theatre.

An admirable performance of "Barbe Bleue" was given last night, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience present. To-night the popular tenor, Mons. Emile Jutesu, will take his benefit and the great success of the season "La Fille de Mm. Angot," will be performed for the last time. Mons. Jutesu is such a general favorite, that he is sure to have, as he deserves, an overflowing house. At the matinee to-morrow the very lively opera of "Le Petit Faust," will be performed, and on Sunday evening "Barbe Bleue," will be given once more.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Charles Feobter will appear again this evening in his wonderful impersonation of Ruy Blas. His success has been unmistakable. All confess that no such actor as he has ever trod the San Francisco boards. We have had many fine elocutionists, elegant actors, but genius is rare. Feobter has this rare gift, and in it lies the secret of his power over his audience. Miss Lizzie Price, Miss Mary Wells, Miss Sallie Hinckley, Charles Edmunds, and A. D. Billings afford effective support. 'Ruy Blas" will be played at the matinee to-morrow.

Spanish Dramatic Season.

The Spanish dramatic season at the Opera House will commence on Tuesday of next week, with the spectacular drama in three acts entitled "Campana de la Almudaina" ("The Bell of Almudaina" and the comedietta of "Casa de Campo," (The Country Cottage") in which Donna Francisca, Alfonso de Luque, will appear in the drama and Donna Soledad Alva de Luque, in the comedietta. The box office is now open at the Opera House.

Bella Union Theatre.

To-night, in addition to many other attractions that comical genius Col. Mandeville will make his first appearance in California at this house and present his celebrated costume character changes including the popular "10,000 Miles Away." He will also appear on the tamborine end in the first part, Miss Maggie Maguire will also make her appearance and Miss Lora Proctor will continue her engagement in the sensation play of "The Woman of the World."

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

A great variety of amusing acts will be presented this evening by Johnny Tuers, Frank Mortimore, Johny Price, Miss Katie Zoe and others. To-morrow evening, Miss Rose Vincent, will make her first appearance.

Excursion.

On Sunday next the Mexican military company, Guardia de Juarez, will have a picnic and ball at Live Oak Park, San Jose. Tickets are only three dollars for the round trip and admission to the Park. A limited number will be sold by the parties mentioned in advertisement on another page.

Woodward's Gardens.

These lovely gardens are the daily resort of thousands of pleasure seekers who find much to amuse them. On Saturday and Sunday there will be a grand fencing tournament—assaut d'armes—in the French style; also, for the first time, the thrilling grand act of Zampillo-statian, together with the Frog Act and pantomime and concert. The baby camel, born June 2d, and the original ghost window are among the novelties to be found at Woodward's.

City Gardens.

The Festival for the benefit of the Swiss Mutual Benevolent Society and Swiss Relief Fund, will be held at the City Gardens on Sunday, June 14th. The Swiss residents of San Francisco intend to make this a national festival. Delegations from San Jose, Stockton, Petaluma and Napa will be present and participate in the exercises. The procession of Swiss societies and citizens, escorted by the Swiss Sharpshooters, will start from the Germania Armory, corner of Sutter and Powell streets at 9 A. M. and proceed to the Gardens, where festivities of all kinds will be held including a grand ball in the pavilion during the day and evening. Tickets to Gardens 50 cents each.

JOHNNY'S DEATH.

BY PELEG ARKWRIGHT.

I.

Sit down close beside me, Billy—
I'm so glad you've comed at last;
I was feared they wouldn't find you,
And my time is slippin' fast.
Stoop down Billy—ta kin' hurts me,
I'm bad off for breath, you see;
One of them fire-engines done it—
Guess them horses finished me.

II.

They runned over me in Broadway,
Well, it's done—no use to cry!
When them chaps is in a hurry,
Nothin' else don't signify.
Wait a minute—how that hurted!
Bill, it's rather hard to bear;
I wa'n't harmin' anybody—
Only sellin' papers there!

III.

Bill, it won't be long—I'm goin';
Yes, that's wot the doctors said;
But I wish I knowed more certain
Wot it's like when folks is dead.
Wish I'd been a better feller,
Stuck right to the Golden Rule;
Minded all them other lessons
Wot I learned at mission school.

IV.

There is Mamie—Bill, I would 'ave
Liked to said good-by to her;
No! no use to try and fetch her,
It's too late—she lives too fur.
I believe she would 'ave kissed me
Ef she'd seen me come to this;
I'd 'ave stood it almost cheerful
S'e's to have one lovin' kiss.

V.

Bill, you tell her how I liked her;—
Loved her hard—'tain't nothin' new;
She has always knowed it, Billy,
And I b'lieve she likes me too,
And I used to think that maybe
When we both growed up, y' know,
It might come I'd marry of her—
Bill, it is hard lines to go,

VI.

But its comfortin' to 'member
Wot our teacher said one day,
How the blessed lovin' Jesus,
Full of pity, used to say:
Little folks was always welcome—
Free to come to him up there;
Guess I'm posted up sufficient.
So's to venture on a prayer.

VII.

Jesus, I'm a little feller
Got runned over on the street;
I'm a dyin', you kin help me—
Please to guide my stumblin' feet.
I ain't always knowed my duty,
But I've tried to do wot's right:
Jesus, Tender Shepherd, take me—
Make a place for me to-night!

VIII.

There is two I hates to part from—
Mamie dear and Bill likewise;
Jesus! please to try and fetch us
All together when they dies.
There! I guess—I'm goin'—Billy!
Never mind, old chap—don't cry!
Oh! there's Mamie!—kiss me, Mamie!
Why, just see that mornin' sky!

A New Artist.

The London correspondent of the Boston Courier says: The artistic lion—or rather lioness—of the day is a Miss Thompson, who has a large picture entitled, Calling the Roll after a Battle in the Crimea, exhibited in the Royal Academy. It was the Prince of Wales who discovered the merits of the picture. It arrested his attention when privately walking through the exhibition, and he at once enquired whether the picture had been sold. Miss Thompson informed him that the picture had been sold for £100. The Prince of Wales ascertained the name of the purchaser, and offered him more than the original price, but like a true Manchester man, the first owner stuck to his bargain. It is said that the Messrs. Agnew & Son, the eminent picture dealers, afterwards offered £500 for the picture, but without success, and I am also assured that its present owner would have little difficulty in obtaining £1000 if he should be disposed to part with it. All this is highly flattering to the clever artist, who gets the "empty praise," but she might have preferred the "solid pudding." Miss Thompson, has, however, the consolation of thinking that she has a fair chance of obtaining a thousand pounds for her next picture in the same line, and perhaps she has already fixed upon the subject. It is in art as in literature. You must put a lot of money in somebody else's pocket before the Pactolian stream begins to flow into your own.

Satisfactory.

A boy, six years old, having been much lectured by his father on the babyishness of crying when any calamity happened, cheered the paternal heart, the other morning, by saying: "Harry Bolton cried nearly all day 'cause his father died; but if you should die, pa, I wouldn't cry a bit."

An Appropriate Text.

A clergyman being much pressed by a lady of his acquaintance to preach a sermon the first Sunday after her marriage, complied, and chose the following passage in the Psalms as his text:—"And their shall be abundance of peace—while the moon endureth."

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Gerville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Do You Feel

Crossgrained and stingy? Go right to the Sanitarium, foot of Powell street, North Beach, and take a 10 or 15 minutes' (not longer) hot sea-water bath, then a smart cold shower, then a vigorous rubbing with towels, and you will come out as nimble as a monkey, and feeling benevolent enough to give away all your neighbor's property. Improvements just completed. Special department for ladies. Everything neat as wax. Single tickets, 25 cents. Five for one dollar.

OUR BROADWAY.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Seamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Seamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Seamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Seamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

PACIFIC COAST DRAMATIC NEWS.

SAN JOSE.—Victoria C. Woodhull lectured at the Opera House on Tuesday, and again on Wednesday evening. The Mercury says the best people in San Jose attended and were not shocked.

SONORA.—The San Francisco Minstrels performed here last night.

JACKSON,—The Wilton Variety Troupe performed at the Theatre here last week, and will return on the 22d.

HOLLISTER.—Victoria C. Woodhull lectured at Beatty's Hall last night.

MODESTO.—The San Francisco Minstrels performed here last night, and will give another entertainment this evening.

SALINAS.—Victoria Woodhull will lecture at Pacific Hall to-night.

VREKA.—Wallace's Minstrels performed at Kessler's Theatre two nights last week. The Journal says; Jake is certainly an excellent delineator of negro character, and Jimmy Cotton is also good. The Vieuxtemps Brothers, of Jacksonville, Oregon, gave a vocal and instrumental concert at the same theatre on the 9th.

GRASS VALLEY.—Last night the dramatic spectacular oratorio of "Belshazzar," composed for chorus, solos and orchestra by J. A. Butterfield, was performed at Hamilton Hall by Geo Gray, Miss Mollie Hinds, Mrs. W. Barton and other amateurs. O. H. Chase was conductor.

COOS BAY.—The Coos Bay News of the 3d effusively remarks:—"The Vivian troupe leave us on the Empire, their destination being Crescent City and Humboldt. It is seldom that a performer of Vivian's ability gets into such wild country as this, but he seems to enjoy it greatly. He will astonish the Londoners just as much with his quaint delineations of Oregon character, a year hence, at he now convulses us with his inimitable drollery in 'Ten Thousand Miles Away' or his lachrymose earnestness in 'Sweet Jenny.' He is a real citizen of the world, and if he should find himself on the sands of the Barcan Desert, he would lie down contentedly saying, 'We may be happy yet.' He has our best wishes for his pecuniary success, and we trust there may never be a day in our life but we can cheerfully say to him, 'I'm Glad to See You, Boy.'"

CARSON.—Barton Hill and the California Theatre Company performed here on Monday and Tuesday evenings.

VIRGINIA CITY.—Miss Amy Stone, supported H. F. Stone, W. J. Cogswell and dramatic company, opened at Piper's Opera House on Monday in 'Cigarette;" on Tuesday "The Pearl of Savoy" was played; and on Wednesday, "Fanchon."

PORTLAND, O.—Miss Fanny Phelps and dramatic company performed the Irish drama entitled "Pyke O'Callahan, or the Patriot's Wife," at Oro Fino Theatre on Saturday last. On Monday, the comic drama of "The Irish Immigrant," Miss Fanny Morgan Phelps' rendition of The Bonny Fishwife, with songs and a musical interlude, constituted the entertainment.

DENVER.—The Lingards were playing at the theatre at last accounts. Miss Octavia Coriell was the star at the Cricket Varieties. She appeared on the 8th in "The Child of the Regiment."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen!
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All-right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'd
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners,"
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again,
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.
CHARLES HAAKE, Proprietor.

FOREIGN DRAMATIC NEWS.

"Le Sphinx" has been produced in its original form at the Royal Princess' Theatre, London.

Miss Glyn, the English actress, has obtained a divorce from her husband, Mr. E. S. Dallas.

The farewell banquet in London, to Mr. J. L. Toole, the comedian, will take place at Willis' Rooms on the 1st of July.

The London Figaro says: "If the power of Miss Cushman as an elocutionist at all approaches its reputation in America, it is quite time that some English agent should try if he cannot persuade so rare an artist to give us a taste of her quality in London. A reader who could hold her audience spellbound for two hours, over her rendering of Henry VIII., would certainly insure a triumphant reception at the Hanover Square Rooms, when a happier test of her talent was submitted to her."

Richard III. (Barry Sullivan) kicked a carpenter in a Liverpool theatre, and was arrested for it. Alas! for the downfall of royalty.

Mlle. Christine Nilsson intends to sing at Drury Lane in "Les Huguenots" and "Fidelio," whereupon the London critics assert that "her impertinence is becoming even too much for an operatic entrepreneur."

Sim Reeves sings at the Handel festival in London, next month.

Charles Mathews is playing at Liverpool in "The Critic" and other plays which he made familiar to San Francisco audiences.

A new piece is announced at the Parisian Varieties, entitled "Les Mormons a Paris."

London dates to the 16th ult., speak of F. C. Burnand's new comedy of "Archie Lowell, dramatized from Mrs. Edwardes's novel of that name, as to be produced at the Royalty that evening

The "Beggar's Opera" and the "Great Metropolis" were presented at the Gayety 9th and 10th, and on the 11th Charles Mathews reappeared, and played with his accustomed vivacity.

Campanini was to have made his first appearance at Her Majesty's Opera, Drury Lane, on the 21st, as Gennaro in "Lucretia Borgia."

Robert Heller is now in the fourteenth week of his stay in Manchester.

J. K. Emmet, who recently arrived in England, was to open at Brighton, 25th.

The cost of the chandelier at the Opera House at Paris will amount to $15 000.

During the late large fire at Yokohama, the Varieties Theatre was totally destroyed, only a few properties being saved. The building was uninsured.

Madame Arabella Goddard left Hong-Kong for Shanghai by the French mail of the 29th March.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouff," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationers of the city, they had no idea of the extent of business they would do. They have on hand, and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

PROCLAMATION!

JULY 4, 1874.

HEADQUARTERS GRAND MARSHAL, Southwest corner Clay and Montgomery Sts., San Francisco, June 12th, 1874.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Having had conferred upon me the high honor of being chosen Grand Marshal of the celebration of the approaching Anniversary of American Independence, by the "Committee of Two Hundred," I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all Military and Civic Bodies, and to all my fellow-citizens generally, to participate in the approaching celebration, and to unite in a fitting tribute to the glorious event that gave a rank to our Country among the Powers of the World, proclaiming the United Colonies of America as the abiding place of Freedom, and the hope and refuge of the oppressed of all nations.

Let there be a celebration worthy of the Glorious Day, and let the children of all climes and countries unite in rendering honor to the Birthday of our Republic and give an unfailing assurance that the courage, sacrifices, and heroism of the Patriots of '76 are joyingly appreciated by their descendants, and by all men who now enjoy the blessings of a Free Government, and the benefits they receive through the devotion of our Revolutionary Fathers.

To command success, it is necessary that every citizen should take an active interest in the Celebration, and their co-operation and assistance is specially desired.

Special Invitations will be extended to all organized Bodies, and a prompt and ready acceptance is solicited.

Committees on Finance, composed of well-known citizens, will wait upon the citizens generally, from whom a generous response is expected.

The appointment of Chiefs of Staff, Marshals of Divisions and Aids, will be announced as speedily as possible.

The Grand Marshal assures his fellow-citizens that nothing shall be left undone to make the forthcoming Celebration worthy of the Day and once more asks for your co-operation and assistance.

DANIEL NORORGSS, Grand Marshal.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

OPERA HOUSE.—This house was crammed to suffocation last night when Welch and Rice, the popular song and dance men took their farewell benefit. Larry Hartnett, and all the volunteers were cheered, and the entertainment, which was a most satisfactory one throughout, closed with a contest for two medals by Harrington and McGlone and Murphy and Mack, amateurs, the prizes to go to the best dancers. The first-named gentlemen were justly awarded the prizes, their style being more finished and graceful than that of their competitors. The matinee to-day and the performance this evening will be the last two given by the minstrels prior to their departure for Portland. The great bill which has delighted so many thousands during the week will be played.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—Mons. Emile Juteau, the tenor of the Aimee French Opera Bouffe Troupe, had a splendid benefit last night, and the ever-popular opera of "La Fille de Madame Angot" was performed in excellent style, Mlle. Roland as usual causing quite a sensation in the Trocasses dance. To-night the liveliest and wickedest of all the operas which have been produced, —"Le Petit Faust—" will be revived. It will also be played at the matinee to-day. On Sunday evening "Barbe Bleue" will be played for the last time. On Monday evening Offenbach's very successful opera "La Vie Parisienne" will be produced for the first time, and as a matter of course will draw an immense house.

MAGUIRE'S NEW THEATRE.—"Ruy Blas" with Mr. Fechter as the hero will be performed at the matinee to-day, this evening and, for the last time, to-morrow evening. None can afford to miss seeing this great actor in his wonderful realization of one of the romantic creations of Victor Hugo. The play has been retained on the stage during the whole of the week for the express purpose of affording an opportunity to all to see Mr. Fechter in one of his greatest characters.

THE COMING SPANISH DRAMATIC SEASON.—The Spanish dramatic season at the Opera House will commence on Tuesday of next week, with the spectacular drama in three acts entitled "Campana de la Almudaina" ("The Bell of Almudaina" and the comedietta of "Casa de Campo," (The Country Cottage"), Donna Francisca, Alfonso de Luque, will appear in the drama and Donna Soledad Alva de Luque, in the comedietta. The box office is now open at the Opera House.

JEFFS PIPES' FAREWELL.—Stephen Massett, author, poet, musical composer and nonpareil of story tellers, will take a farewell benefit and make a last appearance in San Francisco at Mercantile Library Hall. The success of the entertainment is already secured, the sale of tickets having been very large.

BELLA UNION THEATRE.—Among the acts to be played to-night, by Matt Kelly, Tommy Barton, J. W. Summers, Tommy Bree, Miss Alice Ross, Ed. Murray, and others, are, "Laughing Gas," "Barney's Courtship," "I'm From the Country," "The Rivals" and "City Life." Mr. Cal. Macdeville, who appeared last night, in character sketches, after the style of "Vivian," made a decided hit, and was repeatedly encored. He will appear again this evening. The sensational play of "The Woman of the World" will be repeated.

BUCKLEY'S NEW VARIETY THEATRE.—Johnny Tuers in song and dance, Geo. C. Thompson in his specialties, Mortimore in his sketches and a great variety of other attractions will be presented this evening, and Miss Rosa Vincent will make her first appearance.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS—THE FROG ACT.—These lovely gardens are the daily resort of thousands of pleasure seekers who find much to amuse them. To-day and to-morrow there will be a grand fencing tournament—assaut d'armes—in the French style; also, for the first time, the thrilling grand act of Zampilla's restation, together with the Frog Act and pantomime and concert. The baby camel, born June 2d, and the original ghost window are among the novelties to be found at Woodward's.

EXCURSION OF THE GUARDIA JUAREZ.—To-morrow, the Mexican military company, Guardi di Juarez, will have a picnic and ball at Live Oak Park, San Jose. Tickets are only three dollars for the round trip and admission to the Park. A limited number will be sold by the parties mentioned in advertisement on another page.

CITY GARDENS.—SWISS RELIEF FUND.—The Festival for the benefit of the Swiss Mutual Benevolent Society and Swiss Relief Fund, will be held at the City Gardens to-morrow June 14th. The Swiss residents of San Francisco intend to make this a national festival. Delegations from San Jose, Stockton, Petaluma and Napa will be present and participate in the exercises. The procession of Swiss societies and citizens, escorted by the Swiss Sharpshooters, will start from the Germania Armory, corner of Sutter and Powell streets at 9 A. M. and proceed to the Gardens, where festivities of all kinds will be held including a grand ball in the pavilion during the day and evening. Tickets to Gardens 50 cents each.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain Railroad.

GOLDEN GATE PARK.—Those who drive out to the new park should visit The Villa which has just been opened. Here they will find four public parlors and ten private dining rooms. Guido Mangonberg, the proprietor, gets up epicurean breakfasts, dinners and suppers at short notice. Omnibuses will leave on SUNDAYS, at 9 o'clock A. M., from the corner of Market and Kearny streets, and every hour afterward, until 4 o'clock, from the corner of McAllister and Fillmore streets connecting with the Market Street and Hayes Valley cars, and from the corner of Turk and Fillmore streets by the way of City Front and Lone Mountain cars.

GRAND SUNDAY EXCURSION.—The steamer Antelope leaves San Francisco every Saturday at 3:30 P. M. and on Sunday at 8 A. M. from Front Street Wharf, connecting with the cars of the S. F. & N. P. Railroad at Donahue for Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg and Cloverdale. Excursion tickets are issued at reduced rates, and are good from Saturday to Monday. Those who wish to enjoy a little country air at the end of the week could not choose a finer trip than this excursion offers.

NOTES.—John Howson, the popular comedian, who has made so many laugh, is in anything but a merry mood just now. The public will be sorry to hear that he is suffering acutely from inflammatory rheumatism, and has gone to the Gilroy Hot Springs for relief.

Barton Hill and the California Theatre Company returned last night from Virginia City, Carson City and Reno, where they played successful engagements.

Next week will be the last but one of the French Opera Bouffe season at the California Theatre. Sothern commences an engagement on the 29th.

Lotta is taking a rest in San Francisco, luxuriating in the village, prior to making an appearance at the California Theatre. She had a private box at the Opera House, on Thursday night to see Fechter's Ruy Blas.

During the engagement of Mr. Fechter the play of "Love's Penance," recently produced in New York will be performed.

"Don Cæsar de Bazan" will be produced at Maguire's New Theatere on Monday evening, with Charles Fechter as the hero, and E. Arnott, Miss Lizzie Price, Miss Sidney Cornell and others in the cast.

A base ball match was played on the 11th between Maguire's Opera House Club and the Americus Club, in which the active minstrel boys almost skunked the 'Mery-cusses. We append the score:

Mons. Emile Juteau, the tenor of the Aimee Troupe, received on the occasion of his benefit last night a gold and quartz match box, a set of shirt studs and sleeve links of the same material, another pair of sleeve links of cameo and onyx, and a chaplet of laurel leaves in gold.

The new combination of minstrels at the Opera House will comprise the favorite Ethiopian comedians, Bob Hart, Ben Cotton, Arlington and others.

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

In New York, the season has closed at most of the theatres. Booth's will be reopened by Jarrett & Palmer, who now own it, in the Fall.....A. Niblo's, "The Lady of the Lake" was being played .....The season at the Metropolitan Theatre closed on the 30th ult.....At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, the season closed on the 3d, with "Monsieur Alphonse," and two acts of "Oliver Twist."..... G. W. Middleton played a star engagement at the Bowery Theatre on the 25th ult., in a bad play called "Bred in the Bone." We suppose he has a companion play called "Bone in the Meat".....At the Olympic Theatre, Sheridan and Mack, Sam Orne, Paddy Hughes, and others were performing ....."Camille" was continued at Union Square Theatre with McKee Rankin as Armand, in place of Charles R. Thorne Jr.....At Bryant's Opera House, Bob Hart continues to be a great favorite... At Wallack's, Miss Carlotta LeClercq is playing in "Fate."

Mr. Edwin Booth closed his engagement at Ford's Opera House, in Baltimore, making his farewell as Richard III. Mr. Booth's engagement comprised fourteen performances, two of which were matinees. The receipts were as follows: 'Richelieu," (first night), $1,580; (second night), $1,740; "Shylock," $1,674; "Othello," $1,710; "Lady of Lyons," matinee, $1,100; "Richard III." $1,733; "Hamlet," $1,660, $1720, $1733, $1400; Friday "Iago," $1,205; "Don Cæsar," matinee, $715; "Brutus," $784; "Richard III." (last night), $ 801. The aggregate receipts exceed by far those of the best engagements known in Baltimore.

Sam Barth, comedian, died in Philadelphia, 27th ult. He made his first appearance there ten years ago, and has since been traveling with combinations.

Mrs. James Oates and troupe, Boston, June 1, one week.

Pauline Markham is reported to have left New Orleans, May 18th, for northern regions.

Rumors of the approaching marriage of Miss Clara Morris, are circulating freely. The fortunate gentleman is said to be Mr. F. C. Harriott, a produce merchant of New York. It is understood that the wedding will take place next month, at the expiration of Miss Morris' current engagement at the Union Square Theatre. It will be private, and be followed by a trip to Europe. Within two years, three well-known actresses (Agnes Ethel, Ada Haviland and Lillie Davenport) have married into private life. If rumor be true, Miss Morris may be the fourth, though she will probably not leave the stage.

Lewis Simmons and Edward Slocum, proprietors of Simmons & Slocum's Minstrels, were arrested in Newark, 25th to answer a suit for damages instituted against them by Kelly & Leon. It is alleged that they entered into an engagement with Kelly & Leon, in Philadelphia, for three months and broke the engagement at the end of three weeks. They gave bail.

Richard Risley Carlisle, popularly known as Professor Risley, died suddenly in the Insane Asylum at Blockley Almshouse, Philadelphia, in the sixtieth year of his age. Early in life he joined a circus company that was passing through his native town, Salem, N. J., and soon won distinction as an acrobat and as a performer on the flute. He was subsequently better known as the head of the Risley family of athletes. In 1845 he went to London, and preformed to profitable houses. He next visited the Continent and won fresh laurels. Returning to London he made a wager that he was the best marksman, wrestler, runner, jumper, hammer thrower, and billiard player in the city, and offered to compete with the champion in each line. This he did, and defeated all, except Roberts, the billiard player, who was then in his prime. He returned to this country a wealthy man, but had not forgiven Roberts for defeating him at billiards, and was determined to square the odds with him. Accordingly he made an engagement with Andrew Stark, who was then considered the best billiard player in America, and took him to London. By this venture Risley lost $30,000. Coming back to America, he retired to a fine residence at Chester, Pa., and lived for a while upon his still ample fortune. But again he entered the show business, and began importing troupes from abroad. His first venture was in bringing out the Rousell Sisters, with a French ballet. This and subsequent similar enterprises proved a heavy drain upon his purse. Some years ago he imported a troupe of Japanese acrobats. This adventure which followed brought about his financial ruin he died insane and in poverty.

At the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Mass., the Butler Combination filled out another week acceptably. The only change was the first appearance of Bessie Sudlow, serio-comic. The new sketch of "Tom Collins," with Sam Rickey as the victim, proved quite funny, and the whole entertainment was excellent. The troupe closed May 30, and the drama takes possession of the Howard stage, Oliver Doud Byron opening in "Across the Continent."

Arlington, Cotton & Kemble's Minstrels performed at Lapont, June 1, Joliet, Ill., 2, Morris 4, Otto 5.

This is one of the most popular travelling troupes ever organized. Ben Cotton is as bright as ever, and has learned much new business.

Frank Brower, one of the originators of negro minstrelsy in its present form, is lying dangerously ill at his residence in Philadelphia, Pa.

Hernandez Foster appears at Wood's Museum, on the 17th inst., in "Jack Harkaway and the Brigands."

The Strakosch Italian Opera company were in Chicago on the 4th.

The Garetta Company recently closed at Springfield, Mass., for the purpose of reorganizing the company. The members of the old company who will remain are: Signor Monti, Nettie Taylor, Billy Wells, J. H. O'Neil, and Cooper and Fields. They will resume shortly at Buffalo, N. Y.

E. D. Davis, the famous ventriloquist, was recently interviewed by an individual in St. Louis, who desired to become an addition to the number of counterfeits already on the stage. The great original, as in previous cases, instructed the candidate; but, alas! the unfortunate wight attempted a ventriloquial display in a street-car, and got bounced for his pains.

The Faust Club, of Brooklyn, organized some three years since by a number of actors and other professional gentlemen has lost its prestige. On the 25th the Sheriff of King's county levied on the furniture, paintings, piano, etc., in their clubhouse, on a judgment for debt. An execution on the suit of another creditor is also in the hands of the Sheriff.

Miss A. L. Dargon gave a dramatic reading on the 27th ult., at Robinson Hall, her selections being from the "School for Scandal," "Deborah," and the "Merchant of of Venice," with a few miscellaneous poems.

William Castle, the tenor singer, and Sher. Campbell, baritone, late of the Parepa Rosa Opera Troupe, arrived from England by steamship Spain on May 25 h.

The New York Clipper says: John T. Raymond is in this city. He is to commence a two weeks' engagement at the Museum, Boston, Mass., on June 22.

Miss M. E. Gordon, (Mrs. Raymond,) left for Europe on May 30th.

Mrs. Confrau's engagement at the Union-square Theatre, originally set down for March 8, and afterwards postponed to May 11, has been given up. A misunderstanding between the contracting parties led, it is understood, to this result. The lady will therefore spend the vacation at her Long Branch residence. She opens the coming Fall season at the California Theatre, San Francisco, in September.

L. Barrett has been playing an unprofitable engagement in Boston. He does better in the small towns. One of the critics says: Mr. B.'s success here has not been so great as was anticipated. He claims not merely excellence, but pre-eminent excellence, in his impersonations, and this our critics have been unwilling to grant. His portrayals Hamlet and Richelieu are both worthy of praise, but both are the traditional stage impersonations.

Miss Georgie Loomis is playing at the Academy of Music, Chicago, and is a favorite.

The New York Dispatch: The noble art of writing criticisms without witnessing the performance, seems to be on the increase in this city. In writing of the production of "The Lady of the Lake," at Niblo's, the Herald man volunteers the information that "in the matter of the dresses of the performers there was a strict adherence as could be to the directions of the poem and to what with a little license, may be termed the sartorial records of the play. The Times said; The death of "Lady Margaret," embodied by Miss Ida Vernon, is very touching, and the Post man actually performed the ocular miracles of seeing Mr. Woelock in "a suit of Lincoln green." When one readers learn that the costumes were not appropriate to the "sartorial" or any other records; that Miss Vernon did not play "Lady Margaret;" that "Lady Margaret" does not die in the play at all, and that Mr. Woelock dressed "Fitzjames" in a velvet tunic, they can estimate the faith to be placed in criticisms of the journals mentioned. For reliable criticism, read the Dispatch.

For reliable criticism of San Francisco performances read FIGARO. The Call "criticised" the performance of Mrs. Julia Melville's pupils at Platt's Hall, and said John Howson and J. P. Burnett assisted them when neither of these gentlemen appeared.

Miss Ella Weaner, who has been on the variety boards for several years, has decided to return to the dramatic stage next season. She will appear in a drama entitled "Mixed."

Miss Katie Mayhew, a brilliant little comedy actress, commenced an engagement at the National Theatre, Washington, last week, in a new play, written for her by Mr. Clifton Tayleure.

Mr. E. T. Goodrich, a young actor of excellent reputation, has joined the company at Wood's Museum.

Mr Louis Aldrich will take the place of Mr. T. W. Keene as leading man at Wood's Museum.

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question where they had their clothes made, that they want to Baloun & Stonda, No. 618 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment, 6-m

Too Bad.

It is not often that a country editor makes a joke, and it is very provoking when it is spoiled by the compositor. The Marysville Appeal man is in trouble just at present. He says:

We endeavored yesterday to pay Mons. Peri a compliment for his skill and taste in pencil drawing, but the type-setter converted the compliment into a vulgar reflection. Referring to Mons. Peri's card-drawings on exhibition in his show-window, we endeavored to compare them favorably with some of the best of the great artist, Mr. Nast, of Harpers' Weekly, and wrote "they are Nasty." The printer first substituted the word "tasty," and in correcting the proof supplied a small n in place of the capital letter. Mistakes will happen with the best of printers, and sometimes they are very provoking.

The printer could not see the subtle wit in using the term "Nasty" in describing poor Mons. Peri's tame little pictures and thought tasty (a vile word) would be better, but as the writer insisted on calling them nasty, couldn't appreciate the fun of spelling "nasty" with a capital N. The printer was not much to blame.

"Heartless."

The Post terms Miss Jennie Carlotta Short's letter to young Wiley "a model, but heartless letter of rejection." This is simply impertinent. Miss Short is termed "heartless" because when she discovered she did not love Wiley, she had courage enough to tell him so. She says:

I awaken to the stern reality, I do not love you, You no longer awaken the spirit of love within my breast, and I think marriage without love a mockery and sin.

If every young lady possessed the good sense and good principles of Miss Short, the world would not be cursed with so many unhappy marriages. No girl need regret not having married a man who commits suicide on being refused by her.

A Justifiable Rebellion.

At the Theatre Francaise a very funny one-act comedy has been produced. It appears that the feudal chief (old) of the castle of Toulouse has such an awfully lovely wife that a revolution ensues because he keeps her shut up from the eyes of the people. The struggle ends in the defeat of the old party, and an agreement that the beauty is to walk twice a week in Toulouse, accompanied on each occasion by a cavalier of her own choosing without her husband.

He was in.

A man who was seen coming out of a Texas newspaper office with his nose split open, one eye gouged out, and an ear chawed off, explained to a policeman that he was not a subscriber to the paper—he had simply entered the office to ascertain if the editor was in. "And he was in," he mournfully added.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins in
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again,
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.
CHARLES HAAKE, Proprietor.

Offenbach's New Opera.

Howard Paul writing from London says: "Lecocq having had a lively turn in London with his 'Madame Angot,' Offenbach is once more to the fore at the Alhambra Theatre, which is managed with spirit by Mr. Baum. 'La Jolie Parfumeuse' is the new venture, and the industrious Henry J. Byron has produced a very pleasant adaptation. There is a run in Paris just now on interrupted nuptials. The nuptials of Fritz and Wanda, in 'The Grand Duchess,' were interrupted; the nuptials in 'La Perichole' were interrupted; in the 'Timbale d'Agent,' 'Heloise et Abelard,' 'La Fille de Madame Angot,' and many another opera, they play upon the same string—a knowing bride, a stupid husband, and a remand by the magistrate Cupid. There is nothing vastly entertaining to English ears in this somewhat schoolboy fooling, but the French love to harp upon these subjects—to bait their hooks with a lose notion and to whip the stream with it. It is of little consequence that Rose Michon, the pretty perfumeress, is betrothed wife of Bavolet, a sentimental youth, and that a jealousy is created by the illicit overtures of La Cocadiere, a grand gentleman and—the bridegroom's godfather. One can guess how the French would play with this fire, how the nuptials would be postponed, how La Cocadiere would pretend to be the bridegroom and explain the terrors of matrimony; how jealousy would be created, and how eventually after much flirtation, the pretty perfumeress would take her husband to her heart, and let bygones be bygones. All these things are easily understood; and it may be reasonably added that Mr. Byron has cleverly got out of a difficulty by preserving the framework without much of the decoration—in fact, to use his own words, by 'pulling the old house to pieces and building another with the same materials.' The credit of the English version of 'La Jolie Parfumeuse' belongs almost entirely to the leading artists, who, with wonderful energy and conspicuous taste, have given to the music of Offenbach a fascination which could not reasonably be expected. The music of the opera is neither original or wonderful. Clever it frequently is; nearly always tricky. But the artists do wonders with it. The best praise should be awarded to Miss Kate Stanley, who is the Parfumeress and sings the music admirably. She caught much of the spirit and crispness which modern French opera music requires, and, happening to be just now in excellent voice, she has obtained and really merited a success. An opera so well represented cannot fail to be attractive, and there is little need to add that, under Mr. Baum's management, it is mounted with accuracy and excellent taste. In a word, "La Jolie Parfumeuse' may be considered an opera not interesting in a humorous or musical sense, but worth seeing from the fact that the success of it is due to the unaided art of the various singers, actors and actresses concerned. Mlle. Tho. for whom Offenbach wrote the music of the pretty Parfumeuse, in appearance, manner, and buoyancy of spirit is not unlike the American favorite Mrs. James A. Oates, and the latter charming lady has the advantage of a more extended range of voice than the Parisian actress.

A Chance for a "Literary Man."

An editor accustomed to reporting, and willing to occupy spare time as a compositor, is wanted on a country paper. A muscularity that would allow of his devoting his evenings to a hand-press would probably be highly appreciated by the proprietor of this journal.

An Excess of Law.

At Burlington, a stranger stopping at the Van Ness House said to the Ethiopian who blacked his boots, "Any law against 'sidewalks in Burlington?" "Dunno, boss; tink very likely; law against most everything here; wouldn't wonder if you's right.

One of Max Adeler's.

Shortly after Mr. Zeigler joined the Improved Order of Red Men, he visited a circus and menagerie which tarried in New Castle for a few days, and he was much pleased to find among the curiosities actually the Kickapoo Indians, who was attached to the show, and who moved about among the people with all his feathers and war-paint on. Zeigler determined to use his familiarity with the secrets of the Red Men for the purpose of getting acquainted with this particular savage, so he approached the chief and gave him fifteen different grips in rapid succession, besides whispering all the pass words and winking furiously at the noble aborigine. The chieftain, at first, seemed somewhat surprised; but just as Mr. Zeigler was giving him the fifteenth grip, and was in the midst of some confidential remarks about "wampum" and "moons" and "happy hunting-grounds," the Kickapoo was suddenly impressed with the conviction that Mr. Zeigler's reason had been temporarily dethroned, and so, after knocking him down and sitting on him, the warrior called in a companion:

"Begorra, Moike, come yer quick an' hold this maineyac, or be me sow he'll be a murtherin' every mother's son ov us. Git a bit ov a rope an' we'll bind 'em to the asylum in a push cart."

Then Mr. Zeigler became aware that his Kickapoo was a deception; and, after buying off the aboriginal fraud with a quarter, Mr. Zeigler went home with an impression that his initiation fee was not a wholly judicious investment.

An Intelligent Clerk.

Max Adeler says: I went into a Philadelphia bookstore the other day, for the purpose of procuring a copy of Christopher North's well-known "Noctes Ambrosianae." The first person I encountered was a red-haired clerk, to whom I said:

"Have you 'Noctes Ambrosianae?"

"Wh-wh-wh-what d'ye say?" he asked, with mouth and eyes wide open.

"I called to ascertain if you have 'Noctes Ambrosianae.'"

"I don't know exactly—that is, I don't understand knocked his—what'd you say?"

"I say that I understood you had 'Noctes Ambrosianae.' If you haven't, why don't you say so at once?"

"I don't know what you mean. I never did such a thing in my life."

"Perhaps you don't understand me. I wish to see if you have 'Noctes Ambrosianae'—Christopher North's 'Noctes Ambrosianae.'"

"Oh, he has, has he? He's knocked his what-you-call-it, has he? Well, I don't care a cent if he has! You've come to the wrong shop; you must be crazy; your mind seems to be unhinged; you have n't——" breaking off suddenly and addressing a clerk in the rear of the store. "Say, Bill, here's a fellow that's foolin' around here wantin' to knock somebody. Get a policeman, quick!"

Then I left and hunted up another emporium of learning.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesale and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. F. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or under wear receives the same treatment at the hand of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the fine beaver gossamere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living profit; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

PROCLAMATION

JULY 4, 1874.

HEADQUARTERS GRAND MARSHAL,
Southwest Corner Clay and Montgomery Sts.
San Francisco, June 12th, 1874.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Having had conferred upon me the high honor of being chosen Grand Marshal of the celebration of the approaching Centennial Anniversary of American Independence, by the "Committee of Two Hundred," I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all Military and Civic Organizations and to all my fellow-citizens generally, to participate in the approaching celebration, and unite in a fitting tribute to the glorious event that gave birth to our Country among the Powers of the World, proclaiming the United Colonies of America as the abiding place of Freedom, and the home and refuge of the oppressed of all nations.

Let there be a celebration worthy of the glorious Day, and let the children of all civilized countries unite in rendering honor to the natal day of our Republic and give an unfailing assurance that the courage, sacrifices, and heroism of the Patriots of '76 are not only appreciated by their descendants, and by all men who now enjoy the blessings of a Free Government, and the benefits they receive through the devotion of our Revolutionary Fathers.

To command success, it is necessary that every citizen should take an active interest in the celebration, and their co-operation and assistance is especially desired.

Special invitations will be extended to all Military and Civic Bodies, and a prompt and ready acceptance solicited.

Committees on Finance, composed of well known citizens, will wait upon the citizens generally, from whom a generous response is expected.

The appointment of Chiefs of Staff, Aids of Divisions and Aids, will be announced as early as possible.

The Grand Marshal assures his fellow-citizens that nothing shall be left undone to make the forthcoming Celebration worthy of the Day. Once more asks for your co-operation and assistance.

AN OPEN LETTER
From a Known Business House
of this City.

TO THE PEOPLE OF SAN FRANCISCO AND State of California—As reform is now the cry all over the State, and every man and woman trying to become economical, I wish to call your attention to a particular subject, and that is, when you wish to invest a dollar to do so, and go where it will get your money's worth; when you make your purchase, go to the house that manufactures and imports the article direct, and you are sure to save money. To find such a House go to S. POPPER'S new shirt manufactory and gents' furnishing goods establishment, No. 618 Kearny street, between Sutter and Bush, and 627 Kearny street, between Bush and Pine, oldest and leading shirt manufacturing establishment in the city. I don't offer to sell below cost, or retail at manufacturers'prices—that's too thin; but he can sell a better made and more perfect-fitting shirt, superior in quality, than more immediate prices than any other house in the city. The same in underwear, gents' furnishing goods, etc. Shirts made to order, and fit guaranteed or warranted. Gentlemen going to the city please remember this, and call before purchasing elsewhere.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

California Theatre.

To-night the opera entitled "La Vie Parisienne" will be presented for the first time in this city. Mlle. Aimee will appear as Gabrielle, a glove maker, Mons. Emile Juteau will undertake three distinct characters, and Mlle Stani, Mlle Roland, and all the favorites are in the cast. On Wednesday, "Geneviève de Brabant" will be produced and Mons Duplan will take his benefit. "La Vie Parisienne" is put on for only two nights. Those who miss seeing it will regret it.

Maguire's New Theatre.

The somewhat sombre drama of "Ruy Blas," having had its run the public are now to be treated to a lighter play in "Don Cæsar de Bazin." We caught a glimpse of this worthy in "Ruy Blas;" to-night, impersonated by Mr. Feshter, he will be the leading figure on the stage. Those who attend Maguire's New Theatre, to-night, will witness such a realization of the scapegrace Don as they have never seen before. Mr. Arnott from Wallack's, New York, and formerly of the Haymarket, London, will appear as Don Jose, Miss Lizzie Price will take the role of Maritana, Miss Emma Champness will play Lazarillo, Charles Edmonds will appear as the King, Miss Mary Wells as the Marchioness de Rotundo, Frank Rea as Captain of the Guard with songs, A. D. Billings as the Marquis de Rotundo and R. Hill as Parolo.

Opera House.

This house will be closed to-night for rehearsals and preparations for the season of Spanish drama comedy and opera, which will commence to-morrow. The performance on that occasion will begin with the spectacular drama in three acts entitled "Campana de la Almadaina," (The Bell of Almadaina) in which Donna Francisca Alfonso de Luque, will appear as Donna Constance, supported by Don Joaquin Fernandez, Don Rafael Alfonso and others. After this the comedietta of "Casa de Campo" (The Country Cottage) will be played by Donna Soledad Alva de Luque, Don Rafael Alfonso and others. There will be a change of programme every evening, and everything in the repertoire of the company is said to be bright and sparkling.

Bella Union Theatre.

The rush to see the clever character performer, Cal Mandeville in his changes continues unabated. He has made quite a hit in "The Drum Major." "Awfully Clever," and other songs, Miss Alice Ross and Ed. Murray, continue very popular in "Barney's Courtship," and the sensation play of "The Woman of the World" with Miss Lena Proctor, Miss Jennie Johnson and others in the cast excites much applause.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Toers in his original acts and song and dance, Ned Buckley in the first part, Miss Ida May in ballads, and a great many other attractive features may be found in the programme published on our first page.

Mercantile Library Hall.

Steve Massett will take leave of his many friends at Mercantile Library Hall, on Wednesday evening. He will present a very varied and popular entertainment.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain Railroad.

Notes.

The annual reception of the Art Association, will be held this evening at its rooms on Pine street. There will be an attendance limited only by the number of invitations issued.

Charles Fechter will, before he leaves this city, appear in a French character.

Opera for the people is projected—admission twenty-five cents.

Harry Eytinge is going into the interior with Miss Imogene Holbrook, who will give entertainments consisting of readings and comediettas.

The Fabbri troupe performed at Bakersfield on the 13th.

The Bohemian Club Choir comprising the best voices in the city will appear at Platt's Hall on Thursday evening next, for the benefit of the Louisiana Sufferers.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stationers a specialty, they had no idea of the extent business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Reilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

HOPE ON, HOPE EVER.

BY GERALD MASSEY.

Hope on, hope ever! though it may be dark,
The sweet sunburst may smile on thee to-morrow;
Tho' thou art lonely, there's an eye will mark
Thy loneliness, and guerdon all thy sorrow!
Tho' thou must toil 'mong cold and sordid men,
With none to echo back thy thought or love thee,
Cheer up, poor heart! thou dost not beat in vain,
For God is over all, and Heaven above thee—
Hope on, hope ever.

The iron may enter in and pierce thy soul,
But cannot kill thee, love within thee burning;
The tears of misery, thy bitter dole,
Can never quench thy true heart's seraph yearning
For better things, nor crush thy ardor's trust
That Error from the mind shall be uprooted,
That Truths shall dawn as flowers spring from the dust,
And love be cherished where hate was embruted,
Hope on, hope ever.

I know 'tis hard to bear the sneer and taunt,
While the heart's honest pride at midnight wrestle,
To feel the killing canker-worm of want,
While rich rogues in their stolen luxury nestle,
For I have felt it. Yet from Earth's cold Real
My soul looks out on coming things, and cheerful
The warm Sunrise floods all the land ideal,
And still it whispers to the worn and tearful,
Hope on, hope ever,

Hope on, hope ever! after darkest night,
Comes, full of loving life, the laughing morning;
Hope on, hope ever! yet the day shall come,
When man to man shall be a friend and brother,
And this old world shall be a happy home,
And all Earth's family love one another!
Hope on, hope ever.

Don't Do It.

Don't ask the Lord to keep your "garments unspotted." He isn't renovating old clothes.

Don't linger where your "love lies dreaming." Wake her up and tell her to get breakfast.

Don't turn up your nose at light things. Think of bread and taxation.

Don't insult a poor man. His muscles may be well developed.

Don't put on airs in your new clothes. Remember that your tailor is suffering.

Don't stand still and point the way to Heaven. Spiritual guide-boards save but few sinners.

Don't ask your pastor to preach without notes. How else can he pay his provision bills?

Don't fret. The world will move on as usual after you are gone.

Don't be too sentimental. A dead hart, properly cooked, will make a savory meal.

Don't write long obituaries. Save some of your kind words for the living.

Don't depend wholly on Spaulding's prepared glue. It will not mend a broken promise.

Don't boast of your knowledge of astronomy. Anybody can ascertain the number of "fixed stars" by counting our policemen.

Fan Flirtation.

When a lady uses her fan in an outward movement—that is, away from her into space—it means that she is married and you must not hope. The contrary movement, inward, from space to the body, means that she is free. If, however, this inner movement is made by fanning in a downward direction, it means that she is a widow; if in an upward direction, that she has never been married. A closed fan, held upright, means "do as you like." An open fan, resting on the breast, means "silence." A closed fan, presented to you horizontally, means an "invitation;" presented by the small end, "indifference." With one leaf open, "friendship;" two open leaves, "sympathy;" three, "love and passion." A "talking fan" should be composed of seven leaves, to correspond with the seven days in a week. The hour you are expected at the rendezvous is made by so many taps being made on the leaf which represents the day. A colored fan placed on the lips means "don't tell." A circuler movement of the fan means "we are watched."

Waste.

When a Cincinnati woman shoots at her drunken husband and misses him, the newspapers say, "Another bullet wasted."

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter-House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant. 5-M

"Fate" at Wallack's.

The New York Spirit of the Times speaking of the production of Bartley Campbell's play at Wallack's says: He succeeds in interesting the average audience, who after all are really the class who patronize theatres the most liberally, and doubtless is satisfied with his work. But Mr. Campbell must do better work—work of a higher standard—if he aspires to reputation as a playwright. We feel quite confident that "Fate" is only the precursor to a better play from the pen of Mr. Campbell. One defect in the construction of "Fate" is the "carpenter's scene" in the third act. The action of a good modern play should be concentrated into a single scene to the act. This defect can be easily remedied. There is no reason why Paulding and Blaize should not meet in the parlor of Rose Cottage. Paulding is a servant on the premises and Blaize has been in and out of the parlor all the evening. Let Juno return to the parlor for a book, or on any pretext, and then give Paulding his scene with her. No effect is added by having it transpire in a bed-room, and it can be easily arranged to take place as we suggest. "Fate" was well acted. Miss LeClercq as Helen Faraday won the sympathies of every one. She is a consummate artist in everything she does. Belonging to the French school, she gives us many of those subtle touches of art by a look, a smile, or a gesture that tell more to the audience than a speech of half a dozen lengths. As Helen Faraday she appeared at her best, and won much applause. Miss Lillie, as Juno Temple, has really the strongest part in the piece, but evidently does not appreciate the "beautiful siren" and "beautiful fiend" business. She certainly looked more like an amiable young lady who wouldn't scheme to get a spoonful of marmalade. Miss Lillie lacks force and intensity to play Juno Temple well. Miss Margaret Chambers, in the chambermaid part of Sallie, did the best acting among the ladies, excepting, of course, Miss LeClercq. There was a freshness about her performance that was pleasing, and it exhibited nothing stagy. Miss Chambers is an excellent actress, and only wants the opportunity to make a great hit. She has received much applause each evening.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I've lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question, where they had their clothes made, that they went to Balcum & Stouda, No. 618 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment. 6-M

What Is This?

That remarkable genius who does the criticisms for the Chronicle, you know, says Don Cæsar de Bazan "does not sufficiently suit Mr. Fechter for it to earn a lengthened meed of prosperity." He then remarks:

At the same time the general excellence of the cast is so great, and the talents of the star so far beyond question, that it is impossible not to see that this piece deserves the utmost possible commendation.

If the piece deserves "the utmost possible commendation," we don't see why it shouldn't enjoy a "lengthened mead" whatever that may be. "Don Cæsar de Bazan" was thoroughly enjoyed by all who witnessed it last night.

A Sweeping Assertion.

The Independent Californian, a local option paper, recently started in San Jose, says:

Nearly all the crimes committed in our land are chargable on the liquor venders. But for these fearful evils there is a remedy and the first step toward reform is united and faithful labor.

There is no doubt that drunkenness is the cause of much crime, but indigestion is also a potent agent for ill. Bad cooks we believe are responsible for fully as many crimes as are the liquor venders. Dyspepsia and dipsomania are the fiends at present ravaging the United States and curdling the milk of human kindness.

How Is It?

Foster, the medium, has returned to this city from Australia. According to the San Francisco Chronicle he was "exposed" in Melbourne, as he has been every where else, yet in spite of this he took in one hundred guineas in one day. "Exposing" Foster does not seem to have a very prejudicial effect on him. He is at present raking in money at the Grand Hotel, and is ready to be exposed once more. This is a mystery. The more he is exposed, the more he flourishes. There must be something supernatural about Foster.

Sound.

George Francis Train is decidedly sane upon some points. In regard to newspaper articles, for instance, he says: "Epigram only wins. Long stories tire the listener. We are introducing a new style of literature. Nothing over four inches is admitted. Long-winded articles go overboard. Your shot-gun only kills your woodcock a few yards off; the same lead in rifle ball knocks a grizzley at a mile."

"The Open Letter."

This weekly is making rapid progress in popular favor. Its illustrations are full of character, and its paragraphs bright and incisive. The last number issued contains a picture representing a friendly sparring match between John McCullough and Charles Fechter.

Very Provoking.

A short time ago one of our San Francisco newspaper poets sent a pome to one of the dailies, entitled "Hope Ever." This cheerful adjuration occurred nine times in the course of the pome, and each time the beast of a compositor set it up "hop over."

Good Gracious!

The ignorance of the Brevity man of the Alta is appalling. He thinks an Australian laughing jackass is an animal like himself. Go to thou Alta idiot, a laughing jackass wears feathers—is a burd.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen!
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend. "let's go in here
It looms so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a T."
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners,"
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again,
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.
CHARLES HAAKE, Proprietor.

Home Again.

Lewis Morrison and Miss Rose Wood, haven't done much "starring" this season. They played Celia Logan's "Rose" in Cleveland, O., two or three times, and are now back again at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, playing in "The Sea of Ice." The All Day City Item in welcoming Lewis back, makes the following genial remarks: We can make reasonable allowance for vanity in any one—but more particularly in actors. Therefore, we have always endeavored to be lenient with Mr. Morrison. But, during the last few days, a number of large-sized photographs of Mr. Morrison have suddenly made their appearance in the windows of the various bar-rooms, on the candy-stands, and in mysterious nooks and corners. These photographs are about the most hideous we have seen in a long time. They represent Mr. Morrison en costume, leaning against a pillar, with one leg crossed, his head cocked on one side, and a smile that is simply diabolical, although it is intended to be very bewitching, performing a grand adagio.

We can stand a great deal—but we protest against these photographs. They are ghastly in their ugliness, and Mr. Morrison is homely enough without being made as black as a certain gentleman himself. We suggest that Mr. Morrison cremate the whole parcel of them. We don't wonder his "star" engagement in Cleveland was a failure if these photographs were scattered through the city in advance.

Is Mr. Morrison supposed to be a fixed "star" now, or a shooting "star?"

"Tom Collins"

New Yorkers have been for some time running what is known as the "Tom Collins" joke. One would think that it would at last cease to sell the artless dwellers in Gotham, but it seems to work as well now as the first day of it appearance. Jones enters a saloon or restaurant, and meet some acquaintances. "Jones, have you seen Tom Collins?" inquires one of the party. "No," responds Jones. "Well, he was here a few minutes ago, looking for you, and went round to Brown's (another saloon), thinking you might be there. He wants to see you about something very particularly." Jones goes round to Brown's and inquires for Collins. The proprietor, who understands the joke, sends him to another place, where Collins has just gone in search of him. This is kept up until Jones discovers the sell, when he immediately goes out hunting another victim upon whom he can perpetrate the same joke. All the eminent men in New York are said to be reveling in this delightful recreation, while "corners" are at a discount and stock speculations are unknown. They might be engaged in a more mischievous, but they could hardly find a more idiotic, occupation.

An Explicit Advertisement.

This is the way a Florida man expects to get a partner to his bosom. He advertises as follows: "Any gal what's got a cow, a good featherbed, with comfortable linens, five hundred dollars in good, genuine slap-up greenbacks, that has had the small-box, measles and understands tending children, can find a customer for life by riten a small william ducky, addressed W. Y. Z., and stick in a crack of Uncle Billy Smith's barn, jinin' the pig-pen, where Harrison Reed is now planning for future operations."

A Mistake.

An old quaker on his deathbed called his son to him and addressed him as follows: "John I have provided for thee, well. I have left thee all my property, and have appointed thy Uncle James exeentor." John pressed the hand of his dying father and said: "I thank thee father for thy kind intention, but thee has made a mistake. Thee shoulds't have left all thy property to Uncle James, and made me executor."

Offenbach's New Opera.

Howard Paul writing from London says: "Lecocq having had a lively turn in London with his 'Madame Angot,' Offenbach is once more to the fore at the Alhambra Theatre, which is managed with spirit by Mr. Baum. 'La Jolie Parfumeuse' is the new venture, and the industrious Henry J. Byron has produced a very pleasant adaptation. There is a run in Paris just now on interrupted nuptials. The nuptials of Fritz and Wanda, in 'The Grand Duchess,' were interrupted; the nuptials in 'La Perichole' were interrupted; in the 'Timbale d'Argent,' 'Heloise et Abelard,' 'La Fille de Madame Angot,' and many another opera, they play upon the same string—a knowing bride, a stupid husband, and a remand by the magistrate Cupid. There is nothing vastly entertaining to English ears in this somewhat schoolboy fooling, but the French love to harp upon these subjects—to bait their hooks with a lose notion and to whip the stream with it. It is of little consequence that Rose Michon, the pretty perfumeress, is the betrothed wife of Bavolet, a sentimental youth, and that a jealousy is created by the illicit overtures of La Cocadiere, a grand gentleman and—the bridegroom's godfather. One can guess how the French would play with this fire, how the nuptials would be postponed, how La Cocadiere would pretend to be the bridegroom and explain the terrors of matrimony; how jealousy would be created, and how eventually after much flirtation, the pretty perfumeress would take her husband to her heart, and let bygones be bygones. All these things are easily understood; and it may be reasonably added that Mr. Byron has cleverly got out of a difficulty by preserving the framework without much of the decoration—in fact, to use his own words, by 'pulling the old house to pieces and building another with the same materials.' The credit of the English version of 'La Jolie Parfumeuse' belongs almost entirely to the leading artists, who, with wonderful energy and conspicuous taste, have given to the music of Offenbach a fascination which could not reasonably be expected. The music of the opera is neither original or wonderful. Clever it frequently is; nearly always tricky. But the artists do wonders with it. The best praise should be awarded to Miss Kate Stanley, who is the Parfumeress and sings the music admirably She caught much of the spirit and crispness which modern French opera music requires, and, happening to be just now in excellent voice, she has obtained and really merited a success. An opera so well represented cannot fail to be attractive, and there is little need to add that, under Mr. Baum's management, it is mounted with accuracy and excellent taste. In a word, "La Jolie Parfumeuse' may be considered an opera not interesting in a humorous or musical sense, but worth seeing from the fact that the success of it is due to the unaided art of the various singers, actors and actresses concerned. Mlle. Tho. for whom Offenbach wrote the music of the pretty Parfumeuse, in appearance, manner, and buoyancy of spirit is not unlike the American favorite Mrs. James A. Oates, and the latter charming lady has the advantage of a more extended range of voice than the Parisian actress.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 28 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or under wear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

There was a splendid audience present last night when Fechter appeared as Don Cæsar de Bazan and gave the best representation of that devil-may-care bohemian, which could scarcely be surpassed. He proved himself a light comedian of a light order, and made every point in a style which brought down the house. E. Arnott made his first appearance before the San Francisco public on this occasion as Don Jose, and made a decidedly favorable impression being repeatedly applauded and called before the curtain at the close of the second act; he has a very handsome stage presence, a full rich voice and has evidently studied his profession in a good school. Miss Lizzie Price as Maritana, did some excellent acting in the scene with the king in the third act. Miss Emma Champness made a pleasing Lazarillo. Charles Edmonds played the role of the King of Spain effectively. A. D Billings was excellent as the marquis de Retundo, and Miss Mary Wells as the maricheres caused much fun by her wonderfully comical make up, and amusing acting. "Don Cæsar de Bazan" will be played again to-night.

Opera House.

The season of Spanish drama, comedy and opera will commence to-night. The performance will begin with the spectacular drama in three acts entitled "Ozmpana de la Almudaina," (The Bell of Almudaina) in which Donna Francisca Alfonso de Luque, will appear as Donna Constance, supported by Don Joaquin Fernandez, Don Rafael Alfonzo and others. After this the comedietta of "Casa de Campo" (The Country Cottage) will be played by Donna Soledad Alva de Luque, Don Rafael Alfonso and others. There will be a change of programme every evening, and everything in the repertoire of the company is said to be bright and sparkling.

California Theatre.

"La Vie Parisienne," produced last night for the first time in this city, drew an immense house and proved quite a success. Mlle. Aimee made a hit in a jodel song in which she mixed up German and English in the most amusing manner. Every verse was encored. M. Juteau as the Brazilian Frick the bootmaker and Prosper, kept the audience continually laughing all the time he was on the stage. "La Vie Parisienne" abounds in fun, taking airs, and pretty music. It will be played to-night for the last time.

Mercantile Library Hall.

Stephen Massett, who can read Dickens' "Death of Poor Joe" better than any man living, and who gives an excellent entertainment all by himself, will take a farewell of the public of San Francisco at the above-named hall to-morrow evening. He is sure to have a good house.

The Art Reception.

There was a large and brilliantly fashionable assemblage at the annual reception of the Art Association last night. The pictures are very fine and the music was very good.

Bella Union Theatre.

Col. Mandeville continues a great favorite at this house, and his character sketches are received with roars of laughter. Miss Alice Ross and Ed. Murray appear nightly in "Barney's Courtship," Miss Lena Proctor, Miss Jennie Johnson and others in "The Woman of the World," and a very bright and amusing performance is given.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Toers appears to-night in a song and dance, Rose Vincent in Irish music, Miss Katie Zoe in songs and others in various specialties.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

The Aimee Bouffe Opera.

Libby & Swett, the fashionable stationers, at 634 Market street, have just introduced a new shade of Rep Note Paper and Envelopes which they call "The Aimee Opera Bouffe," after Mlle. Aimee, the Queen of Comic Opera, who commences an engagement at the California Theatre next Monday. When Libby & Swett first determined to make fashionable stations, a specialty, they had no idea of the extent business they would do. They have on hand and in stock nearly three hundred different shades and designs of stationery, many of which they introduced themselves. Among the latest tints are the Julien, the Neilson, the Vergonstein, the Himmel-blau, and last the Aimee Bouffe. Messrs. L. & S., besides their stationery department, which is very large, do a large business in books, and are in receipt of all the latest publications. They also keep a full line of School Books, Maps, Charts, etc. In fact, one can find at their store everything in their line, from a steel or gold pen to write a check with, to a pocket-book to hold the check after written. Purchasers can have their articles delivered to all parts of the city free. 5 M

LIFE STUDIES.

BY H. G.

Theorists, skeptics, vainly-wise,
Study old musty tomes to gain
That knowledge which the truly wise
Are taught from Nature's wide domain.

They seek with finite reason's aid
To fathom wisdom infinite;
They delve, assay, compare and grade,
To prove their theories aright.

Geology, they tell us, stands
In proof that our creation
Came not from God's designing hands,
As taught by Revelation.

They find a fossil buried far
Beneath the surface in Earth's breast;
"'Tis found! We've now a truthful bar
To Revelation's doubtful test."

Such wisdom only folly shows,
Compared with plainest, simple truths!
The smallest plant that Nature grows
Teaches far more than all their proofs!

Go forth, oh, man! Waste not your hours
Leave musty tomes for God's sunlight!
Read Nature's book 'midst fields and flowers,
With pages numberless and bright.

Go forth upon the crowded street,
Where still another volume's found!
More varied and with truths replete,
With human aspirations bound.

Cast off the thrall which book lore binds
In chilling folds around your heart!
He profits most who seeks, and finds,
In human love a living part.

The glow of human sympathy
Reflects upon the soul those gleams
Which light a higher destiny,
Out-reaching far all finite schemes.

J. L. Toole.

Late in the Summer the attraction at Wallack's Theatre will be the renowned English comic actor, J. L. Toole, whose range of parts reaches from Caleb Plummer to Paul Pry, and runs through a long line of excellent farces. Mr. Toole was born in London, 12th of March, 1830, and in that city was educated. He began industrial life as clerk to a wine merchant; but, after playing with amateurs, deserted trade and became an actor. His first attempts were made in serious parts. Dickens was one of the first to recognize his talents. His first regular appearance was made at Ipswich. In July, 1852, he played at the London Haymarket, on the occasion of a benefit to Benjamin Webster. Charles Dillon then engaged him for the Queen's Theatre, Dublin, and afterward he went in a traveling company through the English provincial theatres. He was next engaged at the English London St. James' Theatre; a little later at the Lyceum, by Mr. Dillon, and finally, as the leading comedian, at the Adelphi, by Mr. Webster. He was speedily accepted as the successor to Wright. As a farce actor his powers and successes are brilliant and exceptional. Mr. Toole has lately been playing a farewell engagement at the Globe, London, where he brought out a play written for him by Alberry, and entitled "Wig and Gown." He will open at Wallack's, August 17th. Mr. D. B. Loveday, his manager, desires that all communications for the present should be addressed to him at the Globe Theatre, London.

A New Policeman.

"You say," said the attorney for the defendant, "that the accused sought to bribe you with $40?" "Yes sir," replied the officer; "and when I took him out to search his premises he tried to slip a $5 piece into my hand, and—" "And you did not take it?" said the attorney, interrupting him. "No, sir, I did not," calmly replied the officer. "How long have you been on the force?" inquired the attorney. "Since the 10th of last February," was the officer's answer. "Well, that accounts for it," remarked the attorney, "You may step aside."

All the Difference in the World.

Jones—"Why, confound it, Robinson, do you mean to say that the impudent scamp, Waterhammer, is always as meek as Moses?"

Robinson—"Yes, as meek as Mose is—in the play."

Matter-of-Fact.

Mendicant (with a strong breath, stopping a passer-by)—"Please, sir, won't you give a poor fellow the price of a loaf of bread?"

Passer-by—"H'm, let me see, it's ten cents a glass, I believe—well, here you have it, and welcome."

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant. 5-M

"Fate" at Wallack's.

The New York Spirit of the Times speaking of the production of Bartley Campbell's play at Wallack's says: He succeeds in interesting the average audience, who after all are really the class who patronize theatres the most liberally, and doubtless is satisfied with his work. But Mr. Campbell must do better work—work of a higher standard—if he aspires to reputation as a playwright. We feel quite confident that "Fate" is only the precursor to a better play from the pen of Mr. Campbell. One defect in the construction of "Fate" is the "carpenter's scene" in the third act. The action of a good modern play should be concentrated into a single scene to the act. This defect can be easily remedied. There is no reason why Paulding and Blaize should not meet in the parlor of Rose Cottage. Paulding is a servant on the premises and Blaize has been in and out of the parlor all the evening. Let Juno return to the parlor for a book, or on any pretext, and then give Paulding his scene with her. No effect is added by having it transpire in a bed-room, and it can be easily arranged to take place as we suggest. "Fate" was well acted. Miss LeClercq as Helen Faraday won the sympathies of every one. She is a consummate artist in everything she does. Belonging to the French school, she gives us many of those subtle touches of art by a look, a smile, or a gesture that tell more to the audience than a speech of half a dozen lengths. As Helen Faraday she appeared at her best, and won much applause. Miss Lillie, as Juno Temple, has really the strongest part in the piece, but evidently does not appreciate the "beautiful siren" and "beautiful fiend" business. She certainly looked more like an amiable young lady who wouldn't scheme to get a spoonful of marmalade. Miss Lillie lacks force and intensity to play Juno Temple well. Miss Margaret Chambers, in the chambermaid part of Sallie, did the best acting among the ladies, excepting, of course, Miss LeClercq. There was a freshness about her performance that was pleasing, and it exhibited nothing stagy. Miss Chambers is an excellent actress, and only wants the opportunity to make a great hit. She has received much applause each evening.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question where they had their clothes made, that they went to Baloun & Strada, No. 613 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment. 6-m

Tennyson Criticised.

The Conversation Class of Minneapolis have been discussing the merits of Tennyson as a poet. One member who rejoices in the title of "professor," informed his hearers that Mr. Tennyson "is a third-class poet," and that in his estimation Mr. Dickens was a far greater poet than the author of In Memoriam. "A poet," said a learned professor, "should have a great soul. Tennyson is a very small pattern of a man. He fell in love when he was fifteen years old, and has continued so ever since. Out of the eighty-four poems which he has written sixty-seven are on love." Another thought "Mr. Tennyson did his best in a calm and tranquil strain," and when somebody suggested a likeness between the laureate and Wordsworth, he retorted that "Tennyson is about as much like Wordsworth as a jeweller is like a blacksmith." A reverend gentleman admired Tennyson because he had little of the spread-eagle style about him, while a doctor thought him "superficial, like our society," and unable to do anything better than the Idyls. He added that The Princess reminded him of the rag, tag, and bob-tail thoughts of a man of talent in a delirium."

Poor Gayler!

The London journalists are evidently not dying to have Mr. Charles Gayler among them. A writer in Figaro says: "From what is called, I believe, an American 'exchange,' I learn that a gentleman named Gayler has set out for London, to write some plays for our theatres. This is enterprising of Gayler, and shows kind feeling on his part; but wouldn't it, after all, have been wiser and more patriotic of him to stay at home? Goodness knows, we shall be glad enough to welcome him and his works too, for we want new dramatic authors as badly as we can. But, then, America seems to be even worse off for original comedy than we are. The better class American papers are never tired of adjuring the coming native dramatist, who is always coming and never comes."

Much to be Desired.

At a meeting in London, to receive a report from the missionaries sent to discover the lost tribes of Israel, Lord H —— was asked to take the chair. "I take," he replied, "a great interest in your researches, gentlemen. The fact is, I have borrowed money from all the Jews now known, and if you can find a new set I shall feel very much obliged."

Fashion.

A religious exchange says: A fashion periodical states that a "first communion dress" should consist of a Swiss muslin skirt and dress, etc., and a "confirmation robe" should be a skirt, overskirt, blouse-waist, and mantelet, etc. Now what we want to know is, what ought we to wear at the opening of Maguire's new drinking saloon, next Tuesday?

Foster, the Medium.

The editor of the Boston Herald thus plainly expresses his opinion of Foster: The spirits may not have any part in the wonderful things done by Foster the "medium," but any man who sees his performances and thinks they are done by any sort of jugglery is an idiot of the most hopeless kind.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen!
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend. "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins,
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.

New Furnishing Goods.

Be Just and Fear Not.

The evils of a lax administration of the law have been brought very prominently forward within the last two days. We feel sure that if the perpetrators of such offences committed some months ago had been properly punished, or even punished at all, we should not have had to suffer the public disgrace of the recent repeated attempts at murder in our streets, and the shooting down of innocent people. The public street is the last place a man should lie in wait, disguised, to attempt an assassination, whatever the provocation may have been. The life of any person so taken would be the foulest murder, and the death of an innocent person under such circumstances would raise an excitement that would speedily endanger the neck of the perpetrator, and more than that, bring the reputation of our city for good order and good government, into disrepute throughout the civilized world. The public look forward to the coming Grand Jury to do its duty.

Plain Talk.

The New York Sun declines to furnish a copy to the Young Men's Christian Association, of Jersey City, free, as it has no free list. The editor makes a fierce onslaught on Young Men's Christian Associations generally, and says: "No curious public robbers and plunderers they welcome, encourage, and sustain, putting them in the chief places, and doing the utmost to insill into the minds of young men and women that a man may be a thief, a liar, and perjurer, and yet be worthy of all public and private honors. For this reason the Young Men's Christian Associations are falling into general disesteem among those who regard the substance of things as better than their hypocritical shadows: and thus their power of doing good service falls into waste and contempt."

This is rough on the Y. M. C. A.

A Brute.

Wife—"Ah, husband, do you see this beautiful carving? How delicately cut is the pure white stone!" Husband—"Yes, very pretty." Wife—"But, William, you have no taste for art; you don't enjoy these things as I do. Just notice this slender column of immaculate marble, with the touching question so beautifully carved, 'Do they miss me at home?'" Husband—"Yes, I see; and here is her name on the footstone—'C. A. B.' Yes, I guess they miss her, if that was her name." And there came a great silence.

"Gone."

A dying man in a town in Main desired that a well-known actioneer should conduct his funeral ceremonies. He expressed himself in the subjoined pathetic terms: "He's an' easy, fluid talker, and I allers liked to hear him. I've had dealing with him and I allers found he set out things just about as they was." Probably the association of the word gone with both death and the auction mart might have had likewise something to do with this singular request.

Abolish Them.

An exchange says:

The clergy cost the United States $12,000,000 annually; the criminals, $40 000 000; the lawyers, $70,000,000; rum, $200,000,000.

Some people would abolish the first as useless the last, as worse and they declare that then neither the second and third class would exist.

The Fourth.

We are going to have a big celebration on the Fourth. Grand Marshal Norcross, and all the heads of the departments are working energetically and effectually to that desirable point. James F. Bowman will deliver the Fourth of July poem, and George K. Brady, U. S. A., will act as Chief of Staff.

Magnetism.

Here is a story from the Arcadian regarding magnetism: There came a man to me last Winter to get me to interest myself in the dramatic talents of his wife. She was a "born genius" of course, so this gentleman thought. She had developed histrionic talent while in the performance of her household duties — had struck a vein in "Lady Macbeth" while sweeping the backstairs, and had given a new interpretation to "Rosalind" while mopping up the kitchen. "But," said this patron of the arts, "skill, intelligence, beauty, art, genius itself, is of no account without magnetism, and that's what she's got." He prevailed upon me to go and hear her recite a portion of "Macbeth." I found a simpering, red-haired lady, with a book in her hand, waiting for us. I was introduced. She read a few lines in a dawdling manner, that was not inspiriting. "You wait," whispered the husband; "she'll wake up by-and-by, and then we'll have the magnetism. Put on a little more steam, my dear, can't you?" This annoyed her. She objected to being interrupted. "Shee here," she observed, "if you interrupt me again, I will put you out of the room." See, she's waking up," continued the husband. "You wait!" "Waking up? I'm wide enough awake for you," retorted Lady Macbeth, "and ain't going to be bullied, either. Now, look here, you just get out of this, both of you, or I'll warm you;" and with that she caught up a broom-handle, and with flaming eyes pointed to the door. As my friend went out she hit him a lively rap across the back that made the dust fly. But having arrived at the front door expeditiously, he looked into my face and said: "How's that! Didn't I tell you she had it in her? By George, sir! there's magnetism for you." "Yes," I remarked, thoughtfully, "but it's somewhat erratic."

Charlotte Cushman's Selfishness.

Miss Cushman's selfishness is well-known by this time. Her emphatic refusal to play or even read for charitable purposes is one of the meanest traits in her character. A contemporary observes: "Miss Cushman, who delighted all sensible people a couple of months ago by her spirited refusal to submit to the practice of 'sturdy begging' in the name of charity, by which artistes in this country are so often victimized, has elected of her own free will and pleasure to give a reading in New York on Saturday, May 30, in behalf of the Sheltering Arms. This is an institution which gives a home to desolate children between the ages of two and twelve years." Miss Cushman did not "delight all sensible people." On the contrary, she has received a great deal of censure, and has only consented to read for this New York society to disarm further criticism. The facts of the case are these: She positively refused to read for charity when the Sheltering Arms first appealed to her. Miss Cushman never in her life "elected of her own free will and pleasure" to do anything liberal. She is the wealthiest actress on the American stage, and the meanest. It might be a pertinent inquiry to ask how many times Miss Cushman in the course of her professional career was the recipient of a benefit, and how much of her reputed wealth was accumulated in this way.

Camille; or, The Fate of a Coquette.

(La Dame Aux Camelias. By Alexander Dumas. Here at last we have the only literal, complete, and unabridged translation of "La Dame Aux Camelias," ever made, from which has been adapted for the stage, the drama of "Camille," and the opera of "La Traviata." "Camille" is no creation of fiction. Little more than a decade of of years have elapsed since this wonderful creature reigned like a princess in her world of friends. Combining the rarest charms of personal beauty, of mental brilliancy and cultivated manners, her entertainments were remarkable for their elegant sumptuousness and high literary character. Many American visitors in Paris were pleased to be admitted to her hospitable mansion, and even now recall with much pleasure the hours of refined conversation passed long since in her recherche saloons, where the wits and scholars of Paris were wont to assemble to do honor to the fair and intellectual hostess. It is published in a large duodecimo volume, and is sold at $1 75 in cloth, or $1 50 in paper cover, and will be sent free of postage to any one on receipt of the price by T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, Pa.

OUR BROADWAY.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of dealing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or passimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance; with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Opera House.

The Spanish dramatic season at this house opened most successfully last night. There was a splendid house and the performance was worthy of it. In "La Campana de la Almudaina" Donna Francisca Alfonso de Luque did some very good acting; she has a superb stage presence, expressive face, and a sympathetic voice, which she uses with good effect, she played the role of Donna Constanza in a manner which drew much applause, and Soledad Alva was equally successful as Donna Isabel. Julia Luque, Don Juan Fernandez, Don Rafael Alfonso and others engaged in the representation quite succeeded in gaining the favor of the audience. The laughable comedietta of "Casa de Campo" ended the evening's entertainment. An extra performance will be given to-night. The two act drama "Honor Militar", the comedietta "Cuarto con dos Camas," and the ballet "La Linda Jerezana," will constitute the entertainment.

California Theatre.

The present week is the last but one of the engagement of Mlle. Marie Aimee and her excellent troupe of French opera bouffe artists. To-night Monsieur E. Duplan, will take his benefit and "Genevieve de Brabant" will be presented for the first time this season.

Maguire's New Theatre.

There was another delighted audience last night when Charles Fechter appeared in his wonderful impersonation of Don Cæsar de Bazan. The manner in which he throws himself into this part makes the audience entirely forget the actor and realize the presence of the scapegrace Don Cæsar. Anything more different from his Ruy Blas cannot be imagined. In this character Mr. Fechter's slight accent, so far from detracting from, rather heightens the effect of his performance. Miss Lizzie Price as Maritana, Mr. Arnot as Don Jose, Miss Champneys as Lazarillo, Charles Edmonds as the King, Frank Rea as the Captain, and all engaged in the representation act their respective parts capitally. "Don Cæsar de Bazan" will be played again to-night, and Miss Sydney Cowell will make her first appearance as Lazarillo.

Mercantile Library Hall.

To-night Stephen Massett—"Jeems Pipes of Pipesville"—the clever story teller, elocutionist, vocalist and musical composer, will take his farewell of the public of San Francisco and start on another trip round the world. He will present an excellent programme, comprising "The Death of Poor Joe," "The Cripple's Story," "Betsy and I Are Out," an imitation of Madame Anna Bishop and a great variety of other performances, making up one of the best monologue entertainments ever presented on any stage. A large number of tickets have been sold, and there is sure to be a large and fashionable attendance.

Selia Union Theatre.

The success of Cal Mandeville at this house is unmistakable. He is accepted as a worthy successor of Charles Fiske and receives equal applause. "The Woman of the World," "Barney's Courtship," "The Rivals," and other performances make up a capital evening's entertainment.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

This evening Miss Lizzie Worrel will make her first appearance at this house. Johnny Tuers will appear in an act and in song and dance, Mortimore in sketches and others in various specialties.

Woodward's Gardens.

The great Lu-Lu sensation act and the Holtrum cannon act which has never been done in America, will be produced at Woodward's Gardens shortly. In the meantime there are numberless attractions. Next Sunday there will be a gas balloon ascension.

CERES.

BY JAMES MAURICE THOMPSON.

The wheat was flowing ankle deep
Across the field from side to side,
And dipping in the emerald waves
The swallows flew in circles wide.

The sun, a moment flaring red,
Shot level rays athwart the world;
Then quenched his fire behind the hills
With rosy vapors o'er him curled.

* * * * * * *

Was it a dream? We call things dreams
When we must needs do so, or own
Belief in old, exploded myths,
Whose very smoke has long since flown.

Was it a dream? Mine own eyes saw,
And Ceres came across the wheat
That, like bright water, dimpled round
The golden sandals of her feet.

She came and passed, as wild-birds pass,
By some rare impulse borne along,
Bright-eyed and sweet with golden hair,
And lips that overflowed with song.

"O tiller of the field," she said,
"Be hopeful, I have come again;
The sun shall shine for thee and thine,
For thee the mists shall gather rain:

"And never more, by man accursed,
Shall droop the corn-and faint the vine;
The bins shall groan with yellow grain,
The vats o'erbrim with generous wine,

"The rustic maids shall deck their hair
With coronets of wheat for me,
The whole wide world shall bloom afresh
For grander fruitage yet to be."

A clash and clang. "Go 'long, Red-buck!"
Late from their work my boys had come,
And drowned the goddess' song the while
They hauled a broken harrow home.

Chow-Chow.

Why is the letter D, in the alphabet, like a sailor? Because it follows the C.

"This is about the cheese," as the mouse remarked after taking a preliminary nibble at the box of a fine Cheshire.

A standing toast is frequently drunk sitting—particularly when those who drink it are.

The most tremendous "gerge" at the White Mountains is to be seen at the table d'hote; at least, so Boniface thinks.

It is far better to be thought a good deal of by little folks than but just a little of by great ones.

He best knows the value of a thing who knows the want of it. For example (circumstances being against you), some one (who, of course, knows the value of what he wants) points a pistol towards you and says, "Your money or your life!" and lo! how quickly you show your appreciation of the latter by quietly and quickly giving up the former!

We can't all be great men, no, nor the sons of great men, neither can we all marry fortunes, nor are beaver hats becoming to us all. And what then? Is it nothing (because so easy of general attainment) to be simply a good Bostonian? Verily, I declare and pronounce the contrary, for have we not been assured—explicitly assured, that "Good Bostonians go to Paris when they die?"

Too Strong a Dream.

A friend of ours, a bank-clerk, is dead in love with a pretty girl on Pine street. The other evening he called upon her with the air of a man who had hit upon a happy idea.

"Do you know Jennie," said he, "that in a dream I had last night you allowed me to kiss your pretty cheek."

"Well, your dream must come true, I suppose," and she presented her snowy face to his lips.

"And now, Willie, I too had a funny dream last night."

"What was it, dear."

"I dreamed that you had brought me a diamond bracelet."

"O thunder," exclaimed the frightened clerk, "you dream too strong for me."

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question where they had their clothes made, that they went to Baloun & Stonda, No. 613 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment, 6-M

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter-House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant 5-M

Some Mosquitos.

The Sacramento Bee tells the following: Some one reading in the papers about mosquitos and goats, those insects naturally became the subject of conversation in a miscellaneous party last night. "Talk about yer muskeeters!" broke in an old landlocked shellback, upon whose joints the barnacles and dirt of fifty years' accumulation showed in prominence; "talk about muskeeters an' rats! Sho'! You don't know nothin' about 'em! You'd ought to 've bin here in 'fifty—the Summer arter the big Winter of 'forty-nine! Then you'd seen muskeeters till ye couldn't rest! I was comin' to Sacramentur on the schooner Laura, an' one night down there in Old River a flock of muskeeters come aboard and lit on the mains'l boom, and d'ye believe me? they was so heavy that it broke down! and they bit the old skipper so bad that he nighly died! He hardly had 'nough blood left in him to swear by! Them was muskeeters, you bet! Tom Warren, an old shipmet 'o mine, went up the San Whoakeen, and in one trip ketched three barrel fulls of the creeters! He sold 'em to a soap biler in 'Frisco for slush! I tell ye boys them was the times for muskeeters! An old shipmet 'o mine turned rancher, an' anchored himself on a spot near the toolies. He rode his horse one night 'bout sundown to look for a nold cow. The muskeeters tackled him like a milyun of bloody pirates, an' killed his horse an' would 'a killed him if he hadn't tuk to the water an' hid! I tell ye that was a muskeeter year, you bet yer bottom dollar? Last Winter was a pretty tuff one tho'; 'bout as bad as 'forty-nine. Shouldn't wonder if you'd see some muskeeters!" and the old shellback rubbed his hands and face roughly, as if the reminiscences he had indulged in had restored to him the delicious pleasure of their stings.

A Busy Man.

That young christian and deservedly popular man, William W. Harding, of Philadelphia, runs two newspapers, the Register and Evening Telegram, a Bible and album factory, a sewing machine factory, a piano factory, a paper mill, and is also a candidate for political honors, besides having a large and abiding faith in a Baptist church, he may be considered well immersed in business.

Liberal.

The King of Fiji has ceded his kingdom to Great Britain on very liberal terms. This is about what he proposes: He is to remain king, to own all the land, to have his chiefs pensioned, and a salary paid to himself. He gives Great Britain the absolute sovereignty of his debts. Of course, Great Britain can but jump at such munificent liberality.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

THURSDAY.....JUNE 18, 1874

A Fearful Man.

Last night, at the corner of Montgomery and Merchant streets, a couple of men were having a heated discussion on the late shooting. One of the men put his hand behind him just after a severe remark by his opponent. "Oh, don't, don't, for heaven's sake! I'm a married man—a father. Would you leave my family without a protector?" shouted the opponent. "Why, you blasted fool, what's the matter with you?" asked the other. "I am unarmed," was the reply. "I am unfit to die. Oh, do not murder me." "Murder you, you granite-headed idiot! Who's going to murder you?" "Why, didn't you put your hand in your pistol pocket for the purpose of drawing a pistol and shooting me down?" "Pistol! Well I'll be blowed! You are a lunatic, anyhow. There's the pistol. Take a chaw." The man had merely put his hand behind him to take out his tobacco. The other fellow doesn't tell this story very often.

Dot German Band.

A trumpeter at the Cape of Good Hope got drunk, laid himself down on the ground to sleep off the effects, and when he awoke he found himself in the mouth of a powerful wild beast and being carried to the animal's lair for future provender. Not losing his presence of mind he fixed his trusty bugle to his mouth and gave a loud prolonged terrific blast. The beast dropped him and fled at furious speed to the shelter of the forest. We'll bet anything that the hero of this story was a near relative of the brass instrument blowers who parade this city and make our streets hideous with their vile attempts to play five different tunes at once.

What Will it Costs?

It is estimated by a city official, who is well posted in such matters that Local Option election in this city would cost the taxpayers about $60,000. That isn't much. But suppose the Local Option Law advocates should carry the day, and close up all the liquor stores and saloons in this city, how much more would it cost the community in the business panic which would ensue and the consequent loss of, and depreciation of rents for the next year and a half? That is worth figuring on.

The Latest Style of Walk.

An Eastern exchange says: A very singular style of walking prevails to a great extent among the ladies of New York who are pleased to call themselves fashionables. Arms akimbo, head tossed on one side, and eyes turned heavenward, they saunter down the street, an embodiment of impudence and sangfroid painful to see among ladies.

Going it Alone.

The Davenport Gazette says a young lady who arrived there Saturday from California, without a male protector, says it is a safe and delightful trip for any lady to make alone, and as for the male protection, it only adds additional trouble, and another feed out of the lunch-basket.

The Difference.

Salt Creek, Ind., is in ecstacies because it possesses a mule which has become a mother. Now, we have a donkey who has become a Police Judge, and we're not in the least bit of ecstacies.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen!
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here.
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a T."
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'd
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To these hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who gets there once will go again.

A Genial Paper.

The New York Dispatch is a genial and accommodating paper. In its answers to correspondents it spares no pains to explain any matter on which its opinion may be asked. The following proves this:

"Domonix" writes this query to the Dispatch: "Please state in Sunday issue (June 7) how to tell the character by the tooth." The party who answers "Notes and Queries" feeling incapable of tackling so recondite a question as this, has handed it over to us for elucidation. We undertake the task. The person who has even white teeth, is usually of a peculiar character. If he gets into a fight he doesn't spoil his teeth by gritting them together; but he inserts them into the nose or ear of his opponent and chews with them until he has extracted a piece of the flesh. The snaggle-toothed man is usually of a mild and peaceful character, and when his wife suggests that his tooth cuts her lip when she kisses him, he doesn't get angry, but he merely takes up the milk pitcher and breaks it over her head. A man of a different character would break her head with the pitcher. The man who has false teeth is generally of an equable disposition, and never gets angry when his landlady gives him hash four or five times a week, though he does grow pensive when any one asks him to take a piece of taffy candy. The weak point of his character is an inordinate passion for touts and codfish balls. The man without any teeth in front is a very bad character. You can't be the least familiar with him. He gets angry immediately. Call him "Old Gums" or "Toothy" or "Stumps," and he riles right up, and swears and shakes his fist, and offers to knock your teeth down your blamed throat. No lady should marry a man with his teeth out in front. She can never tell whether she's going to sip the honey of his lips or to partake of a chew of tobacco from his gums. We trust that this information will satisfy "Domonix," and that he will study it thoroughly, and understand it, and hereafter feel competent to judge immediately the character of people from the teeth they wear.

Killed by a Compositor.

An exchange relates the following pitiable story: The verdict of the coroner's jury was: "Killed by a compositor?" The circumstances were as follows: He loved madly, passionately. His fair one smiled, and all was going well. His suit was safe; but in an evil moment he conceived the dangerous idea of clinching it, so to speak, with a poem. He wrote the poem in a moment of heavenly inspiration, and sent it to the village weekly. It began thus:

"Maud Mary Jane Pilkerton Filer—
White skirted marvel of duty!
The wide world can never beguile her,
My gold-headed, bide-bilted beauty!"

It was a pretty, poetic flower as it stood. But the compositorial Goth laid his typographical hand upon it, and when it appeared, "skirted" was spelled with an "h," and "belted" had two "l's" in it and an "i." And so they laid her tearfully away beneath the daisies and rendered a verdict as above.

Epitomizing Things.

The newsboys call the DeYoungs the "Chronicle's shooting sticks," with emphasis on the sticks; Judge Louderback is known as "The Partner;" "Nap" is called "The Artful Dodger;" and "Mike" is "The Shaker;" the Post is called the "Chronicle's Ghost;" the Bulletin is "The Bulldog;" and FIGARO is "A FIG."

The Power of Love.

How he must have loved her! He lives in Missouri. He wouldn't swop her until the other man gave him his wife, a cow, a calf, and fifty steel traps. Such instances as this prove that still "Love reigns lord of all."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of E. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

"She was Young, She was Fair."

He was young, he was fair, and he parted his hair, like the average beau, in the middle; he was proud, he was bold, but the truth must be told, he played like a fiend on the fiddle. But aside from this vice he was everything nice, and his heart was so loving and tender, that he always turned pale when he trod on the tail of the cat lying down by the fender. He clerked in the store, and the way that he tore off calico, jeans, and brown sheeting, would have tickled a calf and made the brute laugh in the face of a quarterly meeting. He cut quite a dash with a darling moustache, which he learned to adore and to cherish for one girl had said, while she dropped her; proud head, that 'twould kill her to see the thing perish. On a Sunday he'd search the straight road to church, unheeding the voice of the scorner; and demurely he sat like a young tabby cat, with the saints in the far amen-corner. He sang like a bird, and his sweet voice was heard fairly tugging away at long metre; and we speak but the truth when we say that this youth could outsing a hungry musquiter.

She was young, she was fair, and she scrambled her hair like the average belle of the city; she was proud, but not bold, yet the truth must be told that the way she chewed wax was a pity. But aside from this vice she was everything nice, and the world much applauded her bustle; and the Fayetteville boys, being charmed by the noise, walked miles just to hear the thing rustle. She cut quite a swell, did this wax-chewing belle, and the men flocked in armies to meet her; but she gave them the shirk, for she loved the young clerk, who sang like a hungry musquiter. She hemmed and she sighed and she chawed, until her heart and jaws were both broken; then she walked by his store, while he stood at the door awaiting some amative token. She raised up her eyes with a pretty surprise, and tried to enact the proud scorner; but to tell the plain truth she just grinned at the youth who loved the devout amen-corner.

A Prejudiced Judge.

A jury in Truckee had been out four hours when the judge sent the sheriff to learn whether they were going to agree. The sheriff put an eye and then an ear to the keyhole of the room in which they were located for deliberation. Then he brought the judge, and together they opened the door. On the table, in the centre of the room, stood a big bottle of whisky, and around it the drunken twelve were hilariously marching in single file. The foreman carried on his back a bass drum, upon which the man behind him was pounding. Next came a juror playing a snare drum, then a shrill whistle imitating a fife, and the rest were singing. "We couldn't agree on a verdict nohow," said the tipsy foreman, in reply to the judge's reproof, "and we didn't think it was any hurt to have a social time, s'long's we was a congen'l party." And even after this explanation the judge wasn't satisfied, but talked of committing them all for contempt.

Too Late! Too Late!

A young lady of this city went to Omaha last week, to marry. She had never seen the man. She had made his acquaintance through a "personal," and became convinced, from his letters, that he was the one intended by Heaven for her Fate. Somehow she had misunderstood the arrangements of Heaven, for the very day she reached Omaha the young man was arrested for mail robbery, and the marriage had to be postponed until he got through wearing the stripes. The young lady has returned to this city. It must be a pleasant subject for this lady to contemplate the pleasure her unseen lover will give his fellow-convicts in reading to them her burning words of love while they are breaking stones. This must be a source of pure and unselfish joy to the bereaved maiden.

An Optical Delusion.

OUR BROADWAY.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or under wear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the fine t beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance, with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

PROCLAMATION

JULY 4, 1874.

HEADQUARTERS GRAND MARSHAL, Southwest corner Clay and Montgomery Sts. San Francisco, June 13th, 1874.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Having had conferred upon me the high honor of being chosen Grand Marshal of the celebration of the approaching Anniversary of American Independence, by the "Committees of Two Hundred," I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all Military and Civic Bodies and to all my fellow-citizens generally, to participate in the approaching celebration, and to unite in a fitting tribute to the glorious event that placed a rank to our Country among the Powers of the World, proclaiming the United Colonies of America as the abiding place of Freedom, and the home and refuge of the oppressed of all nations.

Let there be a celebration worthy of the Glorious Day, and let the children of all climes and countries unite in rendering honor to the Birthday of our Republic and give an unfailing assurance that the courage, sacrifices, and heroism of the Patriots of '76 are lovingly appreciated by their descendants, and by all men who now enjoy the blessings of a Free Government, and the benefits they receive through the devotion of our Revolutionary Fathers.

To command success, it is necessary that every citizen should take an active interest in the Celebration, and their co-operation and assistance is specially desired.

Special invitations will be extended to all organized Bodies, and a prompt and ready acceptance solicited.

Committees on Finance, composed of well known citizens, will wait upon the citizens generally, from whom a generous response is expected.

The appointment of Chiefs of Staff, Marshals of Divisions and Aids, will be announced as speedily as possible.

The Grand Marshal assures his fellow-citizens that nothing shall be left undone to make the forthcoming Celebration worthy of the Day and once more asks for your co-operation and assistance.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

California Theatre.

There was another crowded house last night when "Genevieve de Brabrant" was produced. Mlle. Aimee looked charming in the short dress of a Page, and sang the famous serenade in the first act with great effect. The beautiful trio between Mlles. Aimee, Stani and Roland, in the third act, was enthusiastically encored. The comic gens d'armes duet, between MM. Duplan and Lecuyer, raised a perfect storm of applause, and the whole opera was most successfully given. It will be repeated to night. To-morrow evening, Mlle. Stani will be the recipient of a benefit, and will appear as La Grande Duchesse, in Offenbach's favorite opera of that name, when a crowded house may be looked for. "Genevieve de Brabrant" will constitute the matinee performance on Saturday.

Maguire's New Theatre.

To-night will be the last of "Don Cæsar de Bazan," and those who have not seen Charles Fechter as the rollicking spendthrift should not miss this opportunity of doing so. To-morrow evening Bulwer's play of "The Lady of Lyons," will be produced with Mr. Fechter in his world-renowned character of Claude Melnotte, and Miss Lizzie Price as Pauline.

Opera House.

"El Honor Militar" was received with much applause last evening. The play was well mounted and its characters were admirably dressed and acted. The members of the Spanish Dramatic Company are proving themselves artistes of versatility, talent and experience. The farce, and ballet with which the performance concluded, were both excellently well performed, and received warm tokens of approbation from the audience. To-night "Los Travesuras de Juana," a comic drama in four acts will be performed. There will be no performance to-morrow night, but there will be a matinee on Saturday, and performances on Saturday and Sunday evenings, when new plays will be produced.

Mercantile Library Hall.

Stephen Massett had a full house at his farewell benefit last night. His character imitations, songs and recitations evinced both talent and great versatility, and were well received. Mr. Massett proceeds to Europe, and bears with him the good wishes of all who know him.

Bella Union Theatre.

The sensation play of "The Woman of the World," Col. Mandeville in his character sketches, Miss Alice Ross in serio-comic gems, Ed Marra, in his Budget of Fun, Miss Susie Robinson in song and dance, and a great variety of performances will be given this evening.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Tuers, Ned Buckley, Ida May, Rose Vincent, Lizzie Worrel and others in acts, songs and dances, give an entertaining performance at this little variety theatre.

Woodward's Gardens.

The great Lu-Lu sensation act and the Holtrum cannon act which has never been done in America, will be produced at Woodward's Gardens shortly. In the meantime there are numberless attractions. Next Sunday there will be a gas balloon ascension.

ONLY A GIRL.

BY LIZZ LOLLY.

I'm but a girl, and so they say
I ought to stand aside,
Nor should a craving mind obey
For fear men will deride;

Must let the shallow streams assuage
The longing thirst I feel,
Lest I should rise above the age,
And thus my fate should seal;

Must stand content while brothers drink
Rich draughts from rivers deep,
I may not venture near the brink,
But must a distance keep.

I must not strive to climb the hill
Of science, steep and high.
They think I have not strength of will;
Therefore I must not try.

If that is true, then why was I
Created with a mind
Which constantly doth grieve and sigh,
When narrowly confined?

I would not vote: I would not preach,
Nor occupy the bench.
More pleasing springs are within reach,
Which will my thirstings quench.

I think I will man's sneers defy,
And search deep mines of truth,
Sure Wisdom will no good deny
To earnest, zealous youth.

She will not say, "You're but a girl,
I'll nothing give to you."
But rather, "I have richest pearl
For all of merit true."

Our Boys in Blue.

An exchange says: "Some of the generals and other officers engaged in the Arkansas war, think they should have been retired on half pay, instead of being unceremoniously compelled to earn a living by vending peanuts and candy." Republics are thus ever ungrateful to their pure souled patriots and great men. Even Ernest Ludwig Kurtz has found republics ungrateful. After his great sacrifices for human liberty and the good of the people, he is compelled to offer his own musical compositions for sale to an unappreciative public. But time will bring its revenge. The coming generations will worship the man who now finds it difficult to get his "three square meals" a day. Even the myrmidons of tyranny who vilely jugged him on his recent trip to Albany will yet feel the pangs of a bitter remorse gnawing at their vitals.

Jubilant Christians.

One Sunday, not long since, one of our most stylish young ladies waltzed into church with that inimitable grace that is at once the peculiarity and the charm of the female denomination. As she took her seat, by a little behindhand movement she arranged her overskirt and then settled herself to meditate upon how she looked, and to observe what the other girls had on. The services concluded, she arose to go out. Alas for human hopes! That last touch on the overskirt was too much; she threw it too high, and there it rested on an old muff, which was serving as a bustle. So the wretched girl wiggled away, unconscious of the joy that filled the hearts of the other girls who saw it.

A Dreadful Punishment.

Vengeance is slow but sure. A man in Kansas fifteen years ago committed a murder. He escaped punishment. Recently he married the "champion female wrestler" of the State. He isn't sure but that it would have been preferable to have taken the "fatal drop" at once, to finding himself continually seized by the collar and elbow, or around the waist, or by the legs, and dropped heavily on his head, or his back, or his shoulders. He says he is dying by wrenches.

Summer Fashions.

The Syracuse Journal beautifully remarks: "The country presents a beautiful and charming spectacle just now. Arrayed in habiliments of freshest green and jeweled with bright blossoms of pink and white, blue, crimson, and lavender, the garish scene is ravishing to the eye and exhilarating to the mind." Yes—just so!

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question where they had their clothes made, that they went to Baloun & Stouda, No. 613 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment, 6 m

A Musical Friend.

The young lady who lives across the street from us has a greater attachment for her own howling and piano jangling than her neighbors have. None of them find it necessary to have their teeth filed. When she launches into that beautiful song, "Come and Kiss Me, Johnny," there is a universal wish on the part of those within hearing to go over and kiss her with an iron boot-jack or a hickory club. We do not want any harm to come to her, but if some fellow from the Yellowstone country were to make her acquaintance and marry her, and carry her out to that land of wonders, we don't think we'd enjoy our frugal meals any the less, or that our moments of contemplation would be saddened by the thought that at that moment her scalp was being taken by a brave, or that her fair body was giving light for the warriors and the papooses to dance by.

A Beast of a Bird.

Mr. Simpton owns a parrot that talks. Recently, he has noticed that it has cried out, very often, "Kiss me, Gussy, darling." Now Simpton's name is John, and his wife never calls him "darling." She generally addresses him as "Old Baldy." The other evening he returned home a little earlier than usual to find a young man in the parlor. When the young man was about to go, the parrot shouted out: "Gussy! won't you kiss your own Jennie before you go?" Gussy went out hastily, and Mr. and Mrs. S. had a pleasant interview. The result was that Mrs. S. threw Polly and her cage into the street, and Mr. S. has taken another house and engaged a housekeeper. Even the sorely wronged wife doesn't know what has become of Gussy.

A Sensitive Darkey.

The Tennessee lawyer who resorted to the insanity dodge in behalf of his negro client, and expatiated at some length upon the absolute idiocy of the poor fellow, met with some opposition from the darkey himself, who exclaimed: "You can hang me, or send me to the penitenchry, or say I'se a rascal, but, Mister, please don't say I'se a fool again."

A Boston Prodigal.

If this isn't a specimen of reckless extravagance, then the Louisville Courier-Journal doesn't know the meaning of those two words: "A Boston millionaire offered a man two dollars and a half, the other day, for stopping a runaway horse, and saving the life of his daughter. He can't hope to be a millionaire long if he is going to squander his money in that way."

Necessary.

Alluding to the increasing number of female posts, it is said that Pegasus now wears a side-saddle.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock,"

FRIDAY.....JUNE 19, 1874

A $25,000 Purse.

The Pacific Jockey Club have arranged the preliminaries of their great four mile and repeat race. It will come off on their new track on the Cliff House road on November 7th. The purse will be $25,000, divided as follows: $13 000 for the first horse, $5,000 for the second, $4 000 for the third, and $3 000 for the fourth, free to all the world. This is the largest purse ever offered in the United States. The race will be advertised in the Eastern cities, and in London and Paris, and will probably bring an influx of thirty thousand persons in the city to see it. Each horse entered in the Atlantic States will be allowed $1,000 expenses for coming here, and, if entries are made of European horses, $1,500 will be allowed. There will probably be six entries from this coast and at least as many more from the East. The regulation of weights will be three-year olds, 90 pounds; four-year olds, 104; five-year olds, 110; and six years and upwards, 114 pounds. Three pounds are allowed for geldings and mares.

Miss Minnie Walton and Miss Neilson Eclipsed.

This is what the Sacramento Bee says: Every one will be delighted to know that the theatre will be opened on Friday and Saturday evening, and on Saturday afternoon for a grand matinee. The most beautiful actress on the American stage, Miss Imogen Holbrook, will be introduced and supported by the dashing comedian, Mr. Harry Eyting, whose many accomplishments and great ability are well known to all.

Not the Man.

Mrs. H. C. Bennett writes from London to the deny that H. C. Bennett, the absconded Pension Agent, is her husband as well as husband of another lady in this city. She says: "My husband is a tall, slight built person, with light hair." The Bennett we have happily lost, is black as to hair, black as to complexion, black as to soul, squat as to figure and with a peculiarly villainous expression of countenance.

Declines.

We suggested to the proprietor of "Quip," a comic paper published at St. John's, New Brunswick, a removal to San Jose. In his last issue he says:

We don't like St. Jose, or would have staid there. A respectable paper like Quip would soon become sickly in your climate.

All right. Stay in St. John's New Brunswick, and freeze to death.

A Kind-hearted Newspaper.

The Call gives that portion of the public which is proud of excitement the following comforting assurance:

The bail given by DeYoung and Napthaly is not, as many persons suppose, to keep the peace towards each other, but simply to answer the charges of assault with intent to commit murder which have been preferred against them.

This is very kind of the Call.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a T."
So sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'd
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners,"
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

VAN MADDEN'S SALAD DRESSING—best and cheapest in town—at Oyster House 672 Howard

Fechter's Claude Melnotte.

If any playgoer be disposed to doubt the effect of an intelligent new eye and new mind brought to bear even on the stateliest theatrical material, he should test that effect by seeing "The Lady of Lyons" at the Lyceum.

It was one of the main attractions of Mr. Fechter's Hamlet that he presented the part from the point of view of an intelligent and accomplished French actor, whose mannerisms even were not familiar mannerisms, and who looked at the Danish Prince with his own unassisted eyes, and not through the spectacles of tradition. The result in the case of Hamlet was a general impression of life and nature in Mr. Fechter's embodiment of the part, in which it was not easy to discriminate what was due to the actor's power and what to his freshness of conception.

The same effect, if in a less striking degree, owing to the comparatively superficial nature of the part, is produced by Mr. Fechter's impersonation of Claude Melnotte. The part never struck us before as one admitting of so much variety and vivacity, as giving scope for so much grace passion, play of expression, and anima ion of gesture. Even Mr. Macready's Claude, if we may trust our recollection of it, was a less youthful and a more staid, serious, and —using the phrase without suggestions of offence—"stilted" personage. Mr. Fechter has, we should think, an advantage in his French nationality for a part so French in conception. He has other advantages, in the expressiveness of his face, in the freedom and vivacity of his gesticulation, and in a certain fervour and chivalrousness of manner, particularly when he is acting with women, which stand him in excellent stead, particularly in a part where it requires all the counterpoise of personal graces, and all the excuse of fervid passion, first of outraged, then of repentant, love to excuse an act of scoundrelism, such as few dramatists have ever ventured to lay upon a hero who was meant to carry with him the sympathies of the audience.

His animation, grace, and refinement of bearing, the quick play of expression, and unflagging vivacity of gesture, the feeling that kindled his face and breathed in his voice, now of hopeful love and pride, now of mortified affection and eagerness for revenge, anon of compunction struggling with passion, and again of repentance and remorseful tenderness, afforded many lessons to the Melnottes we have lately seen of the right colour that should be given to the character.

The changes made in the dressing of the part, and in the action of the play, all helped its freshness and effectiveness Claude no longer appeared in the blouse and trousers in which Mr. Macready originally dressed the part, but which were quite out of keeping with the period of the play. Thus when Claude assumes the Prince, he wears a black court suit, richly embroidered, silk stockings, powdered hair and chapeau bras, instead of the traditional uniform, hessians and cocked hat; and the business of the scene, in which he confounds Beauscant and Glavis by his coolness, disarms General Damas by his skill of fence, and paints in words for Pauline his palace by the Lake of Como, was as much altered, and as much for the better, as his costume.—London Times.

A Real Sensation.

Towards the close of the performance of "The Three Musketeers," at the Lecture Hall, Greenwich, England, recently, a sad accident happened to Miss Brough, a young lady of much promise and well-known in amateur circles, through the blundering carelessness of one of the minor characters, who, in firing a gun, aimed point-blank at her, the contents being lodged in her left shoulder. To make the matter worse, the musket had been twice loaded. The poor young lady was, after screaming violently—this unrehearsed tragedy drawing forth the plaudits of a crowded house—carried senseless off the stage. A doctor was shortly in attendance, who strapped up the wound, and the unlucky victim of a careless supernumerary was forthwith conveyed to her residence in town, suffering excruciating pain. The manager has been unremitting in his endeavors to atone for the stupid conduct of his employee, and through the skillful care of her medical attendant, it is hoped that the powder and other materials will be extracted, and that the sufferer will not be permanently disfigured.

Jubilant Christians.

One Sunday, not long since, one of our most stylish young ladies waltzed into church with that inimitable grace that is a once the peculiarity and the charm of the female denomination. As she took her seat, by a little behindhand movement she arranged her overskirt and then settled herself to meditate upon how she looked, and to observe what the other girls had on. The services concluded, she arose to go out. Alas for human hopes! That last touch on the overskirt was too much; she threw it too high, and there it rested on an old muff, which was serving as a bustle. So the wretched girl wiggled away, unconscious of the joy that filled the hearts of the other girls who saw it.

A Dreadful Punishment.

Vengeance is slow but sure. A man in Kansas fifteen years ago committed a murder. He escaped punishment. Recently he married the "champion female wrestler" of the State. He isn't sure but that it would have been preferable to have taken the "fatal drop" at once, to finding himself continually seized by the collar and elbow, or around the waist, or by the legs, and dropped heavily on his head, or his back, or his shoulders. He says he is dying by wrenches.

Summer Fashions.

The Syracuse Journal beautifully remarks: "The country presents a beautiful and charming spectacle just now. Arrayed in habiliments of freshest green and jeweled with bright blossoms of pink and white, blue, crimson, and lavender, the garish scene is ravishing to the eye and exhilarating to the mind." Yes—just so!

The Latest Style of Walk.

An Eastern exchange says: A very singular style of walking prevails to a great extent among the ladies of New York who are pleased to call themselves fashionables Arms akimbo, head tossed on one side, and eyes turned heavenward, they saunter down the street, an embodiment of impudence and sang froid painful to see among ladies.

Necessary.

Alluding to the increasing number of female poets, it is said that Pegasus now wears a side-saddle.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Dried Up.

Where you drunk in Court street, Thomas Bass?" asked Justice Walsh in his Brooklyn court-room. Thomas Bass coughed, run his fingers through his hair, and placing one hand on his breast and another on his hip, struck a dramatic posture and said: "Sir, h'it grieves me to say that h'i was h'in that condition which levels h'us h'all, and which sends h'us on the 'ighway to—" "The penitentiary for ten days," interrupted the Justice.

Emerson's Frills.

A lady from the South has enjoyed an interview with Emerson, and writes to the Memphis Avalanche that she was delighted with "the fluting and frilling of his involuted words." The Detroit Post is surprised to hear this, as only last year the philosopher had his words "cut biasing, but with plain borders, tastefully folded back, and secured with a blue ribbon.

Going it Alone.

The Davenport Gazette says a young lady who arrived there Saturday from California, without a male protector, says it is a safe and delightful trip for any lady to make alone, and as for the male protection, it only adds additional trouble, and another feed out of the lunch-basket.

PROCLAMATION

JULY 4, 1874.

HEADQUARTERS GRAND MARSHAL, Southwest corner Clay and Montgomery Sts. San Francisco, June 12th, 1874.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Having had conferred upon me the high honor of being chosen Grand Marshal of the celebration of the approaching Anniversary of American Independence, by the "Committee of Two Hundred." I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all Military and Civic Bodies and to all my fellow-citizens generally, to participate in the approaching celebration, and to unite in a fitting tribute to the glorious event that gave rank to our Country among the Powers of the World, proclaiming the United Colonies of America as the abiding place of Freedom, and the home and refuge of the oppressed of all nations.

Let there be a celebration worthy of the Glorious Day, and let the children of all climes and countries unite in rendering honor to the Birthday of our Republic and give an unfailing assurance that the courage, sacrifices, and heroism of the Patriots of '76 are lovingly appreciated by their descendants, and by all men who now enjoy the blessings of a Free Government, and the boon they receive through the devotion of our Revolutionary Fathers.

To command success, it is necessary that every citizen should take an active interest in the Celebration, and their co-operation and assistance is specially desired.

Special invitations will be extended to all organized Bodies, and a prompt and ready acceptance solicited.

Committees on Finance, composed of well-known citizens, will wait upon the citizens generally, from whom a generous response is expected.

The appointment of Chiefs of Staff, Marshals of Divisions and Aids, will be announced as speedily as possible.

The Grand Marshal assures his fellow-citizens that nothing shall be left undone to make the forthcoming Celebration worthy of the Day, and once more asks for your co-operation and assistance.

DANIEL NORGROSS, Grand Marshal.

FOURTH OF JULY.

HEADQUARTERS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, 605 Clay street, near Montgomery.

THE COMMITTEE ON INVITATIONS are now sending out invitations to the numerous Orders, Societies, Organizations, etc., in this CITY AND CITY OF OAKLAND, to join in the Procession on the approaching Anniversary of our National Independence. Fearing, however, that some may be inadvertently overlooked and that perhaps there may be thereby engendered a feeling that an act of injustice had been committed the Committee desires thus publicly to extend a cordial and heartfelt invitation to all organized bodies in the city, and in the CITY OF OAKLAND, to take part in the celebration of the Nation's Birthday. A splendid procession is already assured. Let all join it in the spirit in which the invitation is tendered, and it will be a triumph surpassing all former celebrations of the day in this city. An early response is especially requested, so that the Grand Marshal may be able to assign the bodies accepting, their appropriate positions in the line.

It is proposed to organize a company of "ANTIQUE AND HORRIBLES," to take part in the Procession. All desiring to join will please communicate with the Chairman of the Invitation Committee.

By order of the Committee on Invitations.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

"Don Cæsar de Bazan" was presented for the last time last night. Miss Sydney Cowell, who, on this occasion and on the preceding night assumed the role of Lazarillo, proved herself a very pleasing actress, and is certainly destined to become a favorite. To night "The Lady of Lyons" will be produced, with Charles Foehter in his great impersonation of Claude Melnotte, and Miss Lizzie Price as Pauline. What the London Times said of this performance some years ago, is published in another column.

Opera House.

The comic drama in four act entitled "Los Travesuras de Juana" was excellently performed last night. Senora Francisca de Luque gave a proof of her versatility, by the clever manner in which she acted the role of the mischievous Juana, Soledad Alva was bright and piquant as Elvira, Senor Manuel Luque was effective as Ernando de Alarcon, and Senor Jesus de Fernandez and others engaged in the representation of the play acted their respective roles in a manner which drew loud applause. There will be no performance to-night. At the matinee to-morrow "Honor Militar" and "La Casa de Campa" will be played, and in the evening the three act drama of "Sullivan" and the ballet of "La Lind Jerezana" will constitute the entertainment.

California Theatre.

Another large audience enjoyed the performance of "Genevieve de Brabant" at this house last night. To-night that very popular artiste, Mlle. Rosina Stani, who, by her beautiful singing, taste in dress and piquante acting has made herself a great favorite with the public, will be the recipient of a well-earned benefit. "La Grande Duchesse" will be performed, with the beneficiary in the title role, and the excellent cast published on our first page. At the matinee to-morrow, "Genevieve de Brabant" will be performed for the last time, and in the evening "La Belle Helene" will be produced for the first time this season.

Bella Union Theatre.

Cal. Mandeville is a great favorite, both in first part and in his character sketches. A new bill will be presented this evening. It comprises the sketch by W. Welch entitled "Old and Young," performed by Miss Alice Ross and Ed Murray, song and dance by Miss Susie Robinson, ballads by Miss Louise Somers, the burlesque of "Mazappa" with Miss Lena Proctor in the title role, and Miss Maggie Maguire as Olimpia, and a variety of other performances.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Tuers in two screaming acts and in song and dance, Miss Lizzie Worrel, Miss Rose Vincent and Miss Maggie Brewer in dances, Ned Buckley in first part and acts, Miss Ida May in ballads, and others in various specialties, will give a capital entertainment to-night.

Woodward's Gardens.

The great Lu-Lu sensation act and the Holtrum cannon act which has never been done in America, will be produced at Woodward's Gardens shortly. In the meantime there are numberless attractions. Next Sunday there will be a gas balloon ascension.

BY THE RIVER.

Oh! to be idle one long day,
When Spring is almost over,
And these great giants gaunt and gray
Are green; when round-head clover

And purple thyme-tufts fill the air,
And fields are gay with daisies;
When, blushing, dies the hawthorn fair
Just as your poet praises;

When overhead the lark's fair song,
And thrushes in the hedge-rows,
And hidden linnets piping long
Where rank the river sedge grows.

Oh! to be idle one Spring day,
To muse in wood or meadow;
Glide down this river 'twixt the play
Of sun and trembling shadow!

I'd see all wonders 'neath the stream,
The pebbles and vexed grasses;
I'd lean across the boat and dream
As each scene slowly passes.

The tide should ripple welcomes low,
And dance the kingcups bravely;
And flags in purple stately bow,
And nod the tall reeds gravely.

I'd rest an hour the willows by,
And say a prayer in pity
For all who stifle, groan and die
This day in crowded city.

Puns.

Puns, well stuck to, are sometimes as good as wit. Lady Barker, whose name is not unknown in literature, has been appointed manager of the National School Cookery in London, whereupon the Pall Mall Gazette remarks: "Her thoughts in the kitchen range perpetually, we should imagine, over a wide, various, and fruitful field. While her pupils are busily engaged around her, the midday dripping reminds her of the midnight oil, and she pauses to recall the verses of Eliza Cook or the labors of Mrs. Fry, or the poems of Mr. Browning, perchance. Then, too, the very grate will suggest Hobbes, the saucepan Handel, the salamander Burns, the scollops Shelly, the frying-pan the inductive philosophy of Bacon, and the stewpan the physical experiments of Boyle. What more natural than to dwell on the sad fate of Sir Cloudesley Shovel or the successful expedition of Sir Samuel Baker; the delightful humor of Charles Lamb or the pacific policy of Mr. Pease; the "Euclid" of Potts, the worship of Pan, or Mr. Rupert Kettle's attempts at arbitration; M. Grevy's Presidency of the French Assembly or the present embroilment of the Duc de Broglie; Mr. Fowle's Broad Church views or Mr. Partridge's democratic theories; Mr. Spring Rice's speeches in the House of Commons or Sir Frederick Currie's operations in India?"

A Novelty.

The Battle Mountain Measure for Measure describes it as follows: On the street, occasionally, may be seen a cream-faced squaw, with neck of yellowbaster and a decided tinge of red on her hair, which she wears au naturale. On her back (this year) she carries a baby which also is about the color of the groundwork of a postal card, and a similar shade lurks with other things in his hair. We suspect they belong to the 'Improved Order of Red Men.'

Suicides.

In Paris, recently there were no less than thirteen suicides in one day, five of them women, from unfortunate attachments. When women love without return, they take to laudanum; when men do, they take to liquor. Death cures one, drunkenness the other—which is the difference between the sexes.

Inflation.

The idea of making money plentier by issuing paper token which are not money; is well illustrated by the old problem: "How many legs has a cow, calling the tail one?" Answer, Five." "No, she hasn't: calling the tail a leg doesn't make it on."

Behind the Scenes.

Edmund Yates' new novel, "A Dangerous Game," introduces the professional theatrical life of New York and London.

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question where they had their clothes made, that they went to Batoun & Stouds, No. 618 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment, 6 m

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter House Steaks and Oysters in eve y style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant 5-M

Spring Style Hats.

Light, beautifully finished and graceful in shape, the new Spring style of Hats manufactured at "The" Hat Store, 647 Washington street (second hat store below Kearny street), is just the thing to make a man look a hundred per cent. better. Sufficient Reasons.

A sculptor of tombstones lately received a call from a countryman who wanted a stone to place over the grave of his mother. After looking around for some time, and making sundry remarks about the taste of his deceased mother, he finally pitched upon one which the stonecutter had prepared to another person. "I like this one," said he. "But," said the manufacturer, "that belongs to another man, and has Mrs. Perry's name cut on it; it wouldn't do for your mother. "Oh! yes, it would," said the countryman. "She couldn't read. And, besides," he continued, as he observed the wonderment of the stonecutter, "Perry was always a favorite name of hers, anyhow!"

Habeas Corpus Suspended.

They have a judge in Florida who was arrested and put into the calaboose for drunkenness. While in confinement he endeavored to issue a writ of habeas corpus requiring the sheriff of Manatee county to seize his body and bring it before himself, in order that he might inquire into the legality of the confinement. The scheme was not satisfactory, and the judge served out his time in the calaboose.

Distressing.

The Pittsburg Commercial man must have it bad. Hear it: "The seal of Spring is not set upon the sky, the earth and the trees. Everything pipes—birds, men and worms. Each breath is a roundelay, each breeze a caress. The world is a poem."

A Hint.

The Boys and Girls Aid Society, will do well to read the admirable Kindergarten papers, published by Miss Peabody. Why should not San Francisco have a Kindergarten?

OUR BROADWAY.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently erected the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England clothe, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimers to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance, with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicium of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

Fechter's Hamlet.

On Monday, Fechter will appear at Maguire's New Theatre in his wonderfully original impersonation of Hamlet. Of this performance the London Times said:

PRINCESS' THEATRE.—Mr. Fechter's performance of Hamlet should unquestionably be seen by every one who takes interest in the higher departments of histrionic art. A Parisian artist, unrivalled in his own line, which is not that of French classical tragedy, essays the most arduous of Shaksperian characters. With the conventions of our stage he has had nothing to do. He goes straight from the book to the boards, and though possibly he has received a few hints as to the general conduct of the business, there is every reason to believe that all his details are entirely the result of his own thought.

His very entrance makes a completely novel impression. He indicates Hamlet's Scandinavian nationality by flaxen hair, and carries to perfection an assumption of that dreamy look which is scarcely to be associated with a dark complexion. There is no doubt that to him the meditative element in Hamlet's character has seemed most essential. The manner in which he throws out his answers, like one unwillingly awakened from a continued abstraction, into which he presently relapses, is admirably truthful, and the pretence of madness little changes this manner, beyond the addition of a slight tone of irony.

Through the predominance given to the meditative element, the soliloquies acquire a very remarkable character. He has elaborated these at a vast expense of thought, and his delivery is marked by the subtlest variations. The birth of his thought is more visible than the influence of his emotions.

The gentlemanlike side of Hamlet stands also high in the consideration of Mr. Fechter. Through out the whole tragedy he is the very pattern of courtesy, and this quality is especially shown in his scenes with the players. He is a thoroughly polite prince, and even when he is vexed by the interruptions of Polonius, there is infinite courtesy in the gestures with which he motions him to silence. The pains which Mr. Fechter has taken to master the diction of Shakespeare and fully to understand every line set down for him, are laudable in the highest degree, and may be regarded as monuments of creditable toil.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
Ther'd clams and crabs and terrapins'd
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

OUR BROADWAY.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

HEADQUARTERS GRAND MARSHAL,
Southwest corner Clay and Montgomery Sts.
San Francisco, June 12th, 18[illegible]

I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all Military and Civic and to all my fellow-citizens generally, to participate in the approaching celebration, and to unite in a fitting tribute to the glorious event that has given a rank to our Country among the Powers of the World, proclaiming the United Colonies of America as the abiding place of Freedom, and a safe and refuge of the oppressed of all nations

Let there be a celebration worthy of the glorious Day, and let the children of all the countries unite in rendering honor to the natal day of our Republic and give an unfailing assurance that the courage, sacrifices, and heroism of the Patriots of '76 are lovingly appreciated by their descendants, and by all men who now enjoy the blessings of a Free Government, and the truths they receive through the devotion of our revolutionary Fathers.

To command success, it is necessary that the citizen should take an active interest in the celebration, and their co-operation and assistance is especially desired.

Special invitations will be extended to all organized Bodies, and a prompt and ready acceptance solicited.

Committees on Finance, composed of well known citizens, will wait upon the citizens generally, from whom a generous response is expected.

FOURTH OF JULY!

HEADQUARTERS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
605 Clay street, near Montgomery.

THE COMMITTEE ON INVITATIONS are now sending out invitations to the various Orders, Societies, Organizations, etc., in the CITY AND CITY OF OAKLAND, to join in the procession on the approaching Anniversary of our National Independence. Fearing, however, that some may be inadvertently overlooked and perhaps there may be thereby engendered a feeling that an act of injustice had been committed, the Committee desires thus publicly to extend a cordial and heartfelt invitation to all organized bodies in the city, and in the CITY OF OAKLAND, to take part in the celebration of our nation's Birthday. A splendid procession is assured. Let all join it in the spirit in which the invitation is tendered, and it will be a triumph surpassing all former celebrations of the day in this city. An early response is especially requested, so that the Grand Marshal may be able to assign the bodies accepting, their appropriate positions in the line.

It is proposed to organize a company of "GROTESQUE AND HORRIBLES," to take part in the Procession. All desiring to join will please communicate with the Chairman of the Invitation Committee.

By order of the Committee on Invitations.

From a Known Business House of this City.

TO THE PEOPLE OF SAN FRANCISCO AND State of California—As reform is now the cry all over the State, and every man and woman trying to become economical, I wish to call your attention to a particular subject, and that is, when you wish to invest a dollar to do so, and go where you will get your money's worth; when you make your purchase, go to the house that manufactures or imports the article direct, and you are sure to save money. To find such a house go to S. POPPER'S new shirt manufactory and gents' furnishing goods establishment, No. 618 Kearny street, between Sutter and Bush, and 337 Kearny street, between Bush and Pine, the oldest and leading shirt manufacturing establishment in the city. He don't offer to sell below cost, or retail at manufactory prices—that's too thin; but he can sell a better made and more perfect-fitting shirt, superior in quality, at a more reasonable price than any other house in the city, the same in underwear, and gents' furnishing goods, etc. Shirts made to order, and satisfaction warranted. Gentlemen coming to the city please remember this, and call before purchasing elsewhere.

OPERA HOUSE.—At the matinee to-day, the Spanish company will perform "Honor Militar" and "La Casa de Campo." The performance this evening will consist of the two act drama of "La Corsa de un Bandido," with the ballet of "La Madrileña," the afterpiece "Los Cucunuchos" and ballet La Mascota." To-morrow evening the 3 act drama, entitled "Sullivan," will constitute the entertainment. The performances given by this company have proved very popular. Its members act well and dress well, and their pieces are well selected.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—The general favorite Mlle. Stani had a very fair house on the occasion of her benefit last night, and acted and sang the role of La Grande Duchesse de Gerolstein, in Offenbach's opera of that name, in a style which delighted every one present. Mons. Emile Juteau as Fritz, Mlle. Roland as Wanda, Mons. Deschamps as Prince Paul, Mons. Duchesne as General Bum and all the others performed their respective parts admirably. At the matinee to-day "Gerolstein de Biarritz" will be presented for the last time, to-night the last appearance of "La Belle Helie" will be given, and to-morrow night the last opportunity of seeing "La Vie Parisienne" will be given.

MAGUIRE'S NEW THEATRE.—There was a splendid house last night when Charles Fechter appeared in his great impersonation of Claude Melnotte in "The Lady of Lyons." It was a new revelation to all who witnessed it, and was accepted as a perfectly original rendering of a hackneyed character. At the end of each act, Fechter was called before the curtain and Miss Lizzie Price shared the honors of the evening. Edward Arnott gave a careful and consistent impersonation of Colonel Damas, and George Giddens who made his first appearance here on this occasion, made a favorable impression in the unsatisfactory part of Glavis. Charles Edmonds as Beauseant, Miss Mary Wells as the Widow Melnotte J. Hurst as the Landlord and others acted their respective roles well. "The Lady of Lyons" will be played at the matinee to-day, this evening and to-morrow evening. On Monday "Hamlet," referred to in another column, will be produced.

ART ASSOCIATION. — The best and most varied collection of pictures which has been exhibited at the gallery, 313 Pine street, is now open to the public day and evening. It includes Keith's "California Alps" (a picture covering a canvas 10 by 6 feet) Erskine's magnificent nude study "Andromeda," Miss Lea's "Lady of Schalott," examples of Bierstadt, Trojon and 120 works by the best local artists, etc. The fine series of casts presented by the French Government, and the entire Pioche collection are included, and the price of admission is almost nominal.

BELLA UNION THEATRE.—"Mazeppa" is more the rage at this house. Miss Lena Procter appears as Mazeppa, Miss Maggie Maguire as Olinska, Miss Jennie Johnson as Mary Ann Jane, and John Woodard as Cast Iron. Col Mandeville appears in his character songs and also in the sketch entitled "The O'd Clock," and a grand olio of songs and dances is presented.

BUCKLEY'S NEW VARIETY THEATRE.—Johnny Tuers, Ned Buckley, Miss Ida May, Miss Rose Vincent, Miss Lizzie Worrell, Frank Mortimore, and a host of other favorites will appear tonight in a great bill which is published in full on our first page.

GOLDEN GATE PARK.—Those who drive out to the new park should visit The Villa which has just been opened. Here they will find four public parlors and ten private dining rooms. Guido Mangenberg, the proprietor, gets up epicurean breakfasts, dinners and suppers at short notice. Omnibuses will leave on SUNDAYS, at 9 o'clock A. M., from the corner of Market and Kearny streets, and every hour afterward, until 4 o'clock, from the corner of McAllister and Fillmore streets connecting with the Market Street and Hayes Valley cars, and from the corner of Turk and Fillmore streets by the way of City Front and Lone Mountain cars.

GRAND SUNDAY EXCURSION.—The steamer Antelope leaves San Francisco every Saturday at 2:30 P. M. and on Sunday at 8 A. M. from Front Street Wharf, connecting with the cars of the S. F. & N. P. Railroad at Donahue for Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg and Cloverdale. Excursion tickets are issued at reduced rates, and are good from Saturday to Monday. Those who wish to enjoy a little country air at the end of the week could not choose a finer trip than this excursion offers.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain Railroad.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS—LULU SENSATION. The great Lu-Lu sensation act and the Hotrum cannon act which has never been done in America, will be produced at Woodward's Gardens shortly. In the meantime there are numberless attractions. Next Sunday there will be a gas balloon ascension.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

NOTES.—An amateur critic in the Call the other day made a hit. He charged Mr. A. Wetterman, one of our best musicians, who led the orchestra at the recent Scandinavian entertainment with rendering his score incorrectly, and being "oblivious as to harmony." The charge was so absurdly unjust that the Call corrected it the next day. Mr. Wetterman has been the leader of Woodward's Gardens band for the last four years and is a leading member of the musical profession in this city, and naturally does not like to be charged with playing out of tune.

Charles Morrell, of Morrell's S. F. Minstrels, is in town and proposes to make another season in the interior after the coming Fourth. The season just over passed out well from Visalia to Colusa.

Geo. D. Chaplin was in town during the early part of the week. He has gone to play an engagement in Salt Lake City.

"L'Oie l Crave" a very amusing opera will be produced for the first time in San Francisco, at the California Theatre, on Monday evening.

The office of J. H. McCabe, the theatrical agent, of the Pacific Coast was broken into on Thursday night, and some money and jewelry stolen.

The difficulty between John Wilson and the Dockrills has been arranged and these artists have rejoined the troupe.

Lot 2 has purchased the property on the corner of Broadway and Octavia streets, paying $6,500 for it.

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

In New York, Miss Carlotta LeClercq is playing in "Fate" at Wallack's. Her acting is highly commended by the press as is also that of Miss Margaret Chambers and Eben Plympton, both of whom were formerly members of the California Theatre Company..... Booth's Theatre was opened on the 12th for a special entertainment. Charles Kytinge, Shakspearian interpreter, made his appearance, supported by Miss Carlotta LeClercq, Miss Clara Morris, Miss Rose Eytinge, John McCullough, Stuart Robson, John T. Raymond and others..... Miss Alice Harrison commenced an engagement in "The Boy Detective" at the Theatre Comique on the 8th.....Bryant's Opera House continued open with the regular company.....Fifth Avenue Theatre is closed.....Frank Jones, the musical mokc, has joined the company at the Bowery Theatre.....At Niblo's Theatre, a new drama entitled "The Cryptogram," was produced on the 15th..... At the Olympic Theatre, great attractions are offered. The troupe includes Young America, Ada and Arthur Hernandez and Walla Leonard, Miss Maggie Weston, a superior comedienne and vocalist, J. P. Hill, the great gymnast, Sheridan and Mack, protean performers, Joe Lang, negro comedian, and sixty others.....At Wood's Museum, Hernandez Foster appeared on the 15th in "Jack Harkaway Among the Brigands".....Henri Rochefort delivered his first and only lecture in America at the Academy of Music on Friday evening, June 5th. He spoke in the French language, and the attendance was not near so large as had been anticipated.....The following California professionals are in New York on the books of Sanford's Dramatic Agency: Ed. Montague, Eugenia Garretta, Harry Sinclair, James Larkin, Carrie Armstrong, John O'Neil, Samuel Davis, Young America, James E. Carton and Little Josey.

Barnum advertises his traveling pageant as a "huge highway holiday-parade, displaying a transporting league of lustre."

Poor Montreal! That unhappy city is suffering from a combined attack of "Mazeppa" and "Buffalo Bill."

The Chicago Tribune, in referring to Mr. Sothern, who is playing in "Our American Cousin," in Chicago, says: "Now that Mr. Sothern is safely here, it will not be amiss to state that he came from Philadelphia with an effort. He was suffering at the time from an attack of his old enemy, rheumatism, and feared at one time that his visit would be postponed. He made the best of matters, however, and came to Chicago, leaving a great deal of his enemy behind, and arriving just in time to encounter a change of weather sufficient to disable a community. His performance last night betokened no uneasiness, however. His Lord Dundreary was the same incompatible droll personage as ever; his imbecile anecdotes wander away from the point with as much readiness as on former occasions, enlivened with a few new and diverting "gags."

The New York Clipper says: Mr Charles Coghlan, one of the very best young actors on the English stage, will accompany Miss Neilson to this country in the Fall. Mr. Coghlan is at present playing Charles Surface, in the brilliant revival of "The School for Scandal," at the Prince of Wales Theatre, London.

Edwin Adams will not go to Europe this season as reported. He and Joe Jefferson are to spend the hot weather hunting in Minnesota.

The New York Dispatch says: The Californians are congratulating themselves on the presence of a Signor Marra, of the Strakosch opera troupe. Who is he, any way?

It is rumored that Mr. Sheridan Shook, of the Union Square Theatre, will shortly become lessee of the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia.

Mr. Eben Plympton, now at Wallack's Theatre, will join the company of the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, in the Fall season.

An English opera company, consisting of Miss Edith Abell, Mme. Pauline Canissa, Mrs. Brookhouse Bowler, Mr. Brookhouse Bowler, Mr. Thiller, Mr. Peakes and Mr Gustavus Hall, with a chorus and orchestra, will travel through Canada and the Provinces under the direction and management of Mr. G. Colby, beginning June 8.

The critic of the Boston Herald expatiates on the merits of Lawrence Barrett in the following strain: "For some reason or other Lawrence Barrett does not draw very profitable audiences during his engagement at the Boston Theatre this week but for another reason, and a very good one, the patrons he does have are very enthusiastic. Mr. Barrett evidently attempts to copy after Booth's originals, but the effort is less successful and less satisfactory. Mr. Barrett's Hamlet is quite an entertaining personage, being intelligent, reasonable, and seriously argumentative. It is altogether, perhaps, an enjoyable portraiture, especially to those not familiar with the better personations of the character. The reasons why it is inferior are found in a faulty reading, a very studied and pronounced yet often forced and labored diction, and a somewhat crude and strong style, which savors less of nature than of art."

The New York Mercury says: Miss Clara Williams, the popular actress, and sister of Little Nell, became a widow on the 2d, after a matrimonial career of only ten weeks. Her late husband was Mr. James Helm, a well-known turf-man, who died at San Francisco, of apoplexy.

The Tampa (Fla.) Guardian says: "The Christian people of Key West, of all sects, inclusive of the families of the clergymen, and most of the clergy themselves, are regular attendants of the theatre. The lady organist of a company was, for a time Miss Fallwood, daughter of Rev. O. A. Fallwood, minister in charge of the Methodist Church in this city. Rev. Mr. Ruther, of the Episcopal Church, is a sturdy patron of the drama; as also is Father Allard.

Milton Nobles will be the leading man at Wood's Museum, Philadelphia next season, and will leave for his home in St. Clair, Mich., to pass the summer.

Miss Effie Elisler, a young actress, and daughter of the Cleveland Academy manager, was recently presented, at her benefit, with a pair of diamond ear-drops, a beautifully bound bible and Episcopal prayer-book, and a bronze statuette of "Romeo and Juliet." This is the first instance on record of such books having been presented on the stage. At the next effort of the kind, efforts should be made to spare up a parson for the presentation speech.

Little Nell will start next season with "No Name," a new protean society play, adapted expressly for her versatile capabilities.

Jennie Benson and her husband, James Fish, have bought a house at Newport, R. I., as their headquarters, when unemployed.

Zuluma Agra, formerly of Barnum's Circus and styled a Circassian girl, was married recently to a Mr. Bruce, of Pittsburg, who is reported heir to a large estate there. The lady was with O'Brien's Circus at the time, but has since cancelled her engagement. She perpetually refused Bruce last year, which caused him to be placed in Dixmont Insane Asylum. On his recovery he again sought her, and was rewarded.

The purser of a Southern steamer recently sent word to Barnum that he had on board a very fine Irish mocking-bird which he would like to present to the hippodrome collection. Barnum promptly sent Charley McLaine, the boss canvasman, with a beautiful cage. Charley soon returned, on a two-horse truck, with a very fine specimen of the Florida alligator.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean says of Lucca: "The golden-throated song-bird has come back again and was enthusiastically welcomed by a crowded house at Hooley's last evening. West Indian figures may have lightened her pockets, domestic troubles may have ruffled the surface of her life's sea, but her delicious tones are as sweet as ever, and her impulsive, passionate acting thrills the soul a strangely as it did a year ago. Lucca has won her place among prime donnas by sheer merit more than by womanly goodness, womanly beauty, of managerial tact, and she will keep it as long as her powers last, and her sins will be forgotten long before people shall have ceased to talk of her voice." Pretty good for a Chicago paper to comment on Lucca's little amours.

PACIFIC COAST DRAMATIC NEWS.

SACRAMENTO.—Miss Imogen Holbrook and Harry Eytinge appeared last night at the Metropolitan Theatre in the comedy of "True Nobility" and the farce of "A Perplexing Predicament." There will be a matinee performance to-day, and this evening the bill will consist of "Matrimonial Honey" and "A Perplexing Predicament."

OAKLAND.—Miss Susan Galton and Messrs. Kelleher, Dugan and Gilder gave a concert at Brayton Hall last night.

VALLEJO.—Victoria C. Woodhull lectured here on Thursday evening.

EUREKA.—The Journal of the 17th says: The Vieuxtemps Brothers gave a concert at Kessler's Hall last Tuesday, which was largely attended, and gave very general satisfaction. Both are superior vocalists, and sang many standard pieces of great merit, even the Brothers being about the best musical artists we have ever listened to, and especially in his solos on the melodeon with his eyes blindfolded. Their vocal and instrumental music was loudly applauded.

MARYSVILLE.—John Wilson's Circus Troupe arrived here on Wednesday and gave an afternoon and evening performance. There was an overflowing tent in the evening.

GRASS VALLEY.—The Palace Amphitheatre circus under the management of John Wilson performed here last night.

VIRGINIA CITY.—Miss Amy Stone commenced another engagement for one week at Piper's Opera House on Monday, when E. J. Buckley made his first appearance. "The Female Gambler" and "Dodging for Wife" constituted the entertainment. On Tuesday "Led Astray" was performed for the benefit of W. J. Coggswell. On Wednesday, "Wild Meg" and "Andy Blake" constituted the bill. "Wedded, Yet no Wife" was in rehearsal, and on Friday Miss Amy Stone took her farewell benefit.

SALT LAKE.—George D. Chaplin is the star at the theatre. If the management will send bills and papers to FIGARO we shall be able to report more fully.

CHEYENNE.—The star at McDaniel's Theatre at present is Master Leo, the acrobat. Frank Sparrow is Manager. The Coleman Sisters made their last appearance at the Cheyenne Opera House on the 12th. Charles and Carrie Austin appeared in their champion zouave drill.

FORT D. A. RUSSELL.—The Coleman Sisters appeared at the theatre here on the 15th in conjunction with the Austins.

PORTLAND.—On Monday evening the last representation of "Cinderella" was given, and the Fanny Morgan Phelps dramatic company made their last appearance. On Wednesday, Maguire's California Minstrels opened at Oro Fino Theatre. The company comprises Bobby Newcomb, Billy Sweetman, Welch and Rice, Con. T. Murphy, Little Mac, W. F. Baker and the others who were recently performing at the San Francisco Opera House. On Wednesday the Rev. August J. Doesn't Understand.

The Independant Californian, a San Jose Local Option paper commenting on a paragraph of ours says:

Very true Mr. Figaro, dyspepsia is a terrible evil, and bad cooks are an abomination. But are not the infernal compounds of bad whisky in the shape of tonics and stomachics that are recommended by liquor men and others as a cure for the ill of dyspeptic stomachs quite as bad? We think they are worthy of your attention.

Most of the bitters sold are advertised as "good for dyspepsia" and so they are. Nothing can be better calculated to bring on dyspepsia than Bullengers Bitters, Dr. Shertem's Stomachic, and all that sort of stuff.

A Scare.

The other day an aged couple drove into Indiana City just as an undertaking firm was moving into an old church, which had been purchased for a shop. The old gentleman stood up in his wagon, his mouth and eyes distended, as the men silently carried coffin after coffin into the church. At last he turned to his awe-stricken half and gasped: "Sary, by golly, it's the cholera; let's git!" and they gitted.

A Sad Case.

J. Christ is in trouble. Little children come unto him and guy him. He keeps a brewery on the San Bruno Road, and the little children seem determined that he sha l brew no beer if they can prevent it. Charles Stanley, a wicked little boy recently threw a brick or a portion of a brick at J. Christ's right cheek and J. Christ instead of presenting his left cheek had the boy arrested. These are sad times.

Wachtel.

The New York Spirit of the Times says: Wachtel, the shouting German tenor, has settled down at Homburg, where we trust he will remain and not revisit us. We had quite enough of his yelling when here before, which compelled every other artist in the company, poor Parepa-Rosa included, to follow suit—to say nothing of his vulgar and gross impertinence.

Conjugal Conjugation.

A friend in Norwich, Connecticut, makes the following grammatical reflection which he calls Conjugal Conjugation: Past tense. Maiden—blooming, lovely, fresh; coqueting; lover—tender, ardent, self-forgetting. Present tense. Matron—stately, stylish, quite expensive; husband—smoking, selfish, often pensive. Future tense. Mother — gray-haired; marriageable daughters. Father—bankrupt; lots of "hadn't oughters."

A Soliloquy by a Toper.

"They say whisky is a curse. And they say brandy is a curse. And they say tobacco is another curse. Well, I wish all those curses would come home to roost, and roost low at that, so as I could pull 'em down whenever I wanted 'em."

Just as Easy.

Never marry for wealth, but remember that it is just as easy to love a girl who has a brick house, with a Mansard roof and silver-plated doorbell, as one who hasn't anything but an auburn head and an amiable disposition.

Scientific Enquiry.

Charles B. Darwin being engaged as counsel for the proprietor of the Chronicle, the public awaits with some interest the publication of the Darwin theory as regards Charles DeYoung.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain!
Who goes there once will go again.

The Local Option in Brooklyn.

The New York Dispatch tells the following story: Mr. Swinken returned to his home in Oxford street, Brooklyn, on last Wednesday night, slightly "fluenced." Mrs. Swinken is a lady who detests the flowing bowl, and when her Weelyum is under its influence she isn't backward in expressing her sentiments. Hence, Mrs. S. generally contrives to crawl to his chamber with as little noise as possible. On Wednesday evening when he got to the front stoop he discovered—with a horror indescribable—that in changing his pants that morning he had forgotten his night-key. What was he to do? Should he ring and disturb the slumbers of the partner of his married happiness he knew that his slumbers would be brief that evening. A bright thought struck him. He would see if he couldn't enter by the basement window, and quietly thence make his way to his chamber. He climbed over the railing found the shutters of one of the windows unbolted, lowered the window and crawled in. Then he shut the window, hunted round for the closet, upset three or four chairs, skinned his shins, disturbed his temper, and found the closet. He opened the closet door, entered and commenced feeling around for the matches. Suddenly the closet door went to with a bang, and a coarse voice shouted: "If you attempt to come out I'll blow your brains out." Old Swinken didn't attempt to come out. He thought his house was in the possession of burglars, and kept quiet, but at the same time inwardly lamented that he was the husband of a lady with a "temper of her own." Then he sat down on the floor, and in a short time his grief found vent in vigorous snores. When daylight came his wife got down to the kitchen to find the valorous servant-girl standing sentry over the closet, armed with a frying-pan. "Jane," said Mrs. Swinken, "what's the matter?" "Oh, ma'am," said Jane, "a murderin' villain of a burglar entered by that window last night. I watched him, and when he got into the closet I slammed the door on him, and I've kept him in all night. Run, ma'am, and get an officer. I'll keep him where he is all safe till you get back." Mrs. S. hurried out and found a policeman on the corner, told him the story, and he entered the basement with pistol in one hand and club in the other. "Open the door of the closet and let him out," said he. The door was thrown open! There lay Mr. Swinken, with his head pillowed on a lot of potatoes and onions, and his feet stuck in a pot of soap fat. He was dragged out and shaken till he was thoroughly awke, and all three of his discoverers asked him what he went to sleep in the closet for, and why he got in by the window, and if he wasn't ashamed of himself. "Look here," said Swinken; "this is my house, ain't it? I've got a right to enter any way I like. And I'll be—be—be thundered if I don't sleep in the closet or the coal-hole, or anywhere I want to. That's the kind of man I am." Swinken had to take a bath before he went to business that day. And now he has bought a dozen night keys, and has one in every coat and pair of pants he owns.

Fechter's Hamlet.

On Monday, Fechter will appear at Maguire's New Theatre in his wonderfully original impersonation of Hamlet. Of this performance the London Times said:

PRINCESS' THEATRE.—Mr. Fechter's performance of Hamlet should unquestionably be seen by every one who takes interest in the higher departments of histrionic art. A Parisian artist, unrivalled in his own line, which is not that of French classical tragedy, essays the most arduous of Shakesperian characters. With the conventions of our stage he has had nothing to do. He goes straight from the book to the boards, and though possibly he has received a few hints as to the general conduct of the business, there is every reason to believe that all his details are entirely the result of his own thought.

His very entrance makes a completely novel impression. He indicates Hamlet's Scandinavian nationality by flaxen hair, and carries to perfection an assumption of that dreamy look which is scarcely to be associated with a dark complexion. There is no doubt that to him the meditative element in Hamlet's character has seemed most essential. The manner in which he throws out his answers, like one unwillingly awakened from a continued abstraction, into which he presently relapses, is admirably truthful, and the pretence of madness little changes this manner, beyond the addition of a slight tone of irony.

Through the predominance given to the meditative element, the soliloquies acquire a very remarkable character. He has elaborated these at a vast expense of thought, and his delivery is marked by the subtlest variations. The birth of his thought is more visible than the influence of his emotions.

The gentlemanlike side of Hamlet stands also high in the consideration of Mr. Fechter. Throughout the whole tragedy he is the very pattern of courtesy, and this quality is especially shown in his scenes with the players. He is a thoroughly polite prince, and even when he is vexed by the interruptions of Polonius, there is infinite courtesy in the gestures with which he motions him to silence. The pains which Mr. Fechter has taken to master the diction of Shakspeare and fully to understand every line set down for him, are laudable in the highest degree, and may be regarded as monuments of creditable toil.

PROCLAMATION

JULY 4, 1874.

HEADQUARTERS GRAND MARSHAL, Southwest Corner Clay and Montgomery Sts., San Francisco, June 12th, 1874.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Having had conferred upon me the high honor of being chosen Grand Marshal of the celebration of the approaching Anniversary of American Independence, by the "Committee of Two Hundred," I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all Military and Civic Bodies and to all my fellow-citizens generally, to participate in the approaching celebration, and to unite in a fitting tribute to the glorious event that gave a rank to our Country among the Powers of the World, proclaiming the United Colonies of America as the abiding place of Freedom, and the home and refuge of the oppressed of all nations.

Let there be a celebration worthy of the Glorious Day, and let the children of all climes and countries unite in rendering honor to the Birthday of our Republic and give an unfailing assurance that the courage, sacrifices, and heroism of the Patriots of '76 are lovingly appreciated by its descendants, and by all men who now enjoy the blessings of a Free Government, and the benefits they receive through the devotion of our Revolutionary Fathers.

To command success, it is necessary that every citizen should take an active interest in the Celebration, and their co-operation and assistance specially desired.

Special invitations will be extended to all organized Bodies, and a prompt and ready acceptance solicited.

Committees on Finance, composed of well known citizens, will wait upon the citizens generally, from whom a generous response is expected.

The appointment of Chiefs of Staff, Marshals of Divisions and Aids, will be announced as speedily as possible.

The Grand Marshal assures his fellow-citizens that nothing shall be left undone to make the forthcoming Celebration worthy of the Day and once more asks for your co-operation and assistance.

DANIEL NORCROSS, Grand Marshal.

FOURTH OF JULY

HEADQUARTERS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, 605 Clay street, near Montgomery.

THE COMMITTEE ON INVITATIONS ARE now sending out invitations to the numerous Orders, Societies, Organizations, etc., in the CITY AND CITY OF OAKLAND, to join in the Procession on the approaching Anniversary of our National Independence. Fearing, however, that some may be inadvertently overlooked and that perhaps there may be thereby engendered a feeling that an act of injustice had been committed the Committee desires thus publicly to extend a cordial and heartfelt invitation to all organized bodies in the city, and in the CITY OF OAKLAND, to take part in the celebration of the Nation's Birthday. A splendid procession is already assured. Let all join it in the spirit in which the invitation is tendered, and it will be a triumph surpassing all former celebrations of the day in this city. An early response is especially requested, so that the Grand Marshal may be able to assign the bodies accepting their appropriate positions in the line.

It is proposed to organize a company of "ANTIQUE AND HORRIBLES," to take part in the Procession. All desiring to join will please communicate with the Chairman of the Invitation Committee.

By order of the Committee on Invitations.

AN OPEN LETTER
To the Well Known Business House of this City.

THE PEOPLE OF SAN FRANCISCO AND State of California—As reform is now the call all over the State, and every man and woman trying to become economical, I wish to call your attention to a particular subject, and that is, when you wish to invest a dollar to do so, and go where you will get your money's worth; when you make purchase, go to the house that manufactures and imports the article direct, and you are sure to save money. To find such a house go to S. POPPER'S new shirt manufactory and gents' furnishing goods establishment, Nos. 533 Kearny street, near Sutter and Bush, and 537 Kearny street, near Bush and Pine, the oldest and leading manufacturing establishment in the city. Mr. Popper's offer to sell below cost, or retail at manufactory prices—that's too thin; but he can sell a shirt made and more perfect-fitting shirt, superior quality, at a more reasonable price than any house in the city, the same in underwear, and furnishing goods, etc. Shirts made to order and satisfaction warranted. Gentlemen coming to the city please remember this, and call before purchasing elsewhere.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

California Theatre.

This evening Herve's very amusing opera of Lord Creve," will be produced for the first time in San Francisco. The cast of characters appears on our first page. The story is as follows:

Fleur-de-Noblesse, the daughter of a marquis, takes to carpentering, a sufficient indication of her practical strength of mind. She develops an ingenious turn, hammers and glues, and loves a young man of similar tastes, a cabinet-maker, in secret. Her father, unable to procure any suitable match for his eccentric daughter, whose habits of hammering drive away proper suitors, determines to make her hand, the prize for the best shot at an archery fete. Her carpenter-lover cannot shoot. Fleur-de-Noblesse gets over that difficulty by telling him to present himself at the meeting, disguised as a bowman, and she will so arrange the target that what simple Ernest cannot effect, simple mechanism shall. So he comes, shoots, and, by an ingenious contrivance on the part of the young woman, who makes the target turn round, with her lover's arrow apparently sticking in the bull's eye, he conquers. But the crack-shot, one Alexandrivore, now arrives. He does not wish to gain the prize, being in love with a young village maiden, Dindonnette, but he wishes to exhibit his own skill, and offers to split Ernest's arrow. As this would make him victor and entitle him to the reward, Fleur-de-Noblesse hit upon another plan to get him out of the way, and at the same time to punish him for the slight put upon her. When Alexandrivore shoots, Fleur-de-Noblesse screams, and runs in with an arrow, supposed to be Alexandrivore's, in her eye. He is immediately seized and sent to prison. The archers, disguised as doctors, give their opinion in a chorus on the wound in Fleur-de-Noblesse's eye. Dindonnette, disguised as a doctor, says that the only person who can take out the arrow is Alexandrivore, who inflicted the wound. This releases him from prison; the doctors throw off their robes, and, appearing as archers, prevent his recapture. After a discovery that Dindonnette, who marries Alexandrivore, is the daughter of the Duc d'Es-Face, who derives his title of "Duke of the Opposite-side-of-the-way" from residing on the other side of the river; and that Gerome is the son of the Bailiff, the piece concludes.

Maguire's New Theatre.

To-night the public who have been waiting with longing expectation, the appearance of Charles Fechter in "Hamlet" will be gratified. The play will be presented with a capital cast. By the courtesy of Barton Hill, of the California Theatre, John Wilson will play the King, and Henry Edwards will take the role of the Ghost. Miss Lizzie Price will appear as the fair Ophelia, Charles Edmonds as Horatio, A. D. Bidings as Polonius, Edward Arnott as Laertes, and George Giddens as the first grave-digger. We publish in another column the opinion expressed by the London Times when Fechter played this part at the Princess's Theatre.

Opera House.

"Sullivan" ("David Garrick"), was capitally performed by the Spanish company last night. There will be no performance this evening. The next entertainment will be given on Thursday evening. It will be for the benefit of Donna Francisca A de Luque, and will consist of the three act drama of "En Brazos de la Muerte."

Bella Union Theatre.

The burlesque of "Mazeppa" with Miss Lena Procter as Mazeppa, Miss Maggie Maguire as Olinska, and Miss Jennie Johnson as Mary Ann Jane, draws crowded houses. Col. Mandeville appears nightly in the first part in character songs, and in amusing acts and various other performances are. The theatre was packed both on Saturday and Sunday nights.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Tures, Ned Buckley, Miss Ida May, Miss Rose Vincent and Miss Lizzie Worrell, will all appear to-night in a great bill which is published on our first page.

Notes.

The regular dramatic season at the California Theatre will be opened on Monday next when Sothern supported by Miss Minnie Walton and the newly-organized company will appear in 'Our American Cousin.

John McCullough will arrive from the East to-morrow evening. He is accompanied by Miss Bella Pateman, and Robert Pateman, engaged for the new season.

John Wilson will take his circus company East this year. The Dockrills will continue leading performers.

The dramatic season by the Po Fung Ni Troupe commenced at the new Sing Fine Yuen Theatre on Jackson street on Saturday evening. There was a large and fashionable attendance.

All must admire the charming professional courtesy displayed by the management of the California Theatre in sending two of their best Shakespearian actors to support Fechter in "Hamlet" at a rival house, in order that a great play may be worthily presented, and a great artist worthily supported.

On Wednesday Mons. Duchesne will take his benefit at the California Theatre. He is sure to have a bumper. A splendid bill will be presented. It will comprise Adani's operetta of "Les Pantins de Violetta," the first and second acts of "La Perichole" and a Spanish song by Aimee. There will be an extra matinee on the same day for the benefit of Mons. Benedick, the efficient stage manager.

ART ASSOCIATION.—The best and most varied collection of pictures which has been exhibited at the gallery, 313 Pine street, is now open to the public day and evening. It includes Keith's "California Alps" (a picture covering a canvas 10 by 6 feet), Erskan's magnificent nude study "Andromeda," Miss Lea's "Lady of Schalott," examples of Bierstadt, Trojan and 120 works by the best local artists, etc. The fine series of casts presented by the French Government, and the entire Pioche collection are included, and the price of admission is almost nominal.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An agent may be profitably employed here.

Dr. Doherty

Has devoted his study more particularly to chronic and specific practice, and as such is now the most successful of any Physician in San Francisco. Office 819 Sacramento street, corner of Leidesdorff, a few doors below What Cheer House.

REMONSTRANCE OF A FLIRT.

Dear Henry John, for one so young,
And not long free from state and summing,
Your manners, sir, are not among
The least beetling.
You blush like maiden or the rose,
You look sometimes a solemn thinker,
You are the very pink of beaux—
And none are pinker.

I like your figure, tho' 'tis spare,
I like your rings (who doesn't know them?)
I like the unaffected air
With which you show them.
You've talked a deal about the moon—
Which moonshine girls have overrate!—
I know you are an arrant spoon—
Electro-plated.

What mischief more, you fiend of flirts!
Tho' oft engag'd, you have not married;
How many hearts are sore with hurts
By Harry harried!
But spare the rest this sorry trick,
And prove not altogether fickle,
For, mark, unless you quickly pick,
You'll taste a pickle!

Yes, Henry John, unless you still
Your rabid love of lady-killing,
You'll have to pay a little bill
For all this billing.
For each of these, you may be sure,
Will track you with relentless fury,
And justice not in vain adjure
Before a jury!

Justifiable Indignation.

Mrs. Chittles, of Philadelphia, has been visiting her relatives in this city for the last few months. Miss Chittles has a rather plain face, and her wardrobe is decidedly under style. Yet the absurd little thing has been sought after and cooed to by a perfect throng of the best and bloodedest young men of San Francisco. But she has just been found out. The Miss Lirrups have made the disgraceful discovery. Miss Chittles was invited to dine at their house. The dinner was entirely en famille, so that they had it all their own way watching her. She got through passably till it came to the dessert. Then—the low, vulgar woman!—she cut her pie with a knife! She positively asked for a knife and cut her pie with it! The Miss Lirrups saw her do it with their own eyes. They expected to see her introduce the pieces into her mouth with the knife. However, she did not go quite so far as that. But the Miss Lirrups hope that this is enough. Yes, they should say so, indeed. The idea! of a lady cutting her pie with a knife. Birth, indeed! As if a person with any pretension to birth at all did not know naturally that a fork is made to cut pie with. The Miss Lirrups would like to know what Clarence Puttyvis can have to say about Mrs. Chittles' Family now. Do people of Family—they would like to inquire—do people with a family tree cut their pie with a knife?

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Gorville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

If one wishes to pass an hour or two pleasantly at the game of billiards, no pleasanter place can be found in the city than Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, Northeast corner Bush and Kearny streets entrance on Bush. From the window a good view can be had of two of our busiest streets Bush and Kearny. Local Option not in force; for the best of Wines, Liquors and Cigars, are served at the bar for 12½ cents. 6-i

DROP IN AND SEE TUTHEE AND GALE AT the Opera House Bar, adjoining the Opera

Opera Bouffe in Paris.

The "special commissioner" of the New York Spirit of the Times writes as follows from Paris: The last time I was in Paris I made a point of going at once to the new Theatre de la Renaissance to see Mlle. Theo. This little lady is the rage in Paris. In the Exhibition year it was all Schneider. It cost a fortune to obtain a box for the Varieties. The celebrated actress and singer wore as many diamonds as an Empress, and as good diamonds into the bargain: indeed, the story goes that when one day a dashing carriage, with powered footmen, drove up to the entrance of the Exhibition devoted to the crowned heads and high nobility, the steps were flung down with an air, the servants called out with distinction and vehemence, "La Grande Duchesse de Gerolstein," the Exhibition attendants made a very low reverence, and Schneider sailed into the building—diamonds and all. This may be true or not, but it is certain that in the Exhibition year Schneider was as great a celebrity in Paris as the crowned heads themselves, and would have been forgiven for anything flavored with the then popular chic. But favorites have their hour and disappear. Age creeps on, and the warm elasticity of youth disappears. Audiences are heartless, and they mercilessly reject the advances of those who are not absolutely young. So the place of the all-conquering Schneider was taken by Judic, who was picked out of a music hall where she had obtained great renown by singing half-comic and half-sentimental ditties. Judic advanced in fame, and the success of "La Timbale d'Argent" gave her a popularity almost as extensive as that of Schneider—a popularity, however, which she divided with Peschard, who sang the second music in the same opera. In time to come Judic and Peschard ceased to be the rage. Paris wanted a new and younger excitement. The jardins of the delightful city had left the Varieties for the Bouffes Parisiennes, they now deserted the Bouffes for the Folies Dramatique, when "La Fille de Madame Angot" became the rage, and two more stars, in Paola Marie and Desclauzas, appeared on the horizon. It is a matter of history how long this celebrated opera ran at the Folies Dramatique, when transferred there from Brussels. It may no doubt be running at this moment, and will run until the happy moment when Girofli-Girofla is ready to be produced.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question where they had their clothes made, that they went to Baloun & Stonda, No. 613 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment, 6 m

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant. 5-m

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

This theatre was crammed last night. Many who could not afford to see Fechter in every character were waiting to see him in the greatest of all his impersonations—Hamlet—and consequently there was a rush. It is to be hoped that "Hamlet" will be kept on the stage during the whole week, in order to afford all an opportunity of witnessing Fechter's new interpretation of the text. Fechter's Hamlet is unlike the conventional Hamlet in everything. The conventional Hamlet is absurd in many particulars, therefore, Fechter has done good service in making corrections in it. He has brought Hamlet to life. He represents him as a dreaming, irresolute young man, enthusiastic in beginning an enterprise, but incapable of sustained effort. He is subject to moods, is not all melancholy, but is merry and sad, genial and brutal, by turns. To say that Fechter acts Hamlet better than any other actor living, is to say what everyone knows; he also reads it admirably; this everyone does not know. The two most intelligent readings of Hamlet we have ever listened to are those of Charles Fechter and John McCullough; they are equally admirable, each of these actors understands the character, the difference between them is, that the former invests the character with a romantic tenderness of disposition which the latter dare not attempt. The conception in each case, with this exception, is the same. There are a thousand little delicate touches of light and shade in Fechter's Hamlet which have never been seen before. Dress, carriage, gestures, inflections of voice, little movements of the hand, new disposition of the furniture on the stage, all go to make up a whole which is as near perfection as this generation can hope to see. The performance last night was an excellent one throughout, Miss Lizzie Price won much applause for her acting in the role of Ophelia, Edward Arnot made a fine, manly Laertes, A. D. Billings a dignified, though prosy Polonius, and Charles Edmonds played Horatio remarkably well. Harry Edwards read the part of the Ghost in his accustomed style, and nothing was lacking in that role, John Wilson made most of his points well in the character of the King, but made a bad exit at the conclusion of the play scene. It is a very long time since the part of Queen Gertrude has been so well performed as it was last night by Miss Mary Wells. She was extremely effective in the closet scene, and made the audience appreciate the horror of her situation, locked in a room with a madman who had just slain a man and was loudly threatening her. This, many actresses fail to do. Miss Wells succeeded. Frank Rea as the first actor did a capital bit of elocution and got a round of applause for it, and Miss Fanny Young was all that could be desired as the Player Queen. Jule Robinson and J. Duncan played the roles of Rosencranz and Gildenstern carefully and well, George Giddens caused much amusement as the First Gravedigger, and D. J. Sherwood as the Second Grave-digger, read his lines well and acquitted himself most creditably in his first Shakespearian role. "Hamlet" will be performed every night until further notice, and will, we trust, be seen by all who are capable of appreciating the play.

California Theatre.

"L'Œil Creve," Herve's very funny opera bouffe was capitally performed last night. Mlle. Aimee as that noble exponent of woman's rights, Fleur de Noblesse was infinitely amusing, and sang and acted with immense spirit, she was ably supported by MM. Juteau, Lecuyer, Duchesne and others "L'Œil Creve" will be repeated to-night. To-morrow afternoon "La Fille de Madame Angot" will be performed for the benefit of M. Benedick, and in the evening Mons. Duchesne will take his benefit and present a varied entertainment. But a few nights more will this charming troupe delight the public of San Francisco; these last opportunities should be made the most of.

Opera House.

"Sullivan" ("David Garrick"), was capitally performed by the Spanish company last night. There will be no performance this evening. The next entertainment will be given on Thursday evening. It will be for the benefit of Donna Francisca Ade Jaques, and will consist of the three act drama of "An Hazaña de la Muerte."

Bella Union Theatre.

Cal Manderville's sensation character songs, Miss Lena Procter, Miss Maggie Maguire, Miss Jennie Johnson and others in "Mazeppa," Kelly, Richie, Bree and others in acts, Ed Murray in his budget of fun, and a great variety of other entertainments will be presented at this most popular theatre this evening.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"Jim Gest," "Lively Jim," "Struck Oil," and "Music Lessons on the Banjo" are some of the acts to be played to-night by Johnny Tuers, Ned Buckley, Frank Mortimore and other artists engaged at this house.

ART ASSOCIATION.—The best and most varied collection of pictures which has been exhibited at the gallery, 313 Pine street, is now open to the public day and evening. It includes Keith's "California Alps" (a picture covering a canvas 10 by 6 feet), Erpikan's magnificent nude study "Andromeda," Miss Lea's "Lady of Schalott," examples of Bierstadt, Trojon and 120 works by the best local artists, etc. The fine series of casts presented by the French Government, and the Gothic Piscine collection are included, and the price of admission is almost nominal.

Woodward's Gardens.

A great bill is offered for Saturday and Sunday. Besides the usual performances, the famous Boston swordsman, Bortbick Reid, who cleaves an entire sheep and a bar of lead at one blow, will appear in the Claymore Manual, and Prof. McGraw in the strange feat of walking on the water. A fine Century Plant is in bloom.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be pleasantly spent here.

Great Bargains in Clothing.

The only store in the city that has the largest cheapest and finest assortment of Men's and Boys Clothing is H. Poyser's Montgomery Avenue Clothing Store, 719 Montgomery street, between Washington and Jackson. Also, a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Overcoats and Cloaks, and the finest stock of Gents' Furnishing Goods, Trunks, Valises, etc. 2-x

MY GHOST.

BY ELLIE LEE HARDENBROOK.

You tell me I am pale and wild
In gesture and in mien;
You add: "I'd say, were I a child,
That you a ghost had seen."

Then be a child! 'Tis only youth,
With its far-seeing eyes,
Can with a glance divine the truth,
Or utter sayings wise.

Across my path my ghost has passed,
Noonday my spectre brought,
And with it all my buried Past,
And all that Past has wrought.

He passed: For he to me is dead,
And I to him a dream,
A ghostly meeting, sad and dread;
It did not earthly seem.

For in the gay, sun-lighted throng
Of a bright city's street
Our garments touched, as quick along
We passed; we did not meet!

Pass on, pale Ghost! In silence go;
Words are but empty wind,
And tears are vain. Their bitter flow
No sweet relief can find.

We are both dead! Life means to love,
And Love for us is Sin.
Pass on, dear Ghost! In Heaven above
Our real life shall begin!

A Serious Case.

Nothing so vexes a physician as to be sent for in great haste and find little or nothing the matter with the patient. An eminent English surgeon was sent for by a gentleman who had received a slight wound. On his arrival he sent his servant back in great haste to get a certain kind of plaster. The patient, turning pale, said: "Sir, I hope there is no danger!" "Indeed, there is!" answered the surgeon, "for if the fellow doesn't run like a race-horse, the wound will be healed before he can possibly get back!"

A Terrible Hitch.

Dear Punch:—I am so puzzled. Can you solve my dilemma? Having a father and mother, I must have had two grandfathers; therefore, four great grandfathers; therefore, eight great-great-grandfathers, and so on; till, many generations back; there must be an infinity of great-great-grandfathers. But I have always understood we all sprang from Adam. I daresay this has perplexed many before, but I should be so glad if you will explain it to me.

Yours, ever faithfully,
—Punch. DUNDREARY.

Considerate.

This man knew what he was about. He lived in the country, and in buying an ax the other day he was particular to select the smallest one he could find. An acquaintance asked him why he did so, and he replied: "Well, my wife isn't enjoying very good health this Winter, and if I get a heavier one I'm afraid she won't be able to cut the wood."

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

If one wishes to pass an hour or two pleasantly at the game of billiards, no pleasanter place can be found in the city than Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, Northeast corner Bush and Kearny streets entrance on Bush. From the window a good view can be had of two of our busiest streets Bush and Kearny. Local Option not in force; for the best of Wines, Liquors and Cigars, are served at the bar for 12½ cents. 6-t

Spoiling a Coat.

Mr. Gorton visited the studio of the well-known and talented artist, Mr. Kolurs, in company with some friends. The artist was engaged on a painting, entitled "The Meeting," which represented a young man and woman clasping hands with evident emotion, while a Newfoundland dog looked on approvingly. Gorton admired the picture very much, asked the price, was told $1,500, looked astonished, and then commenced an examination of the other pictures in the room. In the meantime, the artist had entered into conversation with some of the rest of the party, and had wandered away from the picture which he was painting. In his saunterings around the room, Gorton became exceedingly interested in a canary in a cage which hung from the ceiling. In backing down to get into a good position for observing the bird, Gorton came against the picture of "The Meeting." He swung around quickly, and his elbow took the young man's hat and deposited it gracefully on the face of the young lady, while her parasol was inserted rudely in the eye of the dog, and the young man's white pants were plenteously flecked with the dog's nose, and part of his back. The artist rushed forward, gave one glance at the picture, and turned to Gorton: "See what you've done! Look at that picture!" "D—n the picture!" said Gorton. "Look at my coat!" And Groton still feels aggrieved that his coat was spoiled by Mr. Kolurs' painting.

Just Trying Them.

"Now, gentlemen," said a peripatetic lecturer to a somewhat noisy crowd, who had gathered to one of his seances in an Eastern village, "how would you like a good blackguard story? All in favor will raise their hands." Nine-tenths of the dexter paws present instantly went up, and there was a sudden hush of all noisy demonstrations. The lecturer went on with his original subject for a few minutes, when some incautious individual broke out with, "Say, where's that story?" "Bless you," was the reply, "I did not intend to tell any such story. I only wanted to know how many blackguards were present." You might have heard a pin drop any time during the lecture, after that.

Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question where they had their clothes made, that they went to Baloun & Stenda, No. 613 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment, 6 m

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. Negative Kindness.

Do the doctors know that half the wives in the world die of this complaint? "He never spoke an unkind word to his wife." Yes, but did he remember now and then, to speak a kind one? Did he have any sympathy for her bodily or mental ills? Or was he blind and deaf to both, treating them with that cutting indifference which in time chills the most loving heart and silences its throbs forever? Men are very guilty in this regard. They take a young girl from the warm atmosphere of a loving, cheerful home, and after a few brief weeks of devotion, leave her to battle single-handed with new cares and new duties, and to bear sickness with what courage she may, and go their ways into the tangled paths of life, without a thought of the responsibilities they are shirking or the solemn vows they have really broken.

The Other Side.

We've heard men envy Brigham Young the possession of fifty wives. It would, no doubt, be pleasant to have fifty loving women anxiously waiting to pull off your boots, fifty sweet voices gently welcoming you home, fifty tender bosoms on which to rest your aching head, and one hundred soft hands to do your washing. The other side of the picture is no so charming. It represents fifty mothers-in-law ready to harrass you to an early grave or to drive you to the quite seclusion of a lunatic asylum. "How dost thou like the picture?"

The Preacher of the Day.

A reverend gentleman of Massachusetts gives his sermons very startling headings. He dignifies the danger of a roast by the title "cremation," bother and worry he denominates "Paul's Shoo-Fly," the way to reach Heaven he calls "All Aboard the Lightning Express," and the future state he speaks of "Red-Hot Times." A preacher of such striking originality cannot but create a sensation, and crowds rush to hear him. It isn't fashionable now-a-days to speak in decorous language of sacred things. The banjo has taken the place of the organ in the churches.

Fault-Finders.

What a gift some people have of finding fault? Praise anything, no matter what, and they will always comfort you with a but. It really seems to hurt them when you take pleasure in admiring anything, and they hasten to take you down a peg. Sometimes they do this because they think such a course argues an experience and observation wiser and more fastidious than your own; but more often it is just a petulent habit, springing from envy or jealousy, for which the offender richly deserves to have his nose pulled, as a preventative to his turning it up in future.

A Heartless Woman.

Mr. E. S. Stokes thinks it very strange that his wife should want a divorce from him. He has never done anything to give her cause for complaint. He has only lived on terms of Platonic intimacy with that eminently virtuous female, Josephine Mansfield, and murdered Jim Fisk. The woman who could desert so worthy a man as Stokes is unfit to enjoy the pleasures of being married.

New Music.

We have received from the publisher M. Gray. A very pretty ballad entitled "The Summer Time That Was," words by Owen Meredith, composed by Oscar Weil. It is dedicated to Toby Rosenthal the artist.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'd
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery, open Day and Night.

DR. BENDS, Patent Gold Crowns for broken

California Journalism.

The New York Dispatch says: The gentlemen who edit the rural press in California are vigorous, forcible, and graphic writers. When they have occasion to speak of a rival, they always do it in terms approaching fulsome flattery. They don't stint their praise out there. The San Jose Mercury had occasion to speak of the editor of the Patriot, and he did it in the following flattering terms: "The Patriot has the facial area to lecture us on the 'decencies of journalism!' That is pretty good, coming from one who has been led around the streets by the ear, cowhided, had his nose pulled, the doors of private citizens shut in his face, and has been lampooned and reviled in every conceivable manner for his abuse of the privileges of the press; from one who can be bought to support or oppose any man or measure for a few dollars; who is known throughout the State as a gross libeler, slanderer, and infamous old wretch; whose very presence is a stench wherever he goes; a lecture on the amenities of journalism from this source is decidedly rich." We shouldn't be surprised if the Patriot man were so delighted with these complimentary remarks that he would load his double-barreled rifle and go to the Mercury office and fire a salute in honor of the editor. In California they don't feel as if they paid proper attention to any one until they've burned some powder in his honor.

It Wouldn't Do.

Bronson Howard's play of "Saratoga," which was considered awfully clever by the Arcadian clique of critics, has just been produced in London as "Brighton," after some trifling localization by Frank Marshall. It is announced as a very bad adaptation of Sardou's "La Papillonne." The Figaro relieves itself in a half dozen stanzas of vile doggerel, from which we select the best verse, and that is bad enough:

From French to vernacular Yankee,
Is rather too much hanky-panky;
And Marshall's fair fame,
If 'twere not for false shame,
Would have little cause to cry "thankee!"

Something New.

A New York paper says: A California reporter states that Victoria Woodhull in her lecture, "made use of expressions which caused the reporters to blush." What a guileless set the reporters of California must be! Oh, so innocent. We'd like to gaze on a New York reporter who could do anything so innocent. Our eyes aren't exactly sore, but we know the sight of that reporter would make them impervious to disease.

Couldn't Wait.

A countryman visiting a theatre, on looking carefully at his play-bill after the conclusion of the first act, read that three months elapsed before the commencement of the second. He at once went to the money-taker and said: "Beg pardon, sir, but I must ask you to return my money. I'm obliged to get back home to-morrow, so that, you see, I can't manage to stop for your second act."

And we never disappoint, at the What Cheer

Noble Doctrine.

Max Adeler thus expresses his opinion on the subject of abstinence:

I cull from the columns of a paper called The Crusader, the following editorial remarks:

"First cigars, then tobacco, then rum, then lies, then theft, then murder, then arrest, conviction, prison, the gallows. Down with secret societies, firearms and drugs. Down with tobacco and alcohol. Down with titles and infanticide. Down with chignons, padding, and false ideas. Down with all kinds of fraud, and up with all kinds of truth will be the plan of the Man of the Future. Mustard plasters are henceforth abolished in the new light of Truth."

This is my doctrine. I endorse every word of it, but it seems that the Crusader doesn't go far enough. Not only will mustard plasters be abolished by the clear light of Truth, but so will mud pies and watermelons, and wigs. And how about martingales and undershirts? Can they resist the clear light of Truth? Can the insidious sour ball and the pernicious bootjack withstand its translucent beams? I trow not! These things must go down, and with them all the other instruments of evil with which modern society is cursed. Nor more surely do cigars lead to the gallows than albata tea-pots to pauperism. While mock turtle soup holds its own how is it possible that deceit shall be torn from the human bosom? Down with it! Down with suicide and lobster salad! Down with false systems of philosophy and toothpicks! Away with syllabub and superstition, and yellow parasols! Pluck up the soul-destroying tom-cats by the roots! Tread the iconoclastic theories of Strauss under foot! Sweep away the Satanic door-mat with the besom of a nation's wrath! Let us have no more debauched public consciences, no more grasping avarice, no more hideous mockery of human woe, no more groceries and marketing, and rhubarb pie! Rhubarb pie is henceforth abolished in the clear light of Truth. So is mumbley-peg.

This is about my position at the present moment. Every man will now know where to find me. There are opinions for which I am ready to go to the stake. I know I am radical, perhaps too much so, but no crusading editor shall ever stand further on in the path to progress than I stand. I will exterminate him first.

San Francisco, June 12th, 1874.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Having had conferred upon me the high honor of being chosen Grand Marshal of the celebration of the approaching Anniversary of American Independence, by the "Committee of Two Hundred." I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all Military and Civic Bodies and to all my fellow-citizens generally, to participate in the approaching celebration, and to unite in a fitting tribute to the glorious event that gave a rank to our Country among the Powers of the World, proclaiming the United Colonies of America as the abiding place of Freedom, and the hope and refuge of the oppressed of all nations.

Let there be a celebration worthy of the Glorious Day, and let the children of all climes and countries unite in rendering honor to the Birth day of our Republic and give an unfailing assurance that the courage, sacrifices, and heroism of the Patriots of '76 are lovingly appreciated by their descendants, and by all men who now enjoy the blessings of a Free Government, and the benefits they receive through the devotion of our Revolutionary Fathers.

To command success, it is necessary that every citizen should take an active interest in the Celebration, and their co-operation and assistance is specially desired.

Special invitations will be extended to all organized Bodies, and a prompt and ready acceptance is solicited.

Committees on Finance, composed of well-known citizens, will wait upon the citizens generally, from whom a generous response is expected.

The appointment of Chiefs of Staff, Marshals of Divisions and Aids, will be announced as speedily as possible.

The Grand Marshal assures his fellow-citizens that nothing shall be left undone to make the forthcoming Celebration worthy of the Day and once more asks for your co-operation and assistance.

DANIEL NORCROSS, Grand Marshal.

FOURTH OF JULY!

HEADQUARTERS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
605 Clay street, near Montgomery.

THE COMMITTEE ON INVITATIONS ARE now sending out invitations to the numerous Orders, Societies, Organizations, etc., in this city AND CITY OF OAKLAND, to join in the Procession on the approaching Anniversary of our National Independence. Fearing, however, that some may be inadvertently overlooked and that perhaps there may be thereby engendered a feeling that an act of injustice had been committed, the Committee desires thus publicly to extend a cordial and heartfelt invitation to all organized bodies in the city, and in the CITY OF OAKLAND, to take part in the celebration of the Nation's Birthday. A splendid procession is already assured. Let all join it in the spirit in which this invitation is tendered, and it will be a triumph surpassing all former celebrations of the day in this city. An early response is especially requested, so that the Grand Marshal may be able to assign the bodies accepting, their appropriate positions in the line.

It is proposed to organize a company of "ANTIQUE AND HORRIBLES," to take part in the Procession. All desiring to join will please communicate with the Chairman of the Invitation Committee.

By order of the Committee on Invitations.

Some Crumbs.

A gentleman relates: Some years since I boarded at a hotel the proprietor of which was a newly-married man. The maiden name of his spouse was Crumb. Immediately after marriage, and when the hotel business commenced, old lady Crumb, her daughter Peggy, and her two sons, John and Ike, regularly domiciled themselves within the hospitable walls of the inn. The landlord was a good-natured, easy-going sort of a fellow, not quite as smart as John Quincy Adams; but one day he got off the following. Addressing me, he said: "Look-a-hary, Sam, I'll tell you just how it is—when I got married I thought I was getting a Crumb, but I'll be hanged if I don't believe I got the hull loaf."

It is scarcely to be wondered at that the worthy landlord, disgusted with so much Crumb, became crusty.

A "Sport."

The Raleigh (N. C.) Sentinel is responsible for the definition of "a sport." This dialogue, which took place in a street-car, the other day, is too good to be lost. One of a couple of Teutonic gentlemen sitting in one end of the car, seeing a flashily-dressed fellow enter and take his seat at the opposite end from where they were sitting, asked: "Who ish dot, Hans?" "Oh, dot ish a sphort." "Vot vone gall a sphort, hey?" "Don't you know?" "No, vot ish he?" "Vell he ish one of dem vellers vot shaves all de hair off a pig, and covers him all over mit grease, and pets a green Dutchman $5 he can't catch him."

Tale of Sentiment.

A story in one chapter, as told by the Norwalk Sentinel: There are faces that come to us in our dreams which go with us while we work or wander—faces that haunt us long after the slumbering hours they people have slipped away forever. Sad faces sometimes—faces with sorrowful eyes which keep us hushed and quiet, invoking a cloud of shadowy memories which chase away the light and the brightness of our being. Then again come faces in the bright fair and fresh—of people we know and can't pay just now, or—sadder yet—of folks who owe us that we can't collect a cent of.

A Strong Case.

The Alta shows that about twenty million of dollars is annually spent on whisky in this State, and suggests the idea that in the event of this industry being interferred with by law, all the money will be thrown away on food and pictures, and music and fishing excursions and museums and babies' clothes and such nonsense. Moreover 11,562 men will be obliged to do something else instead of making and selling whisky. We shudder at the thought.

A Resolute Girl.

There is a girl in Georgia who extorted a confession from her lover that he was worth but $100 and some clothes, and was too poor to marry. Now this cruel creature looked searchingly into his face, and said: "And is this the reason you have postponed so often our marriage?" "Yes," he replied. "Then," she said, "it shall be so no longer—we will get married." And the poor young martyr was cut off in the prime of youth and single blessedness.

Where Self-Denial Usually Begins.

Mrs. Martin. "Have another piece of of the pudding, Mr. Gatinstock. "No more pudding for me, I thank you, Mrs. Martin. I've eaten enough, and more than enough—and now is the time for self-denial.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen!
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
No goes there once will go again.

CRITICAL OPINIONS ON FECHTER.

FIGARO's opinion is that Fechter is the greatest actor of the day, and that after seeing his Hamlet, one does not wish to see the character attempted by anyone else for a week or two at least. Colonel Larrigan's opinion is that Fechter is no actor at all, doesn't compare with Lawrence Barrett. Colonel Larrigan also thinks Miss Carlotta LeClercq, is inferior as an actress to Alice Kingsbury, and that the chromos called "Pluck" are better pictures than any of the works of the old masters. Mr. Hockenflect says "Fechter is good enough as an actor but his ogscentist not good. If he could speak without dot ogscent he would be as great an artist as Bandmann. Hiram Slick speaking of "Hamlet" says, "He done it well enough, but he don't compare with Forrest. I seen Forrest in his prime and there ain't none of them can touch him. If Fechter hadn't that darned cockney accent I'd like him. He speaks English just like an Englishman and I can't get over that." The public as represented by the audience at Maguire's New Theatre, hang on every word that falls from Fechter's lips, rivet their eyes to his face and watch every expression and at the conclusion of every act call him out for the purpose of receiving the enthusiastic applause which they have refrained from giving, from fear of disturbing the action of the play. Fechter is a missionary, a missionary of Art, Art is religion. Would that we could keep him with us to convert our heathen Larrigans, Hockenflects and Slicks, who, instead of being ashamed of, glory in their incapability of appreciating anything but "inexplicable dumb shows and noise;" gaudy art and sickly, sentimental mouthing.

Arizona Wedding Festivities.

A correspondent writing from Arizona is delighted with the country. He had just attended a wedding when he last wrote. It was to him a beautiful scene—full of the sweet essence of unalloyed joy. "The fair and dainty bride," says he. "Arrayed in white muslin, blushes and smiles. The proud and happy bridegroom. Arrayed in blue overalls, a hickory shirt, and a sheepish cast of countenance. The bride's noble father. Arrayed in satinet, corn juice, and "chawing" tobacco. The smiling mother. Arrayed in gray calico, dishes, grease and sponge cake. And the wall arrayed in about fifty rifles, ready for use when the guests have drank the bride and groom's health often enough. This was, indeed, a scene of rural enchantment and slyvan joy. I would have enjoyed it much more than I did if it hadn't been for a disagreement which occurred between me and one of the owners of the guns. He accosted me: "Stranger, you are from the East. Where do you sling yerself around when yer to home?" "I don't sling myself at all. It's considered vulgar where I come from to sling oneself. I don't get drunk." "Stranger," was the gentle reply, "yer a fool." "You're mistaken," I answered. "Oh, that's as much as to say I lie. Jack, hand me my rifle. I'll blow the top of this galoot's head off. "My dear sir," said I, "you're mistaken again. I had no intention of calling you a liar." "That's twict," said he. Any man that contradicts me, calls me a liar. Jack, hurry up with that shooter." Jack reached him his rifle, and I bounced under the table. He made a blow at me with the butt of his rifle, and hit another man. That other man grabbed him by the throat, and then the fight became general. The table under which I lay was knocked over, and I was walked upon by the contending gentry. The fight was finally ended by the matron saying that if they did'nt stop "foughten" she'd give them no more whisky. When the wedding party broke up, I heard one gentleman remark: "Well, that's the pleasantest time I've had in six months, though there wasn't but three killed."

Too Bad.

That fence on Washington street is being pulled down. The authorities ought to leave a little bit standing, at the corner nearest the Post Office. It is handy to hide behind when you want to shoot at a man as he is coming back with his mail.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Fechter's magnificent impersonation of Hamlet was enjoyed by another large house last night. The care with which the play has been put on the stage reflects great credit on the management, and the manner in which members of the company who have not had much experience in Shakesperian parts play their respective roles is equally creditable. To see such an actor as Fechter in "Hamlet" is a chance which many living here will have but once in their lives, and if they miss it they will certainly regret it. Hamlet will be played again to-night.

California Theatre.

"L'Œil Crevé" was not performed last night in consequence of the illness of Mlle. Stani, and "La Belle Helene" was substituted. A matinee performance of "La Fille de Madame Angot" will be given to-day for the benefit of the very efficient stage manager, M. Benedick, and this evening that universal favorite and genuine artist, M. Duchesne, will take his farewell benefit. On this occasion Adam's operetta in one act entitled "Les Pantins de Violette" will be produced for the first time in San Francisco. In addition to this the first and second acts of the ever-popular opera of "La Perichole" will be performed, in the second act of which Mlle. Aimee will introduce the Spanish song entitled "La Paloma." On Thursday evening, the last but three of the season, "Orphee aux Enfers" will be performed for one night only.

Opera House.

"Sullivan" ("David Garrick") was capitally performed by the Spanish company last night. There will be no performance this evening. The next entertainment will be given on Thursday evening. It will be for the benefit of Donna Francisca A de Luque, and will consist of the three act drama of "An Biazo de la Muerte."

ART ASSOCIATION. — The best and most varied collection of pictures which has been exhibited at the gallery, 313 Pine street, is now open to the public day and evening. It includes Keith's "California Alps" (a picture covering a canvas 10 by 6 feet), Erpikan's magnificent nude study "Andromeda," Miss Lea's "Lady of Schalott," examples of Bierstadt, Trojan and 120 works by the best local artists, etc. The fine series of casts presented by the French Government, and the entire Pioche collection are included, and the price of admission is almost nominal.

Bella Union Theatre.

The laughable burlesque of "Mazeppa," Cal Mandeville's sensation character songs, Miss Alice Ross and Ed Murray in "Old and Young," Miss Maggie Kelly in comic songs, Miss Susie Robinson in song and dance, and a great variety of other entertainments will be offered this evening.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

A very lively bill, terminating with "Struck Oil," will be presented to-night by Ned Buckley, Johnny Tuers, Miss Ida May, Frank Mortimore, Miss Rose Vincent and other favorite performers.

Woodward's Gardens.

A great bill is offered for Saturday and Sunday. Besides the usual performances, the famous Scotch swordsman, Borthick Reid, who cleaves an entire sheep and a bar of lead at one blow, will appear in the Claymore Manual, and Prof. McGraw in the strange feat of walking on the water. A fine Century Plant is in bloom.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Notes.

Joe Murphy arrived by the overland train last night. As Joe has been constantly on the stage for the last ten months, he proposes to take a week or two rest and go a trout fishing, before commencing his Summer engagement here.

Madame Anna Bishop is going to make a concert tour in Oregon. Messrs. Wilkie and Campbell will accompany her.

The Amy Stone Troupe will arrive in town to-day.

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question where they had their clothes made, that they went to Baloun & Stoads, No. 613 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment, 6 m

SKETCHES FROM NATURE.

A duck swam on a pond—a pond;
'Twas ic brunette. It was a blonde,
And that plain fact,
To be exact.
I know no other fact byond,
It was a white duck on a pond.

An ass fed in a field—a field;
My reason absolutely reeled
To see that ass
Consuming grass,
And with a relish unconcealed.
It was a donkey in a field.

A dog gnawed at a bone—a bone;
The nutriment was wholly flown.
But still it gnawed,
Untired, unawed
By victual quite as hard as stone.
It was a dog that gnawed a bone.

A cat sat on a wall—a wall;
It sat quite still and did not fall.
It, may be, thought
That sparrows ought
To come whenever it should call.
It was a cat upon a wall.

You ask me what I would—I would
By lines like these have understood?
I'm not aware?
But folks declare
Observing Nature's facts is good,
So I determined that I would. —Fun.

Noble Rochefort.

A biography of Rochefort has been published. The most suggestive fact in it is that which relates to his salary as a writer for FIGARO. Sixty thousand dollars a year! Not for managing a great journal, but simply for contributing to its columns. Nothing like that sum was ever paid to a journalist outside of France, and probably nothing like it probably ever will be paid outside of France so long as impersonal journealism prevails. For this magnificent salary was paid for Rochefort's name rather than for Rochefort's work. Simply as a writer Rochefort was inferior to a dozen men on the Paris press, but he was the Comte de Rochefort, and he had voluntarily discarded the privileges which his rank conferred to espouse the dangerous cause of the republic. That, at least, was what republicans said. But in truth, Rochefort was at the beginning swayed quite as strongly by personal interest as by "patriotism." He disliked the drudgery of a municipal clerkship, and he must do something. Journalism was most to his taste—that is, the journalism of the "red" type, and so he doffed his title and became plain Henri Rochefort—one of the hoi polloi, with a salary of $60,500 a year! There, are a good many sons of poor marquises who would willingly renounce the delights of the Faubourg St. Germain if they could be compensated for their sacrifice at this munificent rate.

Beware.

"My boy," said an old toper to his son, "listen to the words of wisdom: "Beware of the first glass. Although for my part," he added, "I believe it is the last one that does the mischief!"

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

If one wishes to pass an hour or two pleasantly at the game of billiards, no pleasanter place can be found in the city than Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, Northeast corner Bush and Kearny streets entrance on Bush. From the window a good view can be had of two of our busiest streets Bush and Kearny. Local Option not in force; for the best of Wines, Liquors and Cigars, are served at the bar for 12½ cents. 6-r

A Word for the Boys.

Someone who has probably been a boy himself and remembers it, writes as follows to the Chicago Tribune: I pity a boy. As a general thing he is considered an unmerciful offender. If there is any mean little trick done outside of law and corn exchange offices, that is, among the smaller portion, it's "that boy" did it.

No one likes to see a lad go shuffling along the street, head down, stealing glances out from behind his ears; looking altogether as fresh as a cast-off paper collar in a back alley, or as suggestive as a wad of woman's hair on a basement window-sill. One unusually makes up his mind that "that boy" is one of Providence's blue blessings to the public, and he doesn't fall short of the truth.

But, making due allowance for the interest taken in the juvenile class at the present day, the attention paid to the rising generation, the boy, generally speaking, has to make his way up in the world at a disadvantage. He is given the simple word, unvarnished and unadorned; his manliness, his taste—and it lies not all in his mouth, as many seem to infer—his sense of honor, of politeness, is not appealed to.

A boy is sent on an errand, with the injunction to be as speedy as possible. On entering the store he finds the clerks all busy with customers, and expects to wait his turn; but just as he is stepping up to make known his errand, a young lady sweeps in. For some reason or other the young clerk doesn't see the boy, and immediately begins to deal out his "lavender scent-bag" civilities to said young lady. If the boy does not make a general stampede, tread on the poodle's tail, knock little children down, step on the lady's train, tearing it half off, he waits until the final, "Is there nothing more I can have the pleasure of showing you?" Then the familiar, "Well, what do you want, youngster?" sounds on his ear. Purchase made, he mopes home, knowing he is too late for supper.

In the parks, concert rooms, street cars, churches, he is everywhere welcome to the invitation to "get up" and "stand out of the way."

The characters we want the future men of our country to bear we must help the boys to attain; and nothing will help them to respect themselves and others, to be kindly and agreeable generally, like treating them, with deference to their wishes, and an appeal to all that is noble in them. And many a man occupying a position of influence and usefulness, has often said, with tender gratitude, "All that I am or hope to be, I owe to him who, in my boyhood, spoke many an encouraging word, an advising word—remembing that he, too, was once a boy."

The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Port Rare Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. The Late James Lick.

When Mr. Lick made his ante mortem will, and committed financial suicide, all the papers prophesied that he would by so doing, attain immortal fame. This may be so in the future, but it is a painful fact that an impression prevails that Mr. Lick is already dead and in some circles he is actually forgotten. People say "Lick? Oh yes that's the man who left all his money to benevolent and scientific institutions," and when they are told that Mr. Lick is still living say, in an indifferent manner "Oh is he? I thought he left it by will when he died." This isn't very satisfactory. In many people's minds Mr. Lick's money having been disposed of, he ceases to be at all interesting to them. He is a sucked orange, an empty bottle, an exploded fire-cracker. We hope that Mr. Lick, however, derives some satisfaction from reading the many newspaper notices of his liberal gifts. He must enjoy them while he can. They will soon begin to drop off. Perhaps Mr. Lick is aware that even after he has shuffled off his mortal coil he will be able in a measure to personally supervise the bestowal of his bounty. If he knows this for certain he is much more comfortable than he could otherwise be. One thing is certain viz., that Mr. Lick is dead, perfectly dead now, and that not until his body lies in the cold, cold ground will he be resurrected. Then he will have some obituaries.

Learned.

The Call of yesterday had a really useful editorial. It told people something about Tonquin where they have lately been slaughtering Christians. Very few people knew anything about Tonquin more than the fact that it is the place where Tonquin beans, which are not good to eat, but pleasant to smell, come from. The Call suggests that the Tonquinese who are at present heathens should be "Christianized" by means of shot and shell.

A Moral and Religious Order.

Mr. Roberts, in the Board of Supervisors on Monday, introduced an order to prevent immorality being talked about and blasphemy being uttered. The Call showed its disapproval of the order by publishing it in full. It is not probable that many of the members of the Board of Supervisors will be willing to earn the contempt of the thinking portion of the community by voting to restrain freedom of speech.

Matter of Fact.

Some people are not endowed with the faculty of seeing a joke. Lord Morpeth used to tell of a Scotch friend of his who, to the remark that some people could not feel a jest unless it was fired at them with a cannon, replied: "Weel, but hoo can ye fire a jest out of a cannon, mon?"

Wants to Know.

Will am Hayes, retained by Patrick Mullen is getting up an investigating committee to examine into the affairs of the Hibernia Bank. He thinks matters are managed too smoothly, and that it is time someone made a fuss.

Pretty and Appropriate.

They have a cremation club at Glenwood, Iowa, the object of which is to educate the public sentiment to a preference for the pyre. The President of the club has named his last baby "Cinderella."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

Max Adeler Explains.

I perceive that the Norwalk Gazette inquires how I pronounce my name. I suppose of course the editor must be writing a poem of which I am the hero, and he is a little uncertain about his rhymes. I have no objection to saying that if I were engaged in such work I should make Adeler rhyme with "saddler," and he is at liberty to do so if he has a saddler anywhere in his plot. He might perhaps make the scowling villain a saddler, and represent him as prowling about the country trying to strangle his enemies with a lasso composed of a hitching strap and a crupper. But this is as far as I can go. I cannot conscientiously permit him to take liberties with my character in order to make out my story. If he intends to represent me in that poem as armed with a battle-ax and forked down over a yellow horse, upon which I pursue the saddler, who is escaping with the heroine; and if he proposes to make me dash madly over a frowning cliff for the purpose of rescuing the unfortunate girl from the clutches of that diabolical saddler, he does not know me. Of my personal bravery, of course, there can be no doubt, for I was out with the Pennsylvania militia during the war, and although the enemy seemed to avoid us, I never screamed once when the man on the left in my line dropped his flint-lock musket on my toes, and he did it every day for months. But when it comes to charging over cliffs after kidnapped women, I am not there. A man must draw a line somewhere and I draw it about forty feet from the edge of that cliff. I advise the poet to let the saddler keep her and consolidate with her.

Quaint Texts.

Texts have sometimes been really used as the verbal vehicles for puns. Such was the text of him who, preaching before James the First of England and Sixth of Scotland, gave out from the pulpit the verse, "James the first and sixth: 'Nothing wavering.'" Sidney Smith preached before a corps of green-coated riflemen to the text, "I see men as trees walking;" and when he preached in Edinburgh before a congregation chiefly composed of women, he particularized the absence of the men by the stress that he laid on a word in his text, "Oh, that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness!" The text of another preacher before a congregation of fashionably-dressed ladies, was, "There appeared a wonder in heaven! a woman!" The text of a fellow of a Cambridge college, who had to preach at St. Mary's, and who was deeply in debt to the tradesmen of the town was, "Have patience with me, and I will pay you all;" but in his sermon he told them that the theme was such a large one that he could only instruct them at the present on the subject of patience, and he must defer that of the payment until a more favorable opportunity. Bentley's text, at St. Mary's, after he had been shut out of the college fly the Fellows of Trinity, was, "By the help of my God, I will climb over the wall."

Rather Risky.

Because a late French nobleman secured a rich wife through the mere incident of having his portrait on exhibition at a public gallery, portraits are being hung in every conceivable place in Paris. Men who are in need of funds are putting out their likenesses in the hope that a rich orphan will come by on the arm of her guardian and say that "the portrait of that man suits her: she will marry the original." Perhaps impecunious Frenchmen will take wives on such terms; but it is not the safest way to secure domestic happiness.

Chicago Charity.

Two young ladies of Chicago, daughters of a respectable physician there, have been arrested for carrying on a wholesale confidence game by collecting money in the name of a local orphan asylum. It is estimated that they have collected $30,000 during the year, or more, in which the game has been going. The thing worked well enough until they ran against the same victim twice, and then came the collapse.

Perhaps the ladies were half orphans and thought charity should commence at home.

Production of "The Cryptogram."

The New York Times says of the production of the new drama, entitled "The Cryptogram," recently at Niblo's Theatre, New York:

"To rehearse the incidents of 'The Cryptogram,' which was acted at Niblo's last evening, would be sheer waste of space. De Mille's novel, upon which the drama is founded, may have excellences commanding it to the patrons of what is called light literature, but if the piece presented yesterday at Niblo's is a fair specimen of what a playwright can do with a romance, the author of the story cannot have dreamed of its possible transfer to the stage. 'The Cryptogram' is a melo-drama, in which Mr. Wheelock, as a rather negative personage; Miss Rose St. Clair, as a very naughty young lady, and Miss Ione Burke as a very much persecuted maiden, walk about and gabble for three wearisome hours.

"A panorama of the Mediterranean coast, a song by Mr. James Dunn, and sundry other more or less appropriate episodes, are brought within the limits of the five acts making up the work, in which there is absolutely no redeeming feature. The performance is almost as bad as the drama; if we expect Mr. Lewis Mestayer's sketch of an American, drawn after the fashion of the Yankees described in 'Martin Chuzzlewit,' the acting is not even mediocre.

Exactly.

Muffington says that the last successful representation of "lead astray" was on Washington street near the Post Office about a week ago.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

California Theatre.

The benefit of M. Benedict, the Stage Manager, was well attended and "La Fille de Madame Angot" was never better performed. In the evening M. Duchesne had a capital house for his benefit, and "Les Pantins de Violette," and two acts of "La Perichole" were performed with much spirit. To-night which is the last but three of the season, the charming opera of "Orphee aux Enfers," will be presented.

Opera House.

The Spanish Troupe will give a performance at this house to-night for the benefit of Donna Francisca De Luque, the talented leading lady. The three act drama of "En Brazos de la Muerte" will be played and the evening's entertainment will terminate with "Salvese el Quepueda" and a Spanish ballet in which the beneficiary will execute "La Madrilena."

Maguire's New Theatre.

Charles Fechter is creating a perfect furore in "Hamlet" at this theatre. Every one who has ever seen Hamlet played is going to see Fechter play it, and every one is right in so doing. When Fechter goes we shall not look upon his like again for a long time, if ever. "Hamlet" will be retained on the stage during the present week, which is the last of Mr. Fechter's engagement. To-night, "Hamlet" will be run into four acts and the performance will be over in good time. To-morrow night Miss Lizzie Price will take a benefit.

Bella Union Theatre.

The burlesque of "Mazeppa" with Miss Lena Proctor, Miss Maggie Maguire, Miss Jennie Johnson, John Woodard, H. R. Archer, Matt Kelly and others in the cast, has made quite a hit at this house, Miss Alice Ross and Ed Murray appear nightly in "Old and Young," Cal Mandeville presents his sensation character songs, and a very bright and entertaining performance is given.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Tuers and Ned Buckley in the burlesque of "Clamest" cause shouts of laughter, Mortimore's clever sketches are always applauded, and Miss Ida May, Miss Rose Vincent and a host of others appear nightly in various specialties.

Woodward's Gardens.

A great bill is offered for Saturday and Sunday. Besides the usual performances, the famous Scotch swordsman, Borthick Reid, who cleaves an entire sheep and a bar of lead at one blow, will appear in the Claymore Manual, and Prof. McGraw in the strange feat of walking on the water. A fine Century Plant is in bloom.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Notes.

The Palace Amphitheatre is for rent for lectures, mass meetings and other purposes. The liquor dealers should secure this building for their headquarters.

E. J. Buckley has returned from Virginia City. He is engaged for the next season at the California Theatre.

E. A. Sothern and Miss Minnie Walton will arrive from Chicago to-morrow.

James A. Herne the talented comedian will arrive to-night under engagement to the management of the Bella Union Theatre.

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

The Verdict.

Half of the best-dressed gentlemen in this city would say, if asked the question where they had their clothes made, that they went to Baloun & Stouds, No. 618 Washington street, and would also advise you to go there if you wanted a perfect-fitting suit made in the latest style, from either imported or domestic goods, at the lowest price compatible with a good garment. 6-m

THE GENTLE CRAFT.

A bard is weak enough, you'll find,
A humble caligut twangler,
But for a man of simple mind,
Commend me to an angler,
He'll fish and fish the whole year round,
Devotedly fanatic,
To catch one fish that weighs a pound,
And then his joy's ecstatic,

For twelve long months for such a catch
Who'd be on banks a dangler?
But 'tis a fearful joy to snatch
To the contented angler.
And off he goes and "weighs it in"—
For breakfast has next morn it:
A cat, the thinnest of the thin,
Though fond of fish, would scorn it.

And after that he goes about
The anecdote to retail
Of how he caught that one pound trout,
With every little detail,
And rival brothers of the craft
Will listen to the story,
And puff their pipes, and round him waft
A baccy cloud of glory.

And all about the how and when
He'll argue like a wrangler,
There seems no bliss for mortal men
Like that which waits an angler.
And when he's old and bald and grey,
His children's children dun him
To tell them of that fish, and say
What great renown it won him.

More blest than men who write for books,
Of versifying mangler
(Whose lines have rhymes instead of hooks),
The simple-minded angler.
So with this epitaph no doubt
His mild existence closes—
"The man who caught the one-pound trout
Beneath this stone reposes."

A Puzzler.

The most puzzled man in England lives at Brighton. The other day he waxed at once vindictive and ingenious, and resolved to protect the sanctity of his hearth and home by an acute stratagem. In pursuance of this idea he mingled arsenic in a bottle of wine, and placed it where any burglar would see it, and, unless practical believers in total abstinence, would drink therefrom and surely die. Now the wife of this intelligent Brightonian is an elderly woman, and when she found that bottle of wine placed in a conspicuous position, she said that "that was just like John. He never did have any neatness, and she knew it when she married him." Then she took the bottle and put it in the cellar with eight dozen other bottles, and arranged them neatly in rows, and contemplated her work with innocent pride. Then she told her husband about it. Since he exhausted his vocabulary of profanity, he has been spending all his leisure in looking at those bottles, and trying to recognize the one which he prepared for the poor burglar, and unless he can solve the problem soon, he expects a brain fever.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish bock."

If one wishes to pass an hour or two pleasantly at the game of billiards, no pleasanter place can be found in the city than Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, Northeast corner Bush and Kearny streets entrance on Bush. From the window a good view can be had of two of our busiest streets Bush and Kearny. Local Option not in force; for the best of Wines, Liquors and Cigars, are served at the bar for 12½ cents. 6-x

An Indignant Critic.

Mons. Piegu, of Paris, recently wrote to the London Figaro, requesting favorable notices of a French actress about to visit England. The theatrical critic of the Figaro, however, resented the proposition with great indignation, and replied in the columns of that journal as follows: "It is, I find, Mlle. Agar, of the Theatre Francais, whom Mons. Piegu desires me to puff preliminary at no too much an article. Now Mlle. Agar is a clever and a capable artiste, and there seems no good reason why her visit to London, with a suitable company and an interesting repertoire, should not be successful. Therefore, it is that I am sorry as well as annoyed to find that she or her friends should have taken so ill-advised a step towards insuring attention for her efforts. My appreciation is, I am happy to say, not for sale, and I am not prepared on any terms to thrust Mlle. X.—as she is called in the first notice sent me—down the throat of my readers. Mons: Piegue, of the Office International, Paris, has, I am afraid, much to learn before he will be a safe counsellor for the French debutante upon the English stage. He wants me, he says, to lead off my editorial announcement by stating 'that I propose to devote to Mlle. X, whose artistic position is so important, a biographical and critical article.' This request I answer by stating that I shall do nothing of the kind, and regret that a useful actress should have preluded her London career by asking me to help degrade the art of which she is a valued representative.

Madame Doche.

Olive Logan, writing from Paris, speaks of this famous French actress as follows: "A woman is only as old as she looks, says the French proverb. By this count Madame Doche may be about thirty-five; but I do not doubt she is in reality fifty. I always think of Matilda Heron when I see Doche; for you know, of course, that the latter was the original Camille. Doche is a member of the Odeon company, and is now at this age full of youthful ambition to make a mark in the classic parts in Moliere's pieces, a thing she has never attempted before during her long years of stage life. By a temporary arrangement she is playing at the Porte St. Martin the part of the Countess in the Deux Orphelines. Still a handsome woman, a beautiful dresser, very conscientious, lady-like and dignified, Doche in an acquisition to any theatre; and when I look at her I can't help having a little sigh of regret that Matilda Heron should not be occupying a like position in New York theatres—leading a self-supporting, self-respecting and art-devoted life, such as could have no degradation in it for an artist, no matter how great a star she had once been."

Orphee aux Enfers.

This opera bouffe on May 1st attained its hundredth representation at the Gaite Theatre, Paris. On this occasion the artists employed by Offenbach, the author of the piece and the director of the theatre, presented him with a silver crown of laural leaves, on which their names were engraved. In recognition of this compliment, Offenbach gave a grand supper and ball to his artists at the Grand Hotel, Paris.

Perhaps So.

Mr. A. "Well, for my part, Deacon B, I've a good deal of charity for delinquents."

Deacon B. "That's all very fine, Mr. A, but what says the old proverb? 'He who spares the wicked injures the good.'"

Mr. A. "Maybe so, though it's my belief that there are precious few of the good injured that way now a days."

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter-House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant. 5-M

How's This?

The Bulletin on Wednesday, told a long story how the telescope man on Kearny street deceived the people by painting a comet on the object glass with phosphorous. It closed as follows:

The instrument was forcibly taken possession of by a number of the dupes, and an examination of the object lense, which was formed of common window glass, revealed a comet artistically turned on its surface with some preparation of phosphorus. The fellow escaped rough treatment by closing his exhibition for the evening, and hastily departing with his apparatus from the street.

Out comes the Call the next morning with the following:

The assertion that the man who "runs" the street corner telescope had a phosphorescent edit on of the comet emblazoned on the lens, is a pure fabrication, calculated to injure the man's business and do no one any good.

This is a pretty state of things, the Call telling the Bulletin it lies. Chang and Eng quarrelling and calling names is not a pretty sight. The Bulletin reporter no doubt was refused "the privileges of the Press" by the telescope man, and "fabricated" about him in order to get even.

A Hint.

The Call is convinced that sufficient attention is not paid to hatching salmon eggs. It says:

By employing two or three men a few months in the year, at the expense of the State, in hatching salmon to be deposited in the upper Sacramento, the value of these fisheries would be doubled.

The editors of the Call might be sent up the river during the Spring months to hatch salmon eggs. They might be more successful at this, than at hatching ideas.

Fearful to Contemplate.

It optionism carries the day, the Alta sees nothing but ruin staring us in the face. It is of the opinion that without whisky all branches of business will stagnate. There is no doubt that but for whisky the Alta would never be in its present position. Under the present circumstances it is the bounden duty of every good citizen to drink as often as he can. This is no time to shirk a drink. Drink early and drink often. This is the only way in which the war can be carried to a successful issue.

Another Chance Requested.

A young gentleman, or an elderly one, we do not remember which, after having paid his attentions to a young lady for some time, "popped the question;" the lady, in a frightened manner, exclaimed, "You scare me, sir!" The gentleman, of course, did not wish to frighten the lady, and consequently remained quiet some time, when she exclaimed, "Scare me again!" We did not learn how matters turned out, but should say that it was his turn to be scared.

New Music.

We have received from M. Gray, the publisher, "The March of the First Infantry Regiment Second Brigade N. G. C" composed by Charles Schultze. It is a spirited piece of music. It is dedicated to Col. W. H. L. Barnes. We have also "The Golden Park Schottische by Gustave Wedel.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here;
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

THE ROYAL MARRIAGE ACT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE FIGARO—SIR:—The Call of the other day editorially endorsed an absurd rumor in regard to an alleged engagement to marry between Napoleon IV. and the Princess Beatrice, Queen Victoria's youngest girl. Through your columns I beg to inform the gentleman who wrote the article, that there is a certain act of Parliament which prohibits the marriage of any member of the British Royal Family with any one who belongs to the "Holy Roman Catholic and Apostolic Church." Therefore, until Napoleon IV. becomes a pervert and embraces another religion, the assent of Parliament (which in all British Royal Marr ages is required) will be withheld. Yours Truly, W. E. D.

June 24th, 1874.

We publish this communication and regret feeling ourselves compelled to state that our correspondent (who, we believe, is a member of the legal fraternity,) is laboring under a most egregious error: the Act of Parliament to which he refers expressly sets forth that, although the House of Commons has the right of objecting to the succession to the throne of any man or woman professing the Roman Catholic religion, yet the House of Commons cannot prevent any member of the British Royal Family from legally intermarrying with anybody professing whatever religion he or she may think proper—but, in so doing, he or she virtually renounces all her or his claim to the throne. As Her R. H. Princess Beatrice and her children are very far removed from any chance of ascending the throne of Great Britain we think that there is a very small show of the matter being either publicly or privately discussed.

The Butterfly Fiend.

The Santa Cruze Sentinel says: The next Legislature should pass a law for the preservation of butterflies in Santa Cruze county. At the present time they are in danger of utter extermination. A butterfly fiend by the name of F. P. McLean, hailing from San Francisco arrived here on Saturday last. He carries strapped on his shoulders a formidable sized volume, between the leaves of which are sandwiched impaled butterflies of all nations. He also carries a knife like an Arkansas meat axe, which he uses in his botanical researches. His principal implement, however, consists of a net attached to a short handle, which he employs to hunt down the poor butterflies. Any day the fiend may be seen wildly rushing up and down our fair hills in pursuit of his victims. The frantic flourishes of his butterfly net, and the mad energy with which he throws his soul into the work, constitute a spectacle which, once seen, will never be forgotten. The butter flies are rapidly disappearing before the invasion of the butterfly fiend.

A Business Transaction.

Mr. X——, a rich banker, was talking one day in his office with one of his agents, when his little son, about thirteen years old, came in with a paper in his hand. "What do you want, my son?" asked the father. "Here are my accounts, father," said the boy. "Look over my list of expenses: Virgil (annotated) 60 cents, History of the United States (by Goodrich) one dollar, paper, one dollar and twenty cents; besides pens, ink, ruler etc., not yet set down!" "Well," said the banker," how much will all that foot up?" "Twenty-six dollars, father." "All right, here's the money." The agent touched the banker on the shoulder: "By gracious!" he cried out, "the little sharper is robbing you!" "I know that very well," replied the father, "but I cant say anything, for the boy goes through the required form!"

That's Where she Made a Mistake.

The Troy Times says: A ludicrous scene was witnessed on a Rensselear and Saratoga train the other day. A newly-married couple entered the car and took a seat. The husband wanting to smoke, left his wife and went into the smoking-car. The bride began to doze, and while she slept a stranger entered the car, and as it was crowded, quietly took a seat beside the young wife. Shortly she began to nod, and doubtless imagining that her husband was still in the seat, gently reclined toward the stranger, and soon her head fondly nestled on his breast. At this juncture the husband entered. He stood in mute astonishment in the aisle until the lady awoke, and, realizing the situation, drew back in amazement suffused with blushes. Stranger explained, husband was satisfied, and wife tried hard to appear unconcerned.

The Scissors Editor.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean says: Some people estimate the ability of a newspaper and the talent of its editor by the quantity of original matter. It is comparatively an easy task for a frothy writer to pour out daily a column of words—words upon any and all subjects. His ideas may flow in one weak, washy, everlasting flood, and the command of his language may enable him to string them together like bunches of onions, and yet his paper may be a meagre and poor concern. Indeed, the mere writing part of editing a paper is but a small portion of the work. The care, the time employed in selecting is far more important, and the tact of a good editor is better shown by his selections than anything else; and that, we know, is half the battle. But, as we have said, an editor ought to be estimated, and his labor understood and appreciated, by the general conduct of his paper—its tone, its uniform, consistent course, its aims, its management, its dignity, and its propriety. To preserve these as they should be preserved is enough to occupy fully the time and attention of any man. If to this be added the general supervision of the newspaper establishment, which most editors have to encounter, the wonder is how they find time to write at all.

The Child's Choice.

"Would my little Ezra," asked a fond mother, "like to be a missionary, and go preach to the poor, suffering little heathen?" Tears—bright, pearly drops of feeling—glistened on little Ezra's eyes, as he murmured: "Naw, I wouldn't; but I'd like to be on the perlice long enough to put a tin roof on the big lummux that stuck shoemakers' wax on my seat to-day. You hear me."

AN OPEN LETTER
From a Known Business House of this City.

TO THE PEOPLE OF SAN FRANCISCO AND State of California—As reform is now the need all over the State, and every man and woman is trying to become economical, I wish to call your attention to a particular subject, and that is, when you wish to invest a dollar to do so, and go where you will get your money's worth; when you make your purchase, go to the house that manufactures and imports the article direct, and you are sure to save money. To find such a house go to S. POPPER'S new shirt manufactory and gents' furnishing goods establishment, Nos. 628 Kearny street, between Sutter and Bush, and 627 Kearny street, between Bush and Pine, the oldest and leading shirt manufacturing establishment in the city. He don't offer to sell below cost, or retail at manufacturers' prices—that's too thin; but he can sell a better made and more perfect-fitting shirt, superior quality, at a more reasonable price than any other house in the city. The same in underwear, gents' furnishing goods, etc. Shirts made to order, and satisfaction warranted. Gentlemen consider, and please remember this, and call before purchasing elsewhere.

Maguire's New Theatre.

The performance of "Hamlet" to-night will be for the benefit of Miss Lizzie Price. The play, though performed in its entirety, is now made to occupy less time than formerly by running it into four acts. This enables the audience to get home in good time. "Hamlet" will be performed on Saturday and Sunday evenings for the last time. Mr. Fechter's engagement will close with next week.

Opera House.

Donna Francisca de Luque had quite a good house last night, when "En Brazos de la Muerte" was performed for her benefit. Both the play and the ballet which followed were much enjoyed by the audience.

California Theatre.

The opera of "Orphee aux Enfers" was splendidly performed by the Aimee Troupe last night. Mlle. Aimee made a charming Eurydice, Mons. Juteau as Orpheus sang and acted splendidly, Mlle. Stani was excellent as Diane. Duchesne as Jupiter flattered about in the most ludicrously funny manner and made a great success, Mons. Leonyer was very amusing as John Styx, and Mlle. Roland as Public Opinion did some clever acting. This evening the performance will consist of "Mons. Obenfieri" and the first and second acts of "Le Petit Faust." At the matinee to-morow "La Vie Parisienne" will be performed.

Mercantile Library Hall.

Charles Foster, the world-renowned medium, will give a public seance at the above-named hall on Sunday next at 2 P. M., under the auspices of the San Francisco Spiritualists' Union.

Bella Union Theatre.

The laughable local sketch of "The Police Court" will be presented to-night, with tableau from "The Naked Truth," H. R. Archer will sing ballads, Col. Mandeville will appear in his Budget of Fun, Miss Alice Rose in serio-comic songs, and others in various specialties. James A. Herne is underlined to appear shortly.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Mortimore and Johnny Tuers will appear to-night in the acts of "Clamsel" and "Lively Jim," Miss Lizzie Worrel and Mlle. Blanche will perform a double polka. Johnny Price in a clog dance, and a great variety of songs, acts and dances will be presented.

Woodward's Gardens.

A great bill is offered for Saturday and Sunday. Besides the usual performances, the famous Scotch swordsman, Borthick Reid, who cleaves an entire sheep and a bar of lead at one blow, will appear in the Claymore Manual, and Prof. McGraw in the strange feat of walking on the water. A fine Century Plant is in bloom.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-oj

MY OLD LOVE.

BY ARTHUR O'SHAUGHNESSY.

I made another garden, yea,
For my new love;
I left the dead rose where it lay,
And set the new above.
Why did the slumber not begin?
Why did my heart not haste?
My old love came and walked therein,
And laid the garden waste.

She entered with her weary smile,
Just as of old;
She looked around a little while,
And shivered at the cold.
Her passing touch was death to all,
Her passing look a blight;
She made the white rose-petals fall,
And turned the red rose white.

Her pale robe, clinging to the grass,
Seemed like a snake
That bit the grass and ground, alas!
And a sad trail did make,
She went up slowly to the gate;
And there, just as of yore,
She turned back at the last to wait,
And say farewell once more.

Shaking Him Down.

A lady had gone to visit a young couple of the better class of the poor. The husband being a stoker on a railway, they were above the reach or want. The visitor thought they might go to church on Sundays, and she said so to the young wife.

"Will you please walk in till I show you something?" was the woman's answer, and she conducted her visitor to the little kitchen while her husband sat by the fire. He had just come home for half an hour to have his tea. He was, of course, in his work ng clothes, and his face and hands were of deep oily black, after the manner of stokers. "Now, ma'am," said the woman, "you see that man. That's my husband; and I am bound to do a part by him, ain't I?"

"Surely," said the visitor, anxious to uphold the duties of matrimony.

"Very well, then. I pass my Sundays a washing of he! Never a blessed moment has he to wash himself through the week—out early and late, and half the night too, and blacker nor any crow all the while. Well, on Sundays it is fitting and proper that he should try to look like a Christian, if he can, so he sets me to it after we eat our little breakfast, with a bucketful of soapsuds and a scrubbing-brush, and I rubs him off and on all day, till my arms ache, and he ain't much better than he wor; and then affer we has our tea he says to me—'Come, Sally, have another try—there's a brave wench,' and I goes at him again and sluices him down till you'd think a horn nigger 'ud come out white, and, if you believe me, ma'am, when I polishes him off with a dry towel afore he goes to bed, he's only a light brown after all.'"

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

If one wishes to pass an hour or two pleasantly at the game of billiards, no pleasanter place can be found in the city than Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, Northeast corner Bush and Kearny streets entrance on Bush. Flanking a Salary Grabber.

Col. Ozro J. Dodds, late member of Congress from the First District of Ohio, tells a good story about a call he recently received at his office from a man who claimed to be an editor from Arkansas. He was a very seedy looking chap, and appeared as though he had but recently come off from about a six weeks' spree. Bowing profoundly, then striking an attitude, with one hand on his heart and the other extending a badly used plug hat, he exclaimed with a dramatic air, "Have I the honor of addressing the Honorable Ozro J. Dodds?"

Said the Colonel, "My name is Dodds, but I am no longer an honorable."

"Not an honorable? Dodds not an honorable? Now, by St. Paul, when I scan that honest face, on which all the gods at once do seem to set their seal ('Green Seal,' murmured Dodds to himself), I read nothing dishonorable."

"That's right," said Dodds, never read anything dishonorable. But to business."

"Yes, as you say, to business. I am a printer—I might say, with no unbecoming blush, an editor. I am from the noble State of Arkansaw, the only State, by the way, able and willing to support two governors at the same time. But I have been unfortunate. Much have I been tossed through the ire of cruel Juno, and—"

"Juno how it is yourself," broke in the Colonel.

"Buffeted by the world's rude storms you see me here a stranded wreck. Scarce three months past I left my office in charge of my worthy foreman, and sought the peaceful vales and calm retreats of the Muskingum Valley, where my childhood sported. Returning I stopped in Cincinna i. I fell into evil company, and—but why dwell on details? Enough that I am, that that I am, disheartened, ruined, broke! A mark for scorn to point her slow, unerring finger at. As I was about to give up in despair, having given up everything else I had, I thought of you. Sir, I am here. You have not sent for me, but I have come! Your name, sir, is known and honored from one end of this great republic to the other. It

"Glows in the stars,
Refreshes in the breeze,
Warms in the sun
And blossoms on the fees.

When the National Treasury was threatened by a horde of greedy Congressmen, you stood like a wall of adamant between the people and those infamous salary-grabers. Lend me a dollar!"

"My dear sir," the Colonel hastened to explain, "you mistake the case entirely. I was one of the grabbers."

"You were?" (grasping the Colonel's hand warmly) "so much the better! Let me congratulate you that a parsimonious public could not frighten you out of what was but a fair remuneration for your invaluable services. I am glad that your pecuniary circumstances are so much better than I supposed. Make it two dollars!"

And the Colonel did. It was the only clean thing left for him to do.

Spoiled the Effect.

There is a certain clergyman, more eminent in his day for the brilliancy of his imagination than for the force of his logic, who was once preaching on the "Ministry of Angels," and in the peroration he suddenly observed, "I hear a whisper!" The change of tone startled one of the churchwardens, who sat below, from a drowsy mood; and, springing to his feet, he cried, "It is the boys in the gallery!"

A Heavy Responsibility.

A little six-year old daughter of a Rutland clergyman watched Barnum's street parade with great interest, and finally said to her papa, "If I wasn't a minister's little girl I could go to the circus; but I suppose I must set an example to the whole church now."

JOE GINESTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Ginesta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant 5-M

FOREIGN DRAMATIC NEWS.

In London at latest dates:

The Holborn Theatre had been closed during the week, but was to reopen 30th for a performance of the "Lady of Lyons." Business had been bad there.

The music halls offered nothing new. J. K. Milburn was at the Royal, in Holborn; Fred Foster at the South London, and the Mejiltons at the Cambridge. The latter were making a big success as usual. Adelina Patti had appeared in the French opera "Les Dramens de la Couronne," at Drury Lane, with great success, as an interpolation among her Italian characters.

Miss Neilson-Lee and Miss Edith Wynne had arrived from New York. Theodore Pincus, of New York, was married 19th to the widow of S. D. Solomon, known in the profession as Miss Agnes Burdett.

Edmund Falconer has been acting with success in "Eileen Oge" at Liverpool, Eng.

Herman Vezin, a native of Philadelphia, was at our last advices, acting at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, Ireland.

The season it rapidly terminating at theatres in Paris, France, the Odeon, Ambigu, Chateau d'Eau, Menus Plesirs, Tour d'Augverne and Comique having already closed.

H. J. Byron is writing a new Irish play for J. K. Emmet.

Mr. Boucicault has been led astray again. The Hornet says; "In a weak moment he sent a check for fifty pounds to M. Feuillet, the French dramatist, from whom he adapted his last play. But M. Feuillet returns the check, and sends his agent, Michealis, present copyright law, we do not believe that a French author has any real rights in England; but if it can be shown that Mr. Boucicault represented himself as collaborating with M. Feuillet, and also as a member of the French Dramatic Authors' Society, the affair becomes very serious."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a T."
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'g
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street. The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. F. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicates a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant 5-M

These entertainments are much appreciated by the people of all nationalities and the Opera House will doubtlessly be crowded.

Those who wish to enjoy a little country air at the end of the week could not choose a finer trip than this excursion offers.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain Railroad.

NOTES.—The season at the California Theatre will commence on Monday next with E. A. Sothern supported by Miss Minnie Walton in the play of "Our American Cousin." Mr. Sothern will for the four thousand and fifty second time present the character of Lord Dundreary to the public. There is already a great demand for seats and the house will undoubtedly be crammed full.

E. A. Sothern, and charming Miss Minnie Walton arrived from Chicago by trans-continental train last night.

It is now some time since the people of San Francisco have had any minstrelsy and a brief season of this style of entertainment is sure to be enjoyed. The San Francisco Minstrels who are now on a tour through the State, will give four entertainments at the Opera House next week, viz, an evening performance on the 3rd, a matinee and evening performance on the glorious Fourth, and a final entertainment on Sunday evening. Many novelties will be presented, among them a screaming farce entitled "Local Option in San Jose." Further particulars will shortly be published in FIGARO.

George T. Evans will before long inaugurate a series of Wednesday afternoon orchestral concerts after the style of those which Theodore Thomas has made so popular in New York. The concerts will be given in Platt's Hall with an immense orchestra, and will be under the direction of Mr. Evans. The programmes will be selected from the best compositions of the best masters, and will be rendered by the best musicians in the city. Mr. Evans has been for many years connected with the Philharmonic Society of New York, and is a thorough musician. He has been for some time in San Francisco, and has made many friends who will be glad to hear that he intends remaining here. The concerts will commence in the early part of August.

New Theatre on Thursday evening of next week. A great bill will be presented by the best artistes in the city, and a new play founded on the Local Option movement will be among the attractions.

Victoria C. Woodhull, whose statements about Henry Ward Beecher, for which she has been nearly hunted to death, are now proved to be the simple truth, will deliver her final lecture in San Francisco at Platt's Hall on July 3d. She will have something to say about free speech and the Pastor of Plymouth Church.

F. W. Keene of the New York and Eastern Theatres, and Nelson Decker from Booth's Theatre, New York, are enjoying a season of rest in San Francisco, prior to commencing an engagement at the California Theatre. The season begins on Monday, but neither of these gentlemen will play in Sothern's pieces.

On Monday evening Charles Fechter will produce for the first time in California the original play of "Love's Penance," which was written expressly for him. Next week will be the last of the engagement of this wonderful artist. He will take his farewell benefit on Friday, July 3d.

John Howson, whom the wonderful healing springs of Gilroy have restored to perfect health, will make his reappearance at Maguire's New Theatre on Monday evening in "Love's Penance."

The newly organized company at the California Theatre for the next season which commences on Monday will be as follows: Miss Bella Pateman who made such a great success here at the Opera House, Robert Pateman, one of the most finished low comedians on the stage, Miss Jennie Lee, the favorite of everyone who has ever seen her on the stage, an admirable actress and pleasing vocalist, J. P. Burnett, capital in character parts and swell impersonations, T. W. Keene, who is spoken of as one of the best actors of the romantic school at present on the stage, Nelson Decker, late juvenile actor at Booth's, and much liked, Miss Ellie Wilton who never played a part in which she was not pleasing and who is a great favorite with the San Francisco public, Mrs. Sophie Edwin, the old time California actress who in her time has played many parts and is still in her prime, Mrs. Judah the best old lady actress on any stage, Miss Carrie Wyatt, who in sympathetic parts is particularly good and who is making rapid progress in her profession, E. J. Buckley, always earnest and one of the best Horatios on the stage to-day, Bill Barry who plays Shakesperian clowns in a manner which can scarcely be surpassed on any stage, John Wilson, a good Shakesperian actor and most relentless and cold blooded of villains, Henry Edwards a Shakesperian student in the best sense of the word, a true actor, a correct reader, an ornament to any stage, a man, a gentleman, one who does honor to his profession, Walter Leman, most pleasant to behold as a genial old father, Stephen Leach as a stern ditto admirable and most valuable in arranging madrigals and choruses for pieces, E. N. Thayer, reliable and careful, Henry Coad, much abused because his voice is not melodious, but always ready to do his best, Charles Henry a little inclined to posture and show off his fine figure too much, but very good in some parts, John S. Torrence, the best impersonator of Chinamen on the regular stage, J. N. Long, an ambitious actor who never plays a part without first making himself master of its meaning, has played several parts very well. Then we have Murray Woods, H. Macklin, H. Mathews, J. Ingram, Miss Bella Chapman, Miss Louise Johnstone (good in character old woman), Miss Emily Deanie, Miss Emily Stanley, Miss Jose Stanley, Miss Fanny Stanley (all pretty to look at, pleasant singers and good dancers), Miss Kitty Pell, Miss M. Murphy, Miss Nellie Feecey, Miss Ada Shattuck and clever little Tillie Darling. These will constitute the company, and with John McCullough, the proprietor and manager; Barton Hill, acting manager; and a number of stars who will follow one another in rapid succession, a splendid series of entertainments will be presented. Charles Schultz will as heretofore direct the orchestra, and the others making up the grand army necessary for the coming campaign at the California Theatre, are as follows: Stage Manager Robert M. Eberle; Scenic Artist W. T. Porter; Assistants, Forrest Seabury and T. Andrews; 1st Machinist John Torrence; 2d Machinist Robert Stackhouse; Property Man T. Gossman; Assistant Property Man J. Harrington; Costumer J. R. Paullin; Gas Engineer H. S. Marshall; Calcium Lights A. Truworthy; Prompter R. J. Preston; Treasurer T. J. French; Assistant Treasurer Chas. Schroder; and Business Manager Martin Joyce.

During the season which commences on Monday at the California Theatre, the following stars will appear: Mr. Sothern, Miss Letta, The Vokes Family, Madame Janauschek, Miss Charlotte Cushman, Miss Clara Morris, Mrs. J. B. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence, Miss Katharine Rogers, Mrs. D. P. Bowers, Mrs. F. S. Chanfrau, Mr. Frank Mayo, and Mr. Dion Boucicault.

A performance will be given by the Aimee Opera Troupe at Platt's Hall, on Monday evening, for the benefit of the French Ladies' Benevolent Society. This will be their last appearance in this city.

PACIFIC COAST DRAMATIC NEWS.

SACRAMENTO.—Victoria C. Woodhull will lecture at the Metropolitan Theatre to-night. Mlle. Marie Aimee and her French Opera Bouffe Troupe will commence a season of three nights at the Metropolitan Theatre on Tuesday evening, June 30th. On that evening, the favorite opera bouffe "La Grande Duchesse" will be performed, on the following evening "La Fille de Madame Angot," and on Thursday "Le Petit Faust."

MONTEREY.—A correspondent says:—"A dramatic company has recently been formed in Monterey—the land of beautiful shells and flowers—by D. O'Connell, a well-known writer. There is a good deal of dramatic talent in the City by the Sea, and the company will, doubtless, ere long, begin a series of pleasing entertainments." We are glad that Dan O'Connell is doing the work of an Art missionary in Monterey.

EUREKA.—Charles Vivian, assisted by Mrs. Jennie Reiffarth and Madame A. E. A. Muse, gave two parlor entertainments on the 19th and 20th inst. He is on his way to San Francisco.

STOCKTON.—Victoria C. Woodhull lectured at the theatre on Wednesday. The Leader gave a column synopsis of it. Miss Amy Stone took a benefit at the theatre on Tuesday and played in "Plot and Passion."

PORTLAND.—Maguire's California Minstrels have made a tremendous success at the Old Fine Theatre; the house is crammed nightly.

SALEM.—Mrs. Fanny Morgan Phelps and company performed at Reed's Opera House on the 22d and 23d.

VIRGINIA CITY.—The season at Piper's Opera House closed last Sunday with a benefit to E. J. Buckley. On Wednesday Dr. Haskell lectured on the Stage and Circus. B. F. Napthaly will shortly lecture on The Sensational Press.

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

In New York, "The Two Orphans," was to be the next novelty at Niblo's Garden..... At Union Square Theatre, "Peril" was to be produced on the 19th....."Aunt Lynne" was being played at Wallacks. The theatres probably closed by this time. Toole opens in August....."The Birthday of Freedom or; the Days of '76" was the afternoon bill at Wood's Museum on the 29th. "Buffalo Bill" was played in the evening.....Bryant's Opera House closed on the 27th.....The Olympic Theatre remained open with a good variety company .....At the Theatre Comique, E. T. Stetson was playing in 'Neck and Neck'..... The pantomime of "The Seven Dwarfs" was the attractions at the Bowery.....There was scarcely anything doing in theatricals, the season having closed at nearly all the theatres.

The New York Dispatch says: "Little Nell," the bright and sparkling "California Diamond," lately concluded a very successful starring tour, and has returned to the city to prepare a wardrobe and study her new play, "No Name," with which she will star during the coming season. Little Nell will probably play an engagement at one of the leading theatres in this city early in the Fall.

Miss Ada Dyas left for England on July 15th, and returns for the commencement of the Fifth Avenue regular season on August 31.

Johnny Thompson has sailed for Europe. He opens in Liverpool on the 29th. Poor Liverpool!

Boucicault is now writing a play for Edwin Adams.

Miss Charlotte Thompson will play at Union Square, commencing August 3.

Miss Clara Morris has sailed for England.

John T. Raymond opened at the Boston Museum on the 22d.

The New York Courier says: Miss Bessie Darling, the young Virginia lady who made her debut last March at the Lyceum Theatre in this city with considerable eclat has been engaged as a star actress at the California Theatre, San Francisco. Previous to her departure, she will perform several times in the Atlantic States, beginning at Newark on the 20th of this month.

Pauline Lucca so captivated a Chicago pork merchant during her recent appearance in that city that he bribed one of the scene-shifters to obtain the natty boots she wears as Mignon. He got the tiny "mud-slingers," as a Chicago scribe delicately defines them, but they cost him $100.

Dion Boucicault writes as follows as to why the New Park Theatre in New York closed: "Some time ago it was understood that the theatre was to have been opened to the public with a play in which Mr. Dion Boucicault was to take the principal part, but a few days before the arrangements were perfected Mr. Stuart learned that he could not for unexplained reasons expect Boucicault's assistance. In this emergency Mr. Fechter offered his services and they were at once accepted by Mr. Stuart. I desire to state that as far as I am concerned this statement is wholly untrue. It conveys the impression that I at the last moment left Mr. Stuart in the lurch. I did nothing of the kind. As far back as last February, on my return from California, I perceived that the proprietor of the Park Theatre had no intention of finishing the house according to the designs and in the style agreed upon when the work was commenced. Then I promptly told Mr. Stuart I would not be associated with such a cheap and mean concern. He asked me what he ought to do. I advised him not to open the theatre until autumn and employ the summer in altering blunders, refurnishing and redecorating. He agreed to follow this counsel, but subsequently changed his mind and decided upon risking a short spring season, relying on a great artist and a new play. I warned him that he was courting a failure. The disaster came to pass, and no one can regret it more than he who foresaw the danger. I had and still have a warm interest in the theatre and its manager, but so far I have had no authority, no direction and no responsibility whatever in the affair. Yours obediently, Dion Boucicault, Paris, May, 21, 1874."

Charlotta Thompson, Brooklyn theatre, 27th.

Augusta Dargon sailed 13th for Ireland, her native land.

Mrs. Jean Maria Davenport-Lander sailed for England recently.

The Sunday Mercury is becoming very critical. It should strive to be correct. In a recent issue it said:

The local dramatic scribes who sporadically flounders in a sea of uncertainty regarding theatrical news continue to announce the "correct" list of the company engaged to appear in "Caste," at the Union Square Theatre on the 17th. The joke will be apparent to the readers of the Mercury, which has already published accurate information of the non-production of the play. These ambitious young people who, "as usual, give reliable news in advance of all other papers," will wake up in a month or two and discover that Caste will not be played at all.

A little lower down in the same column we find the following:

Ada Gilman will personate Esther Kosles in "Caste" at the Union Square Theatre, commencing June 17.

This rather spoils the point of the Mercury's criticism of the critics.

Mrs. F. W. Lander, under the direction of Frank Lawlor, will begin her professional tour of the United States in September, supported by several eminent actors.

The New York Clipper of the 20th says: W. A. Mestayer and Mr. Marble arrived from San Francisco, during the past week.

Hussey's Australian and California Constellation, now traveling in Canada, is composed of the following artists: The Rosario gymnatic quartet—Theodore Leonie, Ernest and Mlle. Alice, Miss Blanche Clifton, vocalist; the Arnold Brothers—William Amos and Frank—acrobatic, song and dance artists; Sam Collins, Dutch comique; H. Grant, character actor; Frank Hussey, comedian; and a brass and string band. H. M. Buttle is advance agent.

The Evening "Publican."

A paper devoted to the interests of the liquor dealers has made its appearance. It says:

Those who come to the surface of such ebullitions and are twirled along its thin margins, glittering for a moment in this offensive abnormal vertebratal flow, are of that species which humanity would never hear of were it not that they join and rush into the current in order that perchance by some accident they may be seen of man. Did they not adopt this plan the weight of their own invertebrate capacity would leave them in their natural habitation—among the protoplasm of the bottom.

Under these circumstances there can be no danger of the Local Optionists carrying the day in San Francisco. People are not going to run the risk of being called protoplasms and having their vertebratal flow criticised.

New Veins Required.

The New York Graphic says: It is time that Bret Harte struck a new vein; the old one is worked out. Ditto with John Paul. Monotony is the bane of life. Artemus Ward died just in time; so did John Phœnix before him. Doesticks had the sense some time ago to dry up; Good Philander! Mark Twain is new every morning and fresh every evening. Moreover, he loves his public and has some clemency towards it. Josh Billings continues to interest us all, but he ought to have found out long ago that bad spelling is no aid to him any more than it was to the "Disbanded Volunteer," who, poor fellow, has lately gone to where spelling, one way or the other, is of small account.

Passing Them In.

The Courier-Journal says. The Philadelphia bar has been passing resolutions on the death of one of its members. Such resolutions are never passed because they make interesting reading. They originate in an insane notion, entertained by nearly all lawyers, that when a member of the legal fraternity applies to St. Peter for admission to that place where lawyers are not generally supposed to abide, a copy of the resolutions passed at a "meeting of the bar" is equivalent to a free ticket.

Girl's Rights.

The noble nature of the male biped has been strikingly illustrated at Rochester, N. Y. The local police prohibited the little boys from playing ball and flying kites on the street. These ingenious and ingenuous youths now allow the little girls to elevate the aerial kite and punch the elastic ball, while they sit upon the edge of the pavement and enjoy the sport. This plan has its advantage in warm weather.

A Live Lecturer.

B. F. Napthaly has been invited to deliver a lecture on "Live Newspapers" in several town in the interior. The public have a passion for knowing what is going on behind the scene. Mr. Napthaly's experience will prove amusing and instructive, and we have no doubt he will draw crowded houses.

DROP IN AND SEE TUTTLE AND GALE AT

Snoozer and His Hose.

A man living on Mission street, not over a thousand yards from the Mint building, whose name our reporter, after a diligent search in the directory, had not found, but which is supposed to be Snoozer, went home last evening filled up to the collar with benzine. Feeling rather "warm for the season," Mr. Snoozer took off his coat and boots, put on his slippers, and getting the garden hose, went out to sprinkle the street, so as to make things cool around there. Now, it takes a quick, discerning, calculating eye, and a steady hand to properly manipulate a hose in the daytime. At night the difficulties are multiplied. But Mr. Snoozer's mind was simply on the subject of sprinkling. He gave the hydrant wrench several twists, and had on a full head.

After a few crackles and spirts a steady stream was let fly right on the boots and white linen pants of a man with a red rosebud on the left lapel of his coat, who was coming up from a call on Fourth street. The man stopped suddenly in surprise, and Snoozer, noticing the mishap, in the true spirit of a thoroughbred gentleman, advanced to render an apology, when the nozzle was turned a quarter of an inch to the larboard, and poured in a stream right against the stranger's immaculate bosom. The latter might have got red hot at this treatment, and shown fight, were it not impossible to do so under the cooling influences brought to bear, and to avoid disaster, the rosebud and linen pants popped around the corner into an alley.

Mr. Snoozer was then proceeding quietly to cool off the bricks of the pavement, when a gentleman with two ladies, two shawls, and one sore boil on his arm, walked up from Woodward's Garden. To prevent another catastrophe, the hoseman turned the spirting apparatus toward the open street, without the least intention of pouring about four gallons of Spring Valley water down the backs of a lady and gentleman who were riding by in a tilted-top buggy. The gentleman, in words usually expressed in print in dashes, told of his displeasure, and uttered threats against Snoozer's life. Mr. Snoozer said it was purely accidental—that he was willing to take it all back—that there was no sense in crying over spilled water.

While thus engaged in an explanation, he was perfectly oblivious of the nozzle in his hand. He was as innocent as an unborn babe of knowing that a stream, running at the rate of forty knots an hour, was sailing through the open window of a second-story bedroom in the adjoining house, where a man and his wife were sleeping. He never dreamed of such a thing until female shrieks were heard and a man in white raiment appeared at the front window and fired off seven shots from a revolver. Then Mr. Snoozer thought he would shut off steam. But he had mislaid the wrench. He, however, kept the gathering mob at bay until his wife rushed out, hauled him into the house, and prevented riot and bloodshed No arrests.—

Breaking it Gently.

"When the lamented Judge Bagley tripped and fell down the Court House stairs and broke his neck," says Mark Twain in the Galaxy, "it was a great question how to break the news to poor Mrs. Bagley. But finally the body was put into Higgins' wagon, and he was instructed to take it to Mrs. B., but to be very guarded and discreet in his language, and not to break the news to her at once, but do it gradually and gently. When Higgins got there with his sad freight, he shouted till Mrs. Bagley came to the door, the he said, 'Does the widow Bagley live here?' The widow Bagley? No, sir!' 'I'll bet she does. But have it your own way. Well, does Judge Bagley live here?' 'Yes, Judge Bagley lives here.' 'I'll bet he don't. But never mind—it ain't for me to contradict. Is the Judge in?" "No, not at present.' 'I jest expected as much. Because, you know—Jake hold o' sothin', mum, for I am going to make a little communication, and I reckon maybe it'll jar you some. There's been an accident, mum, I've got the Judge curled up out here in the wagon—and when you see him you'll acknowledge yourself that an inquest is about the only thing that could be a comfort to him.

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Porter-House Steaks and Oysters in every style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant. 5-M

Giddens, Frank Rea, Mrs. Frank Rea, John J. Wilkes, Miss Marry Wells and Rillie Deaves. The present week is the last of the engagement of Mr. Fechter. He will take a farewell benefit on Friday next.

California Theatre.

To-night the new dramatic season at this house will commence, and E. A. Sothern will appear in his world renowned character of Lord Dundreary, in "Our American Cousin." Miss Minnie Walton whose lovely face has been turned by the public, will play Georgina. Robert Pateman will appear as Asa Trenchard, Miss Ellie Wilton as Florence Trenchard, and sprighly Miss Jennie Lee as Mary Meredith. The rest of the cast appears on our first page. The demand for reserved seats has been large and there will undoubtedly be an immense house.

The San Francisco Minstrels.

This troupe comprising many of the old time minstrels, having returned to this city after a most successful season, will give four entertainments at the Opera House commencing on Friday evening next. There will be a grand Fourth of July matinee immediately after the procession. The bill for the opening night will comprise a lively first part, an olio of songs, acts and dances, and the new play entitled "Local Option, or The Oakland Crusaders," the "Japanese Dwarf Tommy," only 13 inches high. "The Stage Struck Nigger," and the favorite specialty of "Old Black Joe." The troupe will doubtless draw crowded houses.

Benefit to Madame Duret.

At the benefit to Madame Duret which is to come off at the Opera House on Thursday evening, George D. Chaplain will appear in his great burlesque of "Norma." A feature of the entertainment will be the production of a new comedy entitled "The Coming Woman, or The Crusaders," adapted and localized for the occasion by G. S. Densmore.

Platt's Hall.

Victoria C. Woodhul who has got into much trouble by telling the truth, but seems determined to persist in doing so, will deliver her final lecture at the above named hall, on Friday evening, July 3d. The title of the lecture will be "The Naked Truth," and Mrs. Woodhull will speak from her personal knowledge of the acts of Henry Ward Beecher, which are at present causing so much talk.

Bella Union Theatre.

To-night in addition to many other attractions that very clever Irish comedian James A. Herne will make his first appearance at this theatre in W. R. Flord's comic drama in two acts entitled "Handy Andy," Mr. Herne will be supported by Col. Mandeville, Miss Jennie Johnson, John Woodard and others whose names are published on our first page. A great variety of acts, songs and dances will make up an extraordinarily attractive evening's entertainment.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Miss Carrie Willis and Miss Ida Fisk are the latest additions to the company at this House. They will appear to-night in conjunction with Johnny Thers, Ned Buckley and many others.

FINE ART SALE.—A very choice collection of pictures numbering nearly seventy works is now on view at H. N. Newhall & Co.'s Rooms, Sansome street. These are from the easels of Messrs E. G. Holdredge and H. R. Bloomer, and embrace views on all parts of the coast and some few Eastern subjects. The list includes many sketches and studies from nature. These young California artists intends starting for Europe immediately for purposes of study, and there can be no doubt that as both are talented, ambitious and industrious artists, their works will have an increasing value. The collection will be open to Wednesday, July 1st, the day of sale.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. As your may be profitably spent here.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Gorvillo keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Night to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

GEESE.

ADDRESSED TO PHILLIS AND CORYDON.

Here much love, and there but little,
Here a flame and there a flicker;
Maiden, lovers' vows are brittle;
How old folks can fret and bicker,
Warning you to think of this—
Hark! the foolish gosling's hiss!

Love stays not at fever heat;
Summer turns to winter snows;
April blossoms, under feet,
Are all trodden ere June glows;
Warning you to think of this—
Hear the mocking gander's hiss!

Hear that couple jar and jangle;
They were once as fond as you.
Lovers' knots are too apt to tangle;
One day you may learn to rue.
Cynics warning you of this—
Hark! the wise geese, how they hiss!

Never heed the spiteful creatures,
Press the lip and clasp the hand?
Gaze upon each other's features,
Wander in your Fairyland,
Never doubt you're right in this,
Though the silly goslings hiss.

A Tough Customer.

The following story is told on an old-time "local" of Cincinnati, who has gone to that undiscovered country from whose bourn no local returns, any sooner than other people. He had induced a tailor to trust him for a suit of clothes. After considerable time had elapsed the tailor called on him and presented the bill for payment.

"That bill isn't right," said the local, after glancing at it.

"What's the matter with it?" asked the man of tape and shears.

"Did't have any coat. Never ordered a coat. I got a pair of pants and a vest, but no coat."

"Certainly, you had a coat. I made you a whole suit, all off one piece."

"You tailors are all off a piece. I'll pay you for vest and pants, but I'll be hanged if I'll pay you for a coat', cause I didn't have one.'

"Well," said the tailor, glad to get something on the bill, "pay me for the vest and pants."

"Now you're talking sense," said the picker-up of city items; "come Saturday with the bill made out right, and I'll settle it."

Saturday came and with it the tailor, bringing a bill for vest and pants. Local looked at it, then burst out: "What robbers you tailors are! Here you've got me charged with vest and pants. I remember the vest very well, but you never made a pair of pants for me in all your life—at least, I never ordered you to."

"Well, confound it, pay me for the vest, and I'll say no more about it."

"All right," said the local, "drop in Wednesday and I will settle for the vest."

The tailor did drop in on Wednesday, with a bill for the vest. As soon as the local saw him, he sprang to his feet with an impatient air, thrust his hand into his vest pocket, bringing out a small roll of scrip, and exclaimed, "See here, Sam Thomas, tell me how much that cotton socks was, and I'll pay the bill. I'm tired of having you running here every day for that little account. Tailoring's dull, ain't it?"

Sam went away, sorrowing, for he was a man of great possessions—in bills.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at Tribe by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
Only when the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a T."
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our Wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins in fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again,
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.
CHARLES HAAKE, Proprietor.

One Peculiarity of Love.

At first, it surprises one that love should be made the principal staple of all the best kinds of fiction; and, perhaps, is is to be regretted that it is only one kind of love that is chefly depicted in works of fiction. But that love itself is the most remarkable thing in human life there cannot be the slightest doubt. For see what it will conquer. It is not only that it prevails over selfishness, but it has had the victory over weariness, tiresomeness and familiarity.

When you are with a person loved, you have no sense of being bored. This humble and trivial circumstance is the great test, the only sure abiding test of love. With the persons who do not love you are never supremely at your ease. You have some of the sensation of walking upon stilts.

In conversation with them, however much you admire them, and are interested in them, the horrid idea will cross your mind of "What shall I say next?" Converse with them is not perfect association. But with those you love, the satisfaction in their presence is not unlike that of the relation of heavenly bodies one to another, which in their silent revolutions, lose none of their attractive power. The sun does not talk to the world, but it does attract it.

Resting One's Bones.

"Well, missus, I's going to leave you." said Molly to her mistress, whom she had loved and grown fat with for a good many years. "Going to leave me, Molly? Why, where are you going?" "O, I's going to get married; I've worked long enough, and I's going to rest my bones." Of course Mrs. Jones could make no objection to this common and natural female frailty. So Molly went and nothing was heard of her for a year or two, when she came back, poor emaciated, having lost her husband, and all the rest of the ills human nature is heir to having fallen upon her. Mrs. Jones was much surprised to see her coming, and said to her: "Well, Molly, have you rested your bones?' "Golly, missus, I's rested my jaw bones, and dem's all the bones I've rested.'

True Enough.

The refusal of Mr. Edwin Booth to play for a recent charitable benefit is boomerang conduct. Mr. Booth as a stock actor and then as a star has probably levied more contributions upon the public than almost any actor going. If he is deaf to the appeals of charity now he is ungrateful beyond precedent. No man before the public to-day has less reason to disregard the opinion of the public than Edwin Booth, for the public has been charitable beyond precedent to him.

Sympathy from the East.

The New York Dispatch says:

Out in California they have a man named Lick. Now, Lick is a rich old fellow, and generous, too, so the other day he presented about two million of dollars to the State in different benefactions. This was very noble conduct on the part of Mr. Lick, and, of course, he has received much praise. This was but right. But now the poets have got after him, and are calling him all sorts of names, and likening him to everything on the face of the earth, from a volcanic mountain to a modest hollyhock. Mr. Lick says if he had known what was coming he would have reflected long before giving away his money. He's in doubt as to whether he has done most good or harm by his benefactions. He is aware that many will benefited by his money; but he does not know how many will be driven to madness by the efforts of the word tortures of America.

Mr. Lick is at present pretty comfortable. FIGARO went for the first poet who went for Lick and has succeeded in choking off the other seventeen hundred and thirty-four whose names are to be found in Langley's Directory. They are discouraged.

What Good?

The following editorial note appears in the Alta of yesterday:

It would appear from the recent reports by telegraph that hydrothobia is prevailing among the dogs in the East to a very alarming extent, and fatal results are inevitable where persons are bitten by rabid dogs. The question naturally arises, of what good are dogs to mankind, anyhow? Nine out of ten will say they are utterly worthless, and the balance will hang to their curs as pets. The world would be better off without them.

We suppose that nine out of ten gentlemen would pronounce the author of the above a fool, and wonder what on earth he was created for. Any man who asks of what good are dogs to mankind? must be a very useless sort of animal himself.

The Procession.

Grand Marshal Norcross posted the following line of march in his Head Quarters this morning. It will be seen that the march will be a long one and that the line will have to be formed early in the morning and very promptly to get through in time for the exercises, which will come off at the Horticultural Hall. The Procession will form on Second street, thence proceed to Market, to Valencia, countermarch by the right to Montgomery, to Pacific, to Kearny, to Broadway, to Powell, to Pacific, to Stockton, to Washton, to Kearny, to Geary, to Stockton, to Horticultural Hall, where the column will be dismissed.

New Music.

We have received from the publisher M. Gray, the following new music: "My Glory" a song by George Scherer, composed by Oscar Weil; "When I Am Dead," ballad composed by Oscar Weil; "The Frolicsome Widow of Ballymeerag," a ballad written and composed by J. McCulloch, and "Oh Don't We Cut a Dash," song and dance composed for Welch and Rice, music by Louis Bodecher, words by John Guerin.

SAN JOSE REDEEMED.

The Local Optionists afflicted San Jose on Saturday last. Poor San Jose! The only bright spots in that pretty, but dismally dull city, are the saloons where genial barkeepers smilingly dispense those inspiriting fluids which cure ennui and banish the blues. Without these symposia, San Jose would be socially a dreary waste. The ministerial tea parties, and the lyceum socials are most lugubrious affairs. Five cents worth of tea, two cents worth of toast and half a dozen strawberries, do not have the effect of raising a man's mind to a condition of wild hilarity. After a stranger has been in San Jose three hours he realizes that he must either take several drinks or commit suicide. If he had been deprived of the privilege of taking drinks, the Coroner's office would have had to be open night and day. If ever there was a town in the world where a saloon is haven of refuge, it is San Jose. The farmers when they come into town do feel a sort of glimmering ray of sociability warm up their souls, and if they don't ask a man directly to drink, they are at least willing to shake for the drinks. Had the saloons of San Jose been closed all sociability (except that abominable tea and toast sociability which is a hollow mockery) would have died out and the horny-handed tillers of the soil would become more grinding and penurious than ever. All good fellows and jolly companions last week invoked Bacchus and all the merry spirits who dwell in the juice of the grape, and the essence of the grain, to inspire and aid the people of San Jose in their fight against fanaticism, which they waged. We state as an axiom, that the average man could not exist over two weeks in San Jose, without the aid of alcoholic stimulant, and if he survived that period, he would surely celebrate the event, by becoming inebriated. Hence, we rejoice that, in San Jose, the Local Optionists were defeated.

The Safe Deposit Company.

The Alta this morning says in relation to this new and useful project that "the books of subscription to the stock of the Safe Deposite Company will be opened to-morrow, at ten A. M., at 805 California street, a number of applications were made yesterday, and the stock promises to be a favorite one for investment. The fact that no contingency can occur whereby the stockholder can lose, is a matter of importance, the basis being first-class real estate, paying eight per cent. on the capital, without the addition of the rental of the Safe Deposit Company's 4,600 small safes, which it is believed will bring up the revenue to fifteen per cent. The President and Directors are among the soundest men in the community, and the organization has the hearty good will of the public.

J. L. Toole.

Mr. J. L. Toole has taken passage for himself and suite in the White Star Line, and will arrrive in New York about the end of July. His farewell benefit at the Globe Theater, London, was quite an ovation; and after the play the members of C. H. Russell's Temple Club entertained him at what was called a supper, but which bore a wonderful resemblance to a first-class banquet. There were some fifty gentlemen present, most of whom are connected with wit and literature. Among the guests was the comedian Florence, who was radiant and happy, as usual.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin, Saturday, April 4th, 1874.]

During the last few years the great march of improvement has centered on Market Street The Grand Hotel, the elegant building constituting the "Nucleus," Bancroft's magnificent structure, and many others in the immediate vicinity, have given a marvelous impetus to the growth and prosperity of that part of the city.

The Palace Hotel, with many other projected improvements, all point with unerring certainty where the great tide of trade will hereafter flow. Numerous wholesalers and a large number of retail merchants have selected Market street as the basis of their trade, believing it to be the main artery of San Francisco. To obtain a good frontage on this thoroughfare seems now impossible, as nearly every store, whether modern or old fashioned, has a rush of applicants. Mr. P. Beamish having thoroughly studied this question of location, some years ago secured one of the elegant stores under the Nucleus, and he has recently rented the one adjoining, thereby giving his premises a frontage of 38 feet on Market street by 18 feet on Third, or, we might state, almost the entire ground floor of the Nucleus Hotel. We had the pleasure yesterday of examining his varied and extensive stock, consisting of the most complete and well selected line of gentlemen's Furnishing Goods to be found in this market. We also examined a very large and fine assortment of Clothing, both of foreign and domestic material, embracing every fashion and style suitable for the present season.

Mr. Beamish has never carried an inferior line of goods since he has been in business, and his success as a merchant is owing entirely to the fact that he treats his customers fairly; consequently they renew their patronage. In some of our stores, a buyer of clothing or underwear receives the same treatment at the hands of a certain class of shopkeepers, as unsophisticated countrymen daily experience on Chatham street, New York. This mode of fleecing the public by guaranteeing domestic goods for genuine Scotch tweeds or west England cloths, has aroused the just indignation of our honorable merchants.

Mr. Beamish is foremost in the ranks to lead public opinion, and has ever made it his study to carry out his representations. So strictly is everything conducted in his establishment, that the merest novice can implicitly rely upon receiving a just return for his expenditure. No second price is taken on purchases, which indicate a high sense of business honor. His entire stock, from the finest beaver or cassimere to a handkerchief or a package of hose, is sold at a fair living price; and an offer under that rate is respectfully but emphatically declined. This one price system is the only standard of commercial honor. We know such ethics rarely find acceptance with a certain class of business men in San Francisco and other large cities, but still they that strictly adhere to them invariably succeed, while the others enjoy but a modicum of patronage. We believe that the mercantile classes of this country will soon be aroused to the necessity of uniformity of prices, and admit the correctness of the doctrine merely as a business expediency, if not prompted by a higher motive. It was not our intention when we commenced to write this article to assume the attitude of a moralist, but we think a word in season may operate beneficially on quite a number of our shopkeepers and raise their notions of correct dealing to a higher standard. We would, therefore, cheerfully recommend all our friends and readers to call upon Mr. Beamish and inspect his fine and matchless stock of Furnishing Goods and Clothing, and we feel persuaded that the correctness of our advice will be fully indorsed by their experience.

JOE GIUSTA'S Restaurant, at 105 California Market, has been long and favorably known by the public as a place where nice Chops, Port r-House Steaks and Oysters in eve y style could be had. A short time since, Mr. Giusta made an addition of a whole floor to his place, so that he could accommodate families. His restaurant, as now constructed, can well be called a family restaurant 5-M

FOURTH OF JULY!

HEADQUARTERS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, 605 Clay street, near Montgomery.

THE COMMITTEE ON INVITATIONS ARE now sending out invitations to the numerous Orders, Societies, Organizations, etc., in this city AND CITY OF OAKLAND, to join in the Procession on the approaching Anniversary of our National Independence. Fearing, however, that some may be inadvertently overlooked and that perhaps there may be thereby engendered a feeling that an act of injustice had been committed the Committee desires thus publicly to extend a cordial and heartfelt invitation to all organized bodies in the city, and in the CITY OF OAKLAND, to take part in the celebration of the Nation's Birthday. A splendid procession is already assured. Let all join it in the spirit in which this invitation is tendered, and it will be a triumph surpassing all former celebrations of the day in this city. An early response is especially requested, so that the Grand Marshal may be able to assign the bodies accepting, their appropriate positions in the line.

It is proposed to organize a company of "ANTIQUE AND HORRIBLES," to take part in the Procession. All desiring to join will please communicate with the Chairman of the Invitation Committee.

AN OPEN LETTER
From a Known Business House of this City.
TO THE PEOPLE OF SAN FRANCISCO AND State of California—As reform is now the word all over the State, and every man and woman is trying to become economical, I wish to call your attention to a particular subject, and that is, when you wish to invest a dollar to do so, and go where you will get your money's worth; when you make your purchase, go to the house that manufactures and imports the article direct, and you are sure to save money. To find such a house go to S. POPPER'S new shirt manufactory and gents' furnishing goods establishment, No. 317½ Kearny street, between Sutter and Bush, and 317 Kearny street, between Bush and Pine, the oldest and leading shirt manufacturing establishment in the city. He does offer to sell below cost, or retail at manufactory prices—there's no shirking; but he can sell a better made and more perfect-fitting shirt, superior quality, at a more reasonable price than any other house in the city, the same in underwear, gents' furnishing goods, etc. Shirts made to order, and satisfaction warranted. Gentlemen coming to the city please remember this, and call before purchasing elsewhere.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

California Theatre.

Those cheerful individuals who prophesied that Mr. Sothern could not possibly play as successful an engagement this year as he did last year, must have opened their eyes at the audience present last night. The receipts, instead of falling short, exceeded those of the opening night of the former season by nearly a hundred dollars. "Our American Cousin" was splendidly put on the stage and admirably acted. Mr. Sothern received a hearty greeting on making his appearance, and Miss Minnie Walton was welcomed back to the California Theatre stage in the most enthusiastic manner. Of Mr. Sothern's Lord Dundreary we need say nothing, save that it made the audience laugh until they were tired, and applaud until their hands were sore. Many new points were effectively brought out last night. Miss Minnie Walton, as Georgina, looked as lovely as ever, and acted the part capitally, Miss Ellie Wilton was thoroughly at home in the character of Florence Trenchard, and Miss Jennie Lee played the part of Mary Meredith in a delightfully natural and unaffected style; she is bound to be a great favorite at the California Theatre. Robert Pateman in Asa Trenchard, had an extremely difficult role to play, and deserves credit for not over-acting it. It's a b-b-beatht of a part for any but a born Down-Faster to play. E. J. Buckley played the part of Lieut. Vernon well as ever, Walter M. Leman did some good acting as Sir Edward Trenchard, and John Wilson as Richard Coyle was extremely effective. Lord Dundreary will hold nightly levees until further notice. There will be a Dundreary Fourth of July matinee.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Charles Fechter never acted better in his life than he did last night in "Love's Penance," which, all the idiots of the press to the contrary, we pronounce a decidedly good play. Mr. Fechter does not appear to as good advantage in any other character in his repertoire as he does in that of Karl. The plot is as follows: Karl (Fechter), a medical student, has married Clarisse (Miss Lizzie Price), thinking that she is a widow, whose husband, Rocklane (E. Arnot), has been drowned at sea. After the couple have enjoyed a few months of wedded bliss, news come that Rocklane escaped drowning when his vessel was wrecked, and has returned home. Karl and Clarisse with their child try to avoid a meeting with the returned husband. Shambear (John Howson), an old servant of Karl's mother, comes in search of the lost son, and begs him to return home. The husband of Clarisse, a cold stern man appears on the scene and claims his wife, Clarisse swoons, Karl offers Rocklane any satisfaction he chooses to demand. Rocklane declines the usual "satisfaction;" he only claims what the law will give him. He never loved his wife, but she was his by law. The child is by the law of France his, he being the husband of its mother. He takes the child and Clarisse dies. Shambear follows him and in the next act we find Clara (Miss Lizzie Price), aged nineteen, living at the chateau of Rocklane, under the protection of old daddy Shambear. Rocklane only visits them once in two or three years. Clara has been brought up to consider Rocklane her father, but she cannot overcome her aversion for him. Shambear wishes to see her married to Frank (Charles Edmonds), whom she has long loved. He arranges the match to his own satisfaction, but Rocklane who arrives just as the lovers have plighted their troth, refuses his consent and orders that Frank be refused admission should he ever call again. Clara faints (evidently both her mother and herself are troubled with disease of the heart), and a strange doctor who has come to the house with Frank enters the room. It is Karl. He recognizes his daughter by her likeness to her mother and Shambear entering the room confirms him in his hope that he has found his child. Rocklane enters and orders Karl away. Karl remains by the couch of his seemingly dying child and says, "There are two men you cannot drive from the bedside of the dying—the priest and the doctor. I am a doctor. I shall remain." In the next act we find Clara restored to health. Karl pleads with Rocklane to gain his consent to the union between Clara and Frank, but in vain. The long delayed duel takes place and Karl is mortally wounded. Clara is supposed to be killed by the shock. Karl in a dying condition staggers to her bedside, finds she is not dead, bleeds her and restores her to life. As he dies he says to Rocklane who is now humbled and penitent, "Once more I restore her to you, alive." Rocklane says not to me, but to him, pointing to Frank, Karl dies and the curtain falls. Mr. Fechter did some wonderful acting as Karl, Miss Lizzie Price won considerable applause as Clarisse and Clara, and John Howson in the character of the pretended cynic Shambear acted splendidly. Mr. Howson seems to be able to take in the whole range of the drama. Charles Edmonds acted the part of Frank, well, and E. Arnott as Rocklane, perfectly realized the character of the cold hard-hearted, haughty man who would sacrifice hearts to heal his wounded "honor." "Love's Penance" which should be witnessed by all who wish to see Fechter in one of his greatest roles will be repeated to-night.

Benefit to Madame Duret.

At the benefit to Madame Duret which is to come off at the Opera House on Thursday evening, George D. Chaplain will appear in his great burlesque of "Norma." A feature of the entertainment will be the production of a new comedy entitled "The Coming Woman, or The Crusaders," adapted and localized for the occasion by G. B. Densmore.

Platt's Hall.

Victoria C. Woodhull who has got into much trouble by telling the truth, but seems determined to persist in doing so, will deliver her final lecture at the above-named hall, on Friday evening, July 3d. The title of the lecture will be "The Naked Truth," and Mrs. Woodhull will speak from her personal knowledge of the acts of Henry Ward Beecher which are at present causing so much talk.

Bella Union Theatre.

James A. Herne made a decided success at this house last night, when he appeared in the play of "Handy Andy." He was ably supported by Miss Jennie Johnson as Gonah Rooney, John Woodard as Squire O'Grady, and others in the characters which are specified on our first page. This piece will be repeated to-night, with a capital first part and olio of acts, songs and dances, in which H. B. Archer, Cal Mandeville and others take part:

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Opera House.

The San Francisco Minstrels will open here on Friday night, in a big bill, which includes several new features. One will be a Local Option piece in which Sally Smart and other Oakland Crusaders will appear. The celebrated Japanese Dwarf, only 13 inches high, will also appear. The Minstrels will give a matinee on the Fourth, immediately after the procession passes through Kearny street. On Sunday evening the much talked of Challenge Dances for the Championship and Silver Medals will come off.

FINE ART SALE.—A very choice collection of pictures numbering nearly seventy works is now on view at H. N. Newhall & Co.'s Rooms, Sansome street. These are from the easels of Messrs R. G. Holdredge and H. B. Bloomer, and embrace views on all parts of the coast and some few Eastern subjects. The list includes many sketches and studies from nature. These young California artists intends starting for Europe immediately for purposes of study, and there can be no doubt that as both are talented, ambitious and industrious artists, their works will have an increasing value. The collection will be open to Wednesday, July 1st, the day of sale.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Our American Cousin.

"Our American Cousin" was acted for the first time on any stage at Laura Keene's Theatre (now the Olympic) New York, Oct. 18, 1858, and was cast as follows: Asa Trenchard, Joseph Jefferson; Lord Dundreary, E. A. Sothern; Sir Edward Trenchard, Edwin Varrey; Lieutenat Vernon, Milnes Levick; Captain de Boots, Mr. Clinton; Coyle, J. G. Burnett; Able Murcot, C. W. Couldock; Binney, Charles Peters; Buddicomb, Mr. McDonall; Florence Trenchard, Laura Keene; Mrs. Mountchessington, Miss Mary Wells; Augusta, Effie Germon; Georgina, Miss Sothern: Mary Meredith, Sara Stevens; Sharp, Miss Flynn; Skillat, Mrs. Levick.

A Good Idea.

Miss Emily Faithfull is about to start a newspaper devoted to the interest of females engaged in trades and professions, entitled Women and Work, which, she says, has been suggested by seventeen years' experience respecting the wants and difficulties of women in their hard struggle for subsistence, and it aims at no higher success than to smooth the way for enlarged spheres of occupation, to secure fair play and equal treatment in the practical affairs of life.

Perhaps.

Bombardio looked languishingly upon her and heaved a deep sigh. Then pressing his hand upon his bosom,, with beseeching gaze and with a writhing almost of torture, he exclaimed: "Ah, sweet lady, if this be not true love I feel, what can it be?" "Perhaps," replied the beauty, with utmost innocence of expression, "something bites you."

Reckoning Him Up.

The editor of the San Bernardino Guardian feels impelled to describe the rival editor of that town as "an editorial empiric—a newspaper quack; a man without education, without courage, without honor—a drifting, mental imbecile, a slandering falsifier, a rambling adventurer—a creature—a thing—content to live on family charity."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins'd
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again,
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.
CHARLES HAAKE, Proprietor.

If one wishes to pass an hour or two pleasantly at the game of billiards, no pleasanter place can be found in the city than Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, Northeast corner Bush and Kearny streets entrance on Bush. A Temperance Song.

The latest temperance song is said to be the following, as sung in the saloons: "Farewell, drinks, so nigh and handy; farewell, rum and gin and brandy; farewell, empty pots and kettles: farewell cupboards without "vittles:" farewell, rooms free to all weathers; farewell beds which have no feathers; farewell floors that need a swap file; farewell yards that have no wood-pile farewell faded vests and and breeches; farewell coats more holes than stiches; farewell hats that have no rims on; farewell faces red as crimson; farewell tubs that have no bacon, farewell ways that I have forsaken; farewell broken chairs and tables; farewell dwellings worse than stables; farewell oaths that I have spoken; farewell vows that I have broken; farewell landlords and bartenders; farewell all blue-devil senders.
